The Circus Coming.

Batcheller & Doris' Great Inter-ocean Circus will visit Plainfield on Tuesday, August 23d, and give an afternoon and evening performance. Full particulars next week.

Wedding Cards.

Wedding Invitations, Visiting and Mourning cards of all the latest designs in engraving promptly furnished at The Constitutionalist office, where books of elegant samples may be seen.

The T. A. B. Excursion.

The members and friends of the Total Abstinence Benevolent Society will make their annual excursion to Excelsior Park, on the Hudson, Thursday, August 18th, on the Steamer Gen. Sedgwick, and a most enjoyable time is expected on the occasion. The T. A. B. members know how to make everything pleasant and comfortable in either excursion, picnic or ball. Good music will be in attendance for those who love dancing, while the sail up the river to the park will be delightful. A steam calliope on board the boat will be another feature to those who have never before heard music produced by steam. Tickets $1.00. Children, 50 cts.

Personalia.

Rev. Dr. Stockbridge, U. S. N. and family are now in Scotland.

S. Calhoun and family of this city, are registered at Sunset Hall, Asbury Park.

Judge E. W. Runyon and family were last week registered at the West End, Asbury Park.

Julian Scott, the artist, has just completed a handsome and life-like portrait of Mr. J. U. Fraley.

Mr. Evelyn Greig, an attache of the Post Office is rapidly convalescing from his recent serious illness.

Among those registered at the Coleman House, Asbury Park, are Mr. & Mrs. Craig A. Marsh, of Plainfield.

Mr. Geo. Wotherspoon is suffering from diptheric rheumatism, which necessitates his sojourn at the sea shore for a time.

School Trustee Jacob Kirkner made a short visit to Plainfield this week, returning again to his family at Saratoga.

Councilman Gilbert's father-in-law, Isaac F. Randolph, Esq., was stricken with paralysis on Wednesday of last week.

Mr. Fred. Knowland and family have returned to their home in this city after a short trip to Niagara and other points of interest.

Mayor Randolph is a farmer as well as a business man of merits, as the basket of large potatoes left at our office by him, grown on his grounds, will attest.

Mr. Thomas Smith, the tonsoral artist of North avenue, visited Philadelphia on Wednesday to attend the funeral of his wife's grandmother, who died at the advanced age of 98 years.

The many friends of Mr. H. R. Conkling will learn with feelings of sorrow of the death of that gentleman's young son, whose remains were interred in North Plainfield cemetery last Sunday.

Mr. F. A. Dunham, Civil Engineer and Surveyor, late of this city, is now engaged at Tampico, Mexico, in surveying, &c., for the Mexican Central R. R. Co. Late advices from Mr. D. state that he is getting along finely.

Ex-city Judge Suydam left the cares of his office for a few hours on Monday to slaughter a few of that very toothsome bird, the Upland Plover, which were quite numerous on his father's farm, near New Brunswick.

Andrew Manning, father of Mr. Lebbeus Manning, marble cutter, of this city, died at his residence in Piscataway township on Saturday last. Mr. Manning was one of the oldest subscribers to The Constitutionalist on our books.

It was with pleasure we noticed our aged Democratic friend of Scotch Plains, Mr. Franze Coles, riding through our streets on Tuesday last, accompanied by his son Jacob. Mr. Franze Coles' age is 98 and that of his son "Jake" about 68.

School Trustee John W. Murray returned to his home in this city, and to business cares, on Friday last, after a fortnight's sojourn among the Adirondacks. Himself and party were remarkably successful in their fishing expeditions.

Mr. Gershom Frazee started on Monday last for his former scenes of operation in the gold and silver mining districts of Arizona, where he claims that there is immense wealth awaiting future developments of certain mines controlled by him.

It was a pleasure for us to grasp the hand of Union county's Democratic war-horse, Capt. Wm. H. Gill, of Elizabeth one day last week. The Captain made a flying call to Plainfield on the day in question in company with our efficient County Collector Sheridan and a party of friends.

The eldest daughter of Mr. Robert Simpson was last week the recipient of a very handsome clothes wardrobe from a friend at Brunswick, Ga. The value of the article is enhanced in consequence of the different kind of woods of which it is constructed, and is highly prized by the receiver.

Mr. J. F. Demarest, an attache of The Constitutionalist office, is vacating at Ocean Grove. His particular failing will assert, itself however. He must write even while amidst pleasure, as a very pleasant sketch of the Park and vicinity, from his pen, to be found in another column, attests.

Rev. N. E. Smith, pastor of the Union Congregational church of Brooklyn, N. Y., left on July 28th, on a six weeks' vacation amid the rich grazing farms of old Dutchess County, in N. Y. State. He had contemplated going near Scranton, Pa. During the seven month's pastorate of the Union Congregational church, there has been added one hundred and sixty to its membership. During the coming six weeks the church will undergo a thorough repair, and judging from the increase of the past six months, it is safe to say, that by January next every available seat in the church will be occupied. The Doctor's style, manner and eloquence is already drawing hosts of young people to the church, to whom he always gives out words of cheer and encouragement.

Common Council Proceedings.

There was no quorum present of members of Council at the last regular meeting night, Monday. The members present were President Whiton, Messrs. Guion, H. Smith, Waring and Finch. Absent, Messrs. A. H. Smith, Darling, Gilbert, Hamilton and Tyler. President Whiton announced that a special meeting would be held next Monday evening, Aug. 8th. At that time it will be necessary by law to select a successor to Councilman Coriell, resigned.

A Good Fire Well.

The fire well on Second street, near Park avenue, is one of, if not the best, fire wells in the city. It is of ten feet funnel, or diameter, with seven feet of water in it. The well is dug in good, hard gravel, with no quick-sand, and is stoned up with excellent large builders' stone. As is the case with all fire wells, there is a slight settling of the walls after prolonged working on them by steamers, in consequence of the fine sand and gravel being taken up from the bottom by the suction. The walls become finally settled and firm. The above well supplied plenty of water for two steamers, Nos. 2 and 3 on the occasion of the fire Monday night last. The latter steamer is a second-class apparatus, and drafts and forces out a large quantity of water. After the engines had ceased working last Monday night, it was observed that the well had settled a few inches. The top of the funnel will be raised up again level with the street.—There is not a particle of danger for these fire wells to cave in from weight of steamers working on them. The settling of the walls does the wells good, as the small gravel drawn out by the suction leaves the veins of water pouring in the well more open and full.

COMMUNICATED.

Ocean Grove, N. J., Aug. 2, '81.

Messrs. Editors:

At last I am able to realize that I am that greatest of nature's phenomena—a journalist on a holiday—and can sit down calmly and inform my friends and report to headquarters that I have happily survived the strangest event of my life. By the most rigid economy of weeks and the careful nurturing of the proceeds of two murders, a bigamy case and a railroad accident, the needful for the expenses of a week's recreation was secured, and without a regret I have turned my back on paste-pot and scissors and flown from the compositor's importunate demands for "copy." Upon the recommendation of a Plainfielder, I labeled myself Grove Cottage, Ocean Grove, N. J., and was landed in the midst of Saturday's mist and rain at my destination. When we seek this resort it is understood that a continuous condition of inside drought is to be our lot, and unless a like state of affairs outwardly is our experience, we fail to be completely satisfied. The weather of Sunday last, consequently, was not at all to be desired. It was so utterly utter in its permeating dampness that even locked trunks failed to keep the wet out, and many a white dress frilled and fluted to that desirable condition aimed at by the promenading damsel in her efforts to fill the hearts of the jealous female with envy and the soul of the "mashing" male with admiration, was evolved into the consistency of a wash-rag. It rained frequently and at most inappropriate intervals. The thousands that flocked to the auditorium in the morning to hear a Baltimorean clergyman preach for an hour-and-a-half, were tempted by a cessation of rain into leaving umbrellas and gossimers at home, and were caught in a shower that sprang up—or rather came down—as the benediction was being pronounced.

Nothing more peculiar in itself is to be found than a view of the camper's colony from the porch of the cottage at which I and my appetite are being most satisfactorily and bountifully cared for by our lady-host, Mrs. E. A. Ireland. I can do your readers no greater favor than to recommend them to spend a few weeks at this same place. It is convenient to ocean, lake, church, post-office and depot, the accommodations are all that can be desired and in saying that the table has never failed to supply the demands of a newspaper-man's rapacity, is sufficient assurance of its completeness. This, however, is a digression excused by the fact that in this air matters relating to the digestion receive first consideration. I started to say that the outlook during Sunday's rain, into the midst of the section surrounding the tabernacle, almost presented the aspect of a "venetian city." Of course it needs a more vivid imagination than is generally possessed by a Jerseyman to conjure up any such picture, but the tents themselves might be likened to covered gondolas (of Jersey manufacture) which with the water surrounding them, seem to be afloat. For the same reasons the appearance of things suggests everything disagreeable, uncomfortable and inconvenient, but as you are expected to grow poetical within hearing of the sad sea waves, the venetian "simile" has its advantages. Although so unpleasant a day to the average sojourner, I was able to use it in seeing the Grove and Park under circumstances entirely removed from the reach of the excursionist. At "five o'clock in the morning," clear or cloudy, you are apt to find the attractions of beach and lake, deserted. At the pavilions the "bathing-masters" are wielding the broom and stacking the chairs. Along the shores of the lake the boat-boys are bailing their vessels, although their use is not allowed during the "day of rest." At the ferry crossing the rope is being stretched that enables the ferry-man to stand in the Park all day and pull the laden scow across, and thus avoid breaking the Sabbath as he undoubtedly would if even a part of his labors were performed in the Grove. At the railroad station a few boys await the coming of the day-light train from New York that brings the morning papers; and at the corner in front of the Asbury Park post-office stands a solitary policeman, who, with myself, and those above mentioned, are all the visible occupants of the streets that twelve hours before were "alive" with people. Speaking of the morning papers reminds me to call the attention of the Dunn Bros. to the fact that the paper-train is always behind time, and it is an aggravation to be compelled to await news regarding the President. One morning the delay was occasioned by the engineer running over his father-in-law, which was reprehensible but a satisfactory excuse for time lost; this, however, has not been repeated and in consequence no reasonable cause for being universally behind hand is apparent.

To sit as I did and watch the steady stream of ministers, laymen and other laborers in the vineyard pass through our street to the ferry, between breakfast and church, would convince anyone of the appropriateness of the thoroughfare's title—"Pilgrim's Pathway." Cigars are not to be obtained in the Grove on Sunday, so its inhabitants must visit the Park for the weed; and as the druggists on our side are exceedingly strict, we also are compelled to cross the lake for our stomach's sake. Water, water everywhere, and nothing else to drink, is proverbial of this section of the country, and cannot but be a subject for congratulation. Good order reigns supreme and since the building of the plank promenade and comfortable seats along the ocean, I know of no more desirable place to visit and secure rest and recreation unalloyed with the slightest objectionable feature. The seats referred to have done away with any past necessity for young couples to assume indecorous positions on the beach. A startling and in some instances a shocking brevity of bathing attire is, however, as yet observable in some. The conspicuously posted sign, which read that "Modesty of apparel is as becoming to a lady in a bathing suit as to one dressed in silks and satins," have not been thoroughly effective. The words quoted are supplemented with these: "A word to the wise is sufficient," which seem to appeal in an opposite direction. I notice that those with the least understanding are the most modest and wear the greatest amount of clothing. It is one of the attractions of the place (in fact the only inanimate one at sun-set) to see the board walk—although it really runs from Lillagore's to the northern boundary of Asbury Park. After six o'clock in the evening no prettier sight can be found than along this stretch. Hundreds of bunches of bunting, cheese-cloth and lawn, tied up with variegated ribbons and hanging on the arms of flannel-shirted and shaved-covered gallants, pass up and down along the plank pathway. Hundreds of female souls with but a single thought (to "crush") send sly glances into the innermost recesses of the hundreds of male hearts that "pulverize" as one.

We had a whole day of almost uninterrupted sunshine on Monday, but as I write, to-day (Tuesday) it is raining again. The farmers in your section are no doubt thankful for the same state of wet, and we here do not begrudge their enjoyment (?) of it—in fact are so generous as to sincerely wish they also had our share. What can be done in a place of this kind during such weather, is little beside sleeping and eating. There is staying at this cottage "Ayala's Angel" (by name, though not by nature) with a merry party of friends from (although their activity belies the fact) that slowest of all cities, Philadelphia. They are able to find amusement even when it rains, as only tastes that do not tire of the hackneyed airs of "Olivette" or a discussion of the science of cricket can; but for the average boarder from places that justly claim to be alive, nothing to kill time remains but a book, or a cigar. However, the skies that are universally consulted every moment are just now promising to clear, and I may get a chance to inspect further and write something of interest regarding the place in the future.

WESTFIELD WISPS.

Our photographic visitor left us on Saturday last.

Mr. Henry Hosford and family are sojourning at the Rathburn house, Cape Vincent, N. Y.

Patrick Traynor was unfortunate enough to lose a horse from lung trouble on Saturday night last.

The vital statistics of this Township for the month of July are as follows: Deaths, 4; births, 9; marriages, 1.

The Messrs. Wittke Bros. propose establishing a Real Estate and Insurance agency. Success attend them.

Farmer Thine is credited with the largest (both in apparent yield and size of stalk) crop of corn in this vicinity.

Messrs. W. W. and Joseph R. Connolly and families left on Tuesday last, intending to pass a week at Asbury Park.

Rev. Charles S. Ryman (formerly pastor) occupied the pulpit of the Methodist Episcopal church on Sunday the 24th ult.

The rainfall during the past week, though light, relieved our citizens of one of their worst enemies to comfort—dust.

Our artist Jerome Neil, has just completed a very handsome sign for undertaker Shafer, as well as one for Wittke Bros.

Mr. James Baker makes the following interesting crop report: Planted 1 potato, yielded 53 potatoes, weight 15 pounds.

Those desiring either to purchase jewelry or to have the same repaired, should call upon our resident artist in this line, Mr. Chas. E. Vail.

The regular monthly meeting of Westfield Hook & Ladder Co. No. 1, will be held at the truck house on Monday evening next at 8 p. m.

Attention is called to the Advertisement of Mr. Otis G. Webb, who proposes to embark in the Real Estate and Fire Insurance business.

Rev. W. H. Hoagland of the Methodist Episcopal church, exchanged pulpits with Rev. Henry Neall of the Congregational church on Sunday last.

Can anyone tell why it is that there is no Western mail from this place from 6:34 a. m. until 5:21 p. m. The 1:54 train delivers mail here, but does not take any up. Our postal authorities should be appealed to.

A missionary meeting of the Methodist Sunday school will be held at the church on Sunday next, at 2:30 p. m. The meeting will be addressed by Mr. Stephen S. Mapes. The public are cordially invited to attend.

Both the Revs. Messrs. Neall and Ryman attended Princeton College together, and left that institution about 12 years ago. They had not met since until the 24th ult., and had a good talk together over College days.

The Westfield Croquet Club having secured a fine location on Broad street, its success is assured. Its most active members appear to be Messrs. L. M. Whitaker, B. H. Woodruff, C. F. W. Wittke and James Ingram.

An apparently very happy party of the scholars of the Baptist Sunday school, accompanied by their friends, visited "Ackers" at Woodbridge on Wednesday last. A thoroughly enjoyable time is reported by those who participated.

The latest temperance movement in our Township differs from the usual taking the pledge, instead we have taking the hog. One party being approached on this new basis says that he wouldn't do it for all the hogs in town. Sad fact.

Among the visitors to Boynton Beach since our last we notice the Misses Leveridge, Miss Annie Brown, Mrs. Sarah Coles, Miss Phœbe Pierson, the Misses Clarke, Mr. Jas. O. Clark, Messrs. John Statesman, Gilbert Leveridge, Charles Brown, John Clark and Will Alpers.

One of those peripatetic bands, entirely run by one person, playing the accordeon, bass drum, cymbals, &c., appeared on our streets on Tuesday last and entertained a large number of our citizens with the music or discord [illegible]. Its manager, however, was quite successful financially.

Our next local attraction is the Camp Meeting at Woodruff's [illegible] under the auspices of the M. [illegible] which will begin [illegible] the 11th, and continue until the 23d [illegible]. Christians are cordially invited to attend, and weather permitting, it cannot fail to prove a success in christian work.

Those desiring a day of enjoyment, will do well to remember that the Excursion of the Methodist Episcopal Sunday school to the "Highlands of the Navesink," occurs on Wednesday next. Our best advice is buy tickets and go. The Presbyterian Sunday school also takes part in this excursion, a fact certainly calculated to add to its pleasures.

An organization known as the "Westfield Street Sprinkling Co." (we presume) started operations on Wednesday evening of last week, and succeeded in wetting down that portion of Broad street from Wittke's to Ingram's. We understand that the officers are as follows: Capt. Benj. Woodruff; 1st Lieut., C. F. W. Wittke; 2d Lieut., Cyrus Wilcox.

Two of our young residents were arrested on Thursday evening of last week for being drunk and disorderly, and being brought before Squire Godfrey the following morning were very properly fined for their misconduct. We trust that this will prove a lesson to all violators of the law in this respect, and warn them that public indignation has been aroused to an extent that warrants the belief that all violating it will be prosecuted in the future.

Mr. Lewis C. Thies has secured the agency for this district for Canada leached and unleached ashes. They have been tried here for some time, and those using them claim that they are unsurpassed as a fertilizer. They can be procured either by the car load or, in less quantities. A disposition on the part of our farmers to improve their land either by the use of these fertilizers or others, would undoubtedly tend to their own benefit.

In the proclamation against dogs, posted by order of the Town Committee, it would have been wiser to have printed the fact that said proclamation referred to Westfield Township. Perhaps, however, it is the intention of our Township Clerk to cover the entire State. We hear, however, of no deaths in the dog family yet, and until our Township Committee in issuing such notices allows some compensation for their destruction (of the dogs, not the Com.) the effect of it will not prove a particular benefit.

Prof. Hulick Perine favored a few of our citizens to one of his unrivalled Violin concerts on Friday last. He was assisted in his efforts to entertain by Prof. Wm. Day, better known perhaps as "Buffalo Bill," whose wonderful mathematical calculations astonished his hearers. His subject was "Huckleberries," and he fairly convinced the audience that at 15 cents a quart, the market value of a half bushel was either 80 cents or $1.05. Several sales were made at these prices, but the Prof. has not as yet delivered the goods.

Probably nothing that has occurred in many months has aroused more adverse criticism than the article on "Malaria in the White House," published in the N. Y. Tribune of the 26th ult., and republished in our last, its author being Dr. F. A. Kinch of this place, not particularly from the fact of its questionable taste as a criticism of the action of the leaders of the American medical profession, so much as to its reflection upon the Township of Westfield, and in that way effecting all those who not only desire but work for its advancement and material interests. If all that has been said in reference to the matter were published, the columns of this paper would be inadequate to contain it. In fact, our streets nightly as well as daily, have been a series of indignation meetings and largely attended. In order as far as possible to controvert the article as well as to allay the excitement attendant, our local has interviewed the other resident physicians with the following result:

The first called upon was Dr. Sherman Cooper, in practice here for ten years, who received your representative cordially and the following conversation followed:

Doctor, have you read the communication to the N. Y. Tribune from Dr. Kinch?

I have.

What is your opinion of the influence of ice or its use in cooling the atmosphere, upon malarial diseases?

There is no difference in air cooled by ice, than from air cooled by any other process.

Do you consider the use of ice one of the prolific causes of typhoid following in the train of intermittent in all its various types?

No! Ice is one of the most useful remedies in all fevers. The use of ice is indicated in all cases where the temperature is above the normal.

You have been a practicing physician for how many years?

24 years.

Do you consider your present field of practice particularly a malarial district?

I do not. All cases of malaria that I have treated here, were of a particular mild type.

Do sudden changes of temperature, for instance, in cold weather leaving a warm house and entering a cold atmosphere outside, produce malaria?

Malaria is not supposed to exist under low degrees of temperature.

Do you think that the removal of the refrigerators from the White House would in any way prevent malaria?

No! A person would be less likely to have malaria developed if already in the system, in a cool, even temperature, than in a hot atmosphere.

What is your opinion of the article as a whole?

It appears to me to be the effort of some one to acquire cheap notoriety.

Dr. Theodore V. Smith being called upon, answered the questions as given above, as follows:

1st. I have.
2d. I consider its use unobjectionable.
3d. I do not.
4th. Eight years, four years here.
5th. I do not.
6th. No! My experience indicates the opposite.
7th. It would not.
8th. Absurd.

Dr. Wm. Gale gave the following answers:

1st. Yes.
2d. Have never had experience in the matter.
3d. I do not; do not think that the use of ice or ice water is objectionable. My opinion is that where it is used there is less malaria.
4th. 20 years, 12 in Westfield.
5th. I do not; my practice in other localities convinces me not.
6th. No.
7th. I do not.
8th. Prejudice against ice, starting from an ancient theory in opposition to its use, and to induce discussion on the subject.

The further question being put to Dr. Gale "what is malarial poison?" his reply was: Something they always have in the next town."

The same questions were submitted to Dr. J. B. Harrison, but up to time of going to press, no reply has been received. Should such reply give any further light or information on the subject in question, we will publish it in our next.

A commencement has been made in the construction of water works at Perth Amboy, from which it is hoped, before many months elapse, to have a full and adequate supply of water for all domestic purposes. The site for the main reservoir is the ravine known as Eaglewood gully, the dam to be constructed a short distance north of the bridge on Smith street. East of the gully on the high ground on the north side of Smith street a foundation is being laid for the distributing tank or stand pipe, from which the pressure upon the mains will be obtained. The difficulties as to obtaining a clear title to the property, prevented an earlier beginning, but satisfactory arrangements having been made with the mortgagees and judgment creditors, the company are now ready to push ahead vigorously.

SHILOH'S CONSUMPTION CURE.

This is beyond question the most successful cough medicine we have ever sold, a few doses invariably cure the worst cases of Cough, Croup and Bronchitis, while its wonderful success in the cure of Consumption is without a parallel in the history of medicine. Since its first discovery it has been sold on a guarantee, a test which no other medicine can stand. If you have a Cough we earnestly ask you to try it. Price 10 cts., 50 cts. and $1. If your Lungs are sore, Chest or Back, lame, use Shiloh's Porous Plaster. Price 25 cts. Sold by R. M. Steele. Jag6ly

ANSWER THIS QUESTION.

Why do so many people we see around us, seem to prefer to suffer and be made miserable by Indigestion, Constipation, Dizziness, Loss of Appetite, Coming up of the Food, Yellow Skin, when for 75 cts. we will sell them Shiloh's Vitalizer, guaranteed to cure them. Sold by R. M. Steele.

SHILOH'S CATARRH REMEDY, a marvelous cure for Catarrh, Diptheria, Canker Mouth and Headache. With each bottle there is an ingenious nasal injector for the more successful treatment of these complaints without extra charge. Price 50 cts. Sold by R. M. Steele.

The contract for erecting the new silk mill at Dover has been awarded, and the work is to be commenced at once. The building will be 45x200 feet. The first story will be of stone, and the second and third of brick, and will cost $16,000. A large dye house is partly erected.

HAY FEVER.

Mr. A. L. Avery, Pharmacist, Newark, N. J.— Having been severely afflicted for eleven years with Hay Fever; after trying almost everything without avail, I gave up all hopes of being cured, when I purchased of you a box of Ely's Cream Balm. To my surprise, after a few applications, I was entirely relieved. E. Watson Harris, Letter Carrier No. 14, New P. O., Newark, N. J. Messrs. White & Burdick, Druggists, Ithaca, N. Y.—I recommend to those suffering (as I have been) with Hay Fever, Ely's Cream Balm. Have tried nearly all the remedies I could find, and give this a decided preference over them all. It has given me immediate relief. C. T. Stephens, Hardware Merchant, Ithaca, N. Y., Sept. 6, 1880. Price 50 cents.

Madison is to have a National Bank, with a capital of $50,000. $30,000 has already been subscribed. The bank will be under the direction of J. S. Palmier, President, a successful business man, and will commence operations about the 1st of September. W. F. Morrow will act as cashier.

HIS LAST DOSE.

Said a sufferer from kidney troubles, when asked to try Kidney-Wort, "I'll try it but it will be my last dose." The man got well, and is now recommending the remedy to all. When derangement of the stomach acts upon the kidneys and liver, bringing disease and pain, Kidney-Wort is the true remedy. It removes the cause and cures the disease. Liquid (very concentrated) or dry act equally efficiently.—Am. Cultivator.

WHAT IS BEHIND IT?

Dr. David Kennedy, of Rondout, N. Y., proprietor of the great medicine called "Favorite Remedy," would have but little confidence to recommend the public to buy and use it if his own name were not behind it. But the fact that he has staked his reputation upon it ought to be, and is, better than a thousand cheap certificates—in the opinion of the people. If you are sick with any complaint of the Blood, Kidneys or Liver, invest One Dollar in the Favorite Remedy, and it will speak for itself.

IDLE EXPERIMENTS.

When a man is well and sound he can afford to be indifferent to the character of all the medicine in the world. But when disease is fairly eating him up, he takes do something at once and do it intelligently. Therefore, do not dose yourself with a hundred things in the hope that some of them may hit the mark, but try Dr. David Kennedy's "Favorite Remedy" which fails in every case. For kidney and liver troubles, piles and constipation, it is just what you want. Druggists have it, or mail one dollar to the doctor at Rondout, N. Y.

Wonderful successes like those of Stewart, the Vanderbilts, or the Astors are seldom reached by luck or accident. It is the result of something within that commands success; and it is only time that proves them as such. While new discoveries are daily brought forward how few remain as monuments of their worth. It is the merit that lasts—Arthur's Elixir of Sulphur for Coughs, Colds, Consumption, etc., first discovered or originated after long years of study by a patient Massachusetts chemist, has gradually proved itself a success from Maine to Oregon, and to-day no more successful preparation for the cure of Throat and Lung complaints can be found in the world. THE SPOOPENDYKES.

"Say, my dear," said Mr. Spoopendyke, with a social sort of a grin, "how would you like to go fishing?"

"Wouldn't that be perfectly lovely!" squealed Mrs. Spoopendyke. "I never was fishing in my life, and I always wanted to try it. Where can we go?"

"Well, there's lots of places around Brooklyn. Last summer I saw boys catch a good many fish off the dock at the foot of State street. We might go there."

"Just the place," conceded Mrs. Spoopendyke. "Perhaps we can catch some sardines. I bet a spool of thread I get the first shad?" and in her glee Mrs. Spoopendyke waltzed across the room and back again.

Mr. Spoopendyke smiled pleasantly upon his wife and started out into the yard to get some worms, while Mrs. Spoopendyke rigged herself up for the pending excursion.

"Got any fish sticks?" she asked, as Mr. Spoopendyke returned rather warm from his exercise.

"I've got some fishing rods if that's what you mean," replied Mr. Spoopendyke, "but I could only find four worms."

"Can't we break 'em in two?" inquired Mrs. Spoopendyke anxiously.

"Could if we had a buzz saw," grunted Mr. Spoopendyke. "Come along if you're coming," and thoroughly equipped for the expedition Mr. and Mrs. Spoopendyke set out for State street pier.

"How long before they bite?" asked Mrs. Spoopendyke, hoisting her hook out of the water and examining the point of a worm her husband had impaled thereon.

"They'll probably bite at that as soon as they can borrow a step ladder," retorted Mr. Spoopendyke, eyeing the dangling hook. "If you calculate to get any fish, you'd better let that thing go down in the water."

"Oh!" said Mrs. Spoopendyke, dropping the hook. "Do you think I could catch a gold fish?" she enquired, after a pause.

"Ho! hold on! there, I lost him!" ejaculated Mr. Spoopendyke, firing his hook up towards the Heights.

"So did I!" chimed in Mrs. Spoopendyke, as she fell over backward and shot her sinker in Mr. Spoopendyke's ear. "I declare we both lost him!"

"What ye doing?" demanded Mr. Spoopendyke. "What did you lose? When I'm pulling in a fish you just sit still, will ye? Think my head's a fish pond? Drop it, I tell ye! drop it in the water. There! Now sit still and fish. Another time I'm pulling in a Spanish mackerel, you let things alone. You made me lose that fish."

"You ought to have caught him you fished splendidly for him," said Mrs. Spoopendyke, soothingly.

"I understand the business," said Mr. Spookendyke, somewhat mollified. "You see he didn't even get the bait as he was."

"I'm glad of that, because we have only three worms left. How I'd like to catch an oyster. Do you know I—"

"Hist! Sh-h-h! Quiet, now! I've got him! See me play with him! Now, I'll fetch him!" and Mr. Spoopendyke reeled in until he landed an old boot.

"I didn't know that fish had burrs on like a chestnut," said Mrs. Spoopendyke, quivering with excitement. "Crack him and let us see what he is."

"Crack your grandmother!" snorted Mr. Spoopendyke, shieing the boot up the pier. "He wasn't good to eat anyway. I've something—"

"What's the matter with my stick? Let go, you nasty thing! Here's another one! Quick!"

"Pull him in, can't ye? You've got a bite. Haul up!" cried Mr. Spoopendyke, trying to untangle himself from his line, and help his wife. "Lift him out of the water?"

"He won't let me," squeaked Mrs. Spoopendyke, holding both arms out at full length. "Take him off! Scat! Go 'way, you monster!"

"Lift your pole straight up in the air!" shouted Spoopendyke. "Hoist the dod gasted thing right up!"

Mrs. Spoopendyke exerted herself and disclosed an eel dangling.

"It's a rattlesnake!" she yelled. "Don't go near him! Fire! fire! murder! police! police-e-e!"

"Give us a breeze, will ye?" bawled Mr. Spoopendyke. "Get him over the dock so I can catch him! What ye holding him out there for? Waiting for him to dry? Stick that pole up in the air, I tell ye!"

Mrs. Spoopendyke threw the pole over her shoulder and flopped the eel into Mr. Spoopendyke's countenance.

"Dod gast the mossly eel!" he growled as he spit it out. "Stop waving that blasted lightning rod like a flag, will ye? Hold it still, I say! Think you're a tree."

"Don't touch him! Throw him overboard! He'll sting you to death," gurgled Mrs. Spoopendyke, and, forgetting that the pole still exercised an influence over the eel, she gave a jerk and it slipped through Mr. Spoopendyke's fingers. That gentleman made a spring for it, and fell into the water.

"Hue! blab! baa! waggle, glue, hic, gaggle," sputtered Mr. Spoopendyke, as some fishermen fished him out.

"Did you catch cold, dear?" inquired Mrs. Spoopendyke, with solicitude, as they made their way home.

"If I did I landed it," growled Mr. Spoopendyke, blowing mud like the exhaust of a tug.

"Anyway, I caught an eel, didn't I?" asked Mrs. Spoopendyke, carrying out the woman's idea of comforting a man with the only thing he didn't want to hear about.

"Oh! you caught it!" ripped Mr. Spoopendyke. "You're a fish woman, you are. All you want now is glass sides and some bubbles running through you to be an aquarium! Another time we both go fishing you stay home! You hear?"

And with this novel mathematical suggestion, Mr. Spoopendyke hunted himself to his domicile and took a rum sweat.—Brooklyn Eagle.

WORDS OF WISDOM.

The power of eloquence is sometimes superior to military force.

Better a soft heart and an iron hand than an iron heart and a soft hand.

Suspicions among thoughts are like bats among birds—they ever fly by twilight.

Never condemn a friend unheard or without letting him know his accuser or his crime.

He who refuses justice to the defenseless will make every concession to the powerful.

Every man must work at something. The moment he stops working for himself the devil employs him.

We take lessons in art, literature—a thousand things; but that high sense of honor—man's obligation to man—is forgotten.

If you wish success in life make perseverance your bosom friend, experience your wise counselor, caution your elder brother, and hope your guardian.

Prosperity shines on different persons much in the same way that the sun shines on different objects. Some it hardens like mud, while others it softens like wax.

The best people need afflictions for trial of their virtue. How can we exercise the grace of contentment, if all things succeed well; or that of forgiveness, if we have no enemies.

There are treasures laid up in the heart—treasures of charity, piety temperance and soberness. These treasures a man takes with him beyond death, when he leaves this world.

No life is wasted unless it ends in sloth, dishonesty and cowardice. No success is worthy of the name unless it is won by honest industry and brave breasting of the waves of fortune.

Were we to take as much pains to be what we ought to be as we do to describe what we really are, we might appear like ourselves, without being at the trouble of any disguise at all.

Many of the saddest instances of mental and moral failures can be traced with unerring precision to continued over work, and, as it has been clearly demonstrated, of intemperance also.

Be not diverted from your duty by any reflections the silly world may make upon you, for their censurers are not in your power, and consequently should not be any part of your concern.

Profanity never did any man the least good. No man is the richer, happier, or wiser for it. It commends no one in society; it is disgusting to refined people and abominable to the good.

There is no fortune so good but that it may be reversed, and none so bad but it may be bettered. The sun that rises in clouds may set in splendor, and that which rises in splendor may set in gloom.

There is no necessity in nature for the alarming disasters so prevalent and the sudden deaths so common. A healthily constituted man or woman ought to wear bright until threescore and ten.

Let the soul be turned as strenuously toward good as it usually is toward evil, and you will find that the simple love of goodness will give incredible resources to the spirit in the search after truth. Love, with intellect, will perform miracles.

It should be pointed out with continual earnestness that the essence of lying is in deception, not in words; a lie may be told by silence, by equivocation, by the accent on a syllable, by a glance of the eye attaching a peculiar significance to a sentence.

Whenever unselfish love is the mainspring of men's actions; wherever happiness is placed not on what we can get for ourselves, but what we can impart to others; wherever we place our satisfaction in gratifying our fathers and mothers, our brothers and sisters, our wives and children, our neighbors and friends, we are sure to attain all the happiness which the world can bestow.

DIAMOND CUT DIAMOND.

Andy Cummins was a "cute downeaster," a real live Yankee, hard to beat. He was once in a country bar-room "down South," where several gentlemen were assembled, when one of them said:

"Cummins, if you'll go out and stick your penknife into anything, when you come back I'll tell you what it's sticking in."

"Yer can't do no sich thing," responded Cummins.

"I'll bet ten dollars on it," answered the Southerner.

"Waal, I rather guess I'll take that ere bet. Here, captain," turning to the landlord, "hold stakes, and I'll jist make half a saw-horse in less than no time."

The parties deposited an X apiece, and Cummins departed on his mission, but in a short time returned, saying:

"Waal, neighbor, what's it sticking in?"

"In the handle," replied the Southerner, holding out his hand for the stakes.

"Guess not; jist wait a minnit," said the Yankee, holding up the handle of his knife minus the blade. "I kalkilate the blade can't be in the handle when it's driv clean up in an old stump, aside of the road out thar."

Cummins, of course, won the wager, and the Southerner sloped for parts unknown, amid roars of laughter.

SCIENTIFIC NOTES.

Sharks generally turn on their sides to eat.

In animals the arms and legs are of the same length.

No creature below the back-boned animals ever breathes through its mouth.

Salt crystallizes in colorless transparent cubes, soluble in three parts of water.

Zinc, if beaten out into thin leaves, will take fire readily from a common paper.

Copper lodes generally run from east to west, and lead lodes from north to south.

All the gold in the world could be contained in a room twenty-four feet square and sixteen feet high.

If the crab is often interrupted he will, like the spider, pretend to be dead, and will watch on opportunity to sink himself into the sand, keeping only his eyes above.

Cleaning water pipes by means of eels is said to be an English ingenuity. The eel is sent through with a bunch of rags fastened to a string put through its tail, and soon wriggles out at the other end.

In the roasting of coffee Dr. O. Bornheimer finds three principal products—solid fatty acids, caffeine, and caffeol, a heavy oil which turns yellow after having been exposed to the air, and which is the vehicle of the peculiar aroma of coffee.

Japanese cement is made by mixing powdered rice with a little cold water, and then gradually adding boiling water until the desired consistency is acquired, care being taken to keep it stirred. Lastly, boil for one minute in a clean saucepan. This cement is very strong and nearly colorless.

The Mississippi is the father of waters, and consequently it must be the grandfather of milk.

Carpenters and hens are both on the same lay. They achieve success with the hatchet.

A Quincy brewer possesses a cat which continually teases him for beer. Must be of the malt-tease species.

One of the newest things in music is called "Stolen Kisses." It's a charming duett—when nobody's looking.

"All things come to him that waits," but a quarter judiciously bestowed on a waiter will hurry things up a little.

A western desperado recently shot dead a man because he wouldn't pray. How very dangerous western life would be for many of us.

An exchange speaks of a man in New York who has five fingers and a thumb on each hand. Have the buzz saws out that way lost their cunning?

'TIS TOO TRUE.

We know it is ourselves and the Mount Holly News knows what it is talking about, when it says:

"The country editor who does not make some of his readers mad is either too big a fool or too great a coward to express an honest opinion. That he does run his loaded pen full tilt into the prejudices of his fellow townsmen, costs him much more than is generally known by the people outside of his sanctum. Perhaps it has occurred to the reader that the average subscriber to the local paper will tolerate an opinion expressed by the metropolitan journalist, for which he would visit his merciless wrath upon his home editor. People take the daily papers and in every issue see their pet theories ridiculed and their dearest hobbies exposed, yet they never think of flying into a towering passion and ordering the paper stopped. The pains and penalties for an honest expression of opinion is reserved for the editorial game near by home. People seldom think of keeping a square account with the local paper, balancing the good things and the ones that suit against the few unpleasant and bitter pills which the paper contains. Where the local editor is praised and rewarded once for his general good work, for the benefit he is to the town, he is regularly damned a hundred times for the one word which touches the tender spot in the irate subscriber. If the men in every community considered that the life of the home paper was more important than that of ever so many more pretentious sheets from afar, the work of 'ye local' would be comparatively pleasant and decently paid."

ODD NAMES FOR STEAMBOATS.

There may be some persons among the numbers who travel on the excursion boats to whom the meaning of the curious names of the iron steamboats may be unknown. One hears in a crowd of excursionists remarks about Pe-gay-sus, Peg-a-sus, and Peg-a-sus, all relating to the same steamboat, made by people who have little idea that Pegasus was the old winged horse of the muses in the days of the Greeks, and is to-day the name of a constellation, and of a genus of fishes whose large pectoral fins enable them to leap out of the water and take brief flights in the air. It probably is not known to all of those who board the Cetus that they are riding on a whale, to speak in the language of the ancients, and a whale whose memory is still kept bright among the constellations. The steamboat Cygnus is named in honor of the swan, because both are white and both float lightly. Cepheus was King of Ethiopia some few thousands of years ago, and when he died he was placed as a star in the sky to twinkle eternally in memory chiefly of his daughter Andromeda. Perseus will be generally remembered as the son of Jupiter. He was considerable of a hero, according to all reports, and has, since his demise, shone in the heavens not far from the constellation of Taurus.

Taurus is another of the iron boats, and Taurus was a bull. At present he forms the second of the signs of the Zodiac. Sirius, the last of the iron fleet, is the dog star in the mouth of the constellation Canis Major.

All of the boats thus far are named after stars or constellations, but it is said that the chief end in giving these names was to have a uniform termination. As new boats are added to the fleet, new names ending in "us" will have to be devised.

VENNOR'S REVISED PREDICTIONS.

"The following detailed predictions must be used generously," says Mr. Henry S. Vennor, in placing them before the public. He probably would also recommend that they be well shaken before taken, and that the one that comes on top be selected as an index of the state of the weather for whichever day of the month corresponds with its prognostications. We however publish them as the great prophet predicts, and advise all readers to carry an umbrella when it rains even if the day promises below to be "fair and pleasant." We feel assured, however, that there has been no mistake in predicting the sort of weather we are to experience the 2d, 3d, 4th and 5th:

AUGUST, 1881.

1. Probably warm and oppressive.
2. Generally pleasant weather,
3. with fairly warm days and
4. cool to cold days, and fall-like
5. evenings and nights.
6. Fair and pleasant.
7. Sunday—heat and storms.
8. Sultry weather, with heavy
9. showers—cooler evenings and nights.
10. Ditto.
11. Heat again in the United States,
12. with cloudy and sultry weather,
13. with storms in Canada.
14. Sunday—cooler—change.
15. Cooler to cold, and cloudy & pleasant.
16. Storms through portions of Virginia.
17. Hail storms and frosts
18. probably in some sections.
19. Heat and storms.
20. Ditto.
21. Sunday—sultry and showery.
22. Sultry and windy.
23. Heat and wind.
24. Ditto.
25. Heavy storms on the lakes, St. Law-
26. rence, and around New York.
27. Cooler weather, with
28. Sunday—rains and frosts in
29. northern sections.
30. Fair and pleasant with cool evenings
31. and nights, with indications of returning heat.

The custom of the country is not to say a good word for any man while he has life left in him to appreciate it. One-half of the eulogies given the dead would encourage the living by fifty per cent.

Captain Bogardus' feat of breaking 500 glass balls in twenty-five minutes and fifteen seconds has been excelled by a Philadelphian, who was carrying a basket of glass balls to a shooting range and stepped on a banana peel.

"This house for sail," was the way the landlord spelled the announcement. A smart fellow came along and asked: "When will the house sail?" "As soon as some one comes along who can raise the wind," was the cool answer.

The cool-headed fellow is the baldheaded fellow. He is modest, too, for he never puts on hairs. He is a brilliant man, too, for he always shows a shining front. His genius will live after him, for there is no dyeing there.

Women of the world—that is, in what is called fashionable society—never use harsh expressions when condemning their rivals. Like the savages, they hurl elegant arrows, ornamented with feathers of purple and gold, but with points.

TERRIBLE ACCIDENT

Necessitating a Surgical Operation—Loving Mother Attempts to take Pair of Shears from Her Child.

PARENTS, BE CAREFUL.

Domestic accidents are common to women, and some of them are very serious. Mrs. Warner, of South Rondout, Ulster Co., N. Y., some weeks ago attempted to take from her child a pair of shears with which it was playing. A slight struggle ensued, in which the point of the shears entered Mrs. Warner's left eye, entirely destroying the sight. Her family physician did what he could, but intensely painful inflammation arose, which, by sympathy, threatened the loss of the other eye. Total blindness to a woman having the care of a household is an irretrievable calamity. In this strait Mrs. W. applied to the well-known and skillful Surgeon, Dr. David Kennedy, of Rondout, N. Y., who removed the injured eye by a very successful operation, setting aside all danger of further harm to the sight of the other eye. But, owing to pain and mental distress, her system needed a tonic and restorative medicine. To do this work the Doctor prescribed "Kennedy's Favorite Remedy," which sustained his reputation and laid a sure foundation of health.

Dr. Kennedy's "Favorite Remedy" removes all impurities from the blood, regulates the Liver and Kidneys, cures constipation, and all diseases and weaknesses peculiar to Females. It is for sale by all our druggists at ONE DOLLAR a bottle. aug6m

THE NEW BUSINESS OF THE EQUITABLE
Life Assurance Society of the U. S.
FOR THE YEAR 1880, WAS OVER
Thirty-Five Millions of Dollars,
The Largest Business Done by any Company in the World.

REASONS FOR THIS RESULT.

The Equitable is the strongest Company in the United States.

Its policies are, by their own express terms, made incontestable after three years. [For precise terms see form of policy contract.]

All such incontestable policies are paid immediately after receipt of satisfactory proof of the death of the Assured, and without even the customary delay of sixty or ninety days.

Each ordinary policy provides for a definite surrender-value in paid-up assurance, in case the policy is forfeited after three years from its date and is surrendered within a reasonable time thereafter.

By The Tontine Savings Fund plan of assurance, returns to policy-holders, after the expiration of what is called the Tontine period, are greater than are obtainable on any other system. Actual settlements of Tontine policies have been made in which policy-holders have withdrawn amounts varying from eighty to one hundred and twenty per cent. of premiums paid, besides enjoying a life insurance indemnity during the period. No other company can show such results.

The Tontine plan is the only one extant by which a person may withdraw from his insurance contract at specified periods, receiving the entire reserve and surplus accumulations in cash.

All the ordinary forms of insurance with annual dividends of profits, both cash and reversionary, are issued by this Society.

ASSETS, - $41,108,602.
SURPLUS, - $9,228,294.

Its business for the last ten years (represented by the new policies issued) has been larger than that of any other Company.

Something Entirely New!
NO SMOKE! NO SMELL!
NO DIRT! NO ASHES!
TUBULAR HOT-BLAST NON-EXPLOSIVE
Oil or Gas Stoves!

THE REASONS WHY THE TUBULAR HOT-BLAST OIL OR GAS STOVE IS SUPERIOR TO ALL OTHERS:

Its appearance is more like a stove than anything that has yet been offered.

It requires no wire gauze or water tank to make it safe.

A continual current of air passes to the burners over the Oil Pot, preventing the oil from getting warmer than the atmosphere in which it is burning. The bake oven is not in the way of the kettle or boiler.

Baking, roasting, and boiling can all be done at once, and in less time than with any other oil stove.

The No. 3 or Three-Burner Stove will make 15 inches of pure white flame at a cost of 1½ cts. per hour. The reservoir holds four quarts of oil, sufficient to burn for twelve hours.

The No. 4 or 4-Burner Stove will make 20 inches of white flame at a cost of 2 cents per hour. The reservoir holds 5 quarts of oil sufficient to burn for twelve hours.

The No. 3 Stove will consume between three and four cents worth of gas per hour.

The No. 4 will consume between four and five cents worth of gas per hour.

Surrogate's Order to Limit Creditors.

Union County, Surrogate's Office,
April 27th, 1881.

Israel C. Mundy, Administrator of Sarah Bartle, deceased.

On application of the above-named Administrator it is ordered that said Administrator give Public Notice to the Creditors of the estate of the said decedent, to bring in their debts, demands or claims against the same, under oath, within nine months from this date, by setting up a copy of this order, within twenty days hereafter, in five of the most public places in the County of Union, for two months, and also within the said twenty days, by advertising the same in the CONSTITUTIONALIST for the same space of time; and if any Creditor shall neglect to exhibit his or her debt, demand or claim, within the said period of nine months, public notice being given as aforesaid, such Creditor shall be forever barred of his or her action thereof against the said Administrator.

By JAMES J. GERBER, Surrogate.

IN Chancery of New Jersey.

To Washington E. Langley and Adelia Isabella Langley his wife.

By virtue of an order of the Court of Chancery of New Jersey made on the day of the date hereof, in a cause wherein Abraham Runyon is complainant and you and others are defendants, you are required to appear and plead, answer or demur to the bill of said complainant on or before the thirtieth day of August next, or the said bill will be taken as confessed against you.

The said bill is filed to foreclose a mortgage given by Washington E. Langley and Adelia Isabella Langley his wife, to said complainant on lands in the city of Plainfield, in Union County, New Jersey, dated April 19, 1866. And also to foreclose a certain mortgage given by Adelia Isabella Langley, and Washington E. Langley her husband, to said complainant, on the same lands, in the county and State aforesaid, dated September [illegible].

And you Washington E. Langley are made defendant because you own said lands, or some part thereof, or may claim an interest therein. And you Adelia Isabella Langley are made defendant because you are the wife of said Washington E. Langley and may thereby claim an inchoate right of dower, or other interest in said mortgaged premises, and also because you may claim to own said premises by virtue of a quit claim deed made to you by one Dushrod F. Rice, dated March 12, 1868.

Dated June 29, 1881.

VAN WINKLE & MAXSON,
Solicitors of Complainant, Plainfield, N. J.

NOTICE.—Be it known to all persons: That under and by virtue of an act entitled, "An act for the better protection of manufacturers and bottlers of and dealers in mineral waters, beer, ale, porter and other beverages," approved March 11th eighteen hundred and eighty-one, I, Fred Caspar, bottler and dealer in lager beer, conducting business at No. 5 East Second street in the city of Plainfield, County of Union and State of New Jersey, do hereby in accordance with the provisions of said law, give public notice that I have on filed in the office of the Clerk of the said County of Union, a description of said boxes and bottles, and of the name or names, mark or marks, stamped or impressed thereon, owned and used by me in my business as aforesaid, which description is as follows, to wit: Boxes painted blue and marked "Fred Caspar, Plainfield, N. J.," on the sides and are known as lager beer boxes. Bottles are 14 oz. white pint bottles, marked, "Fred Caspar, Plainfield, N. J.," on one side of the bottle, and on the opposite side are also the words, "This bottle not to be sold."

This notice is given and description filed for the purpose of protection under the provisions of said act above referred to. Witness my hand and seal this sixth day of July, eighteen hundred and eighty-one.

FRED CASPAR.

Filed in the office of the Clerk of the County of Union, State of New Jersey, this Sixth day of July, eighteen hundred and eighty-one.

POETRY.

SHE WOULD BE A MASON.

The funniest thing I ever heard,
The funniest thing that ever occurred,
Is the story of Mrs. Mehitable Bryde,
Who wanted to be a Mason.

Her husband, Tom Bryde, a Mason true—
As good a Mason as any of you;
He is Tyler of Lodge Cerulean Blue,
And tiles and delivers the summons due,
And she wanted to be a Mason too,
This ridiculous Mrs. Bryde.

She followed round, this inquisitive wife,
And nagged him and teased him half out of his life;
So to terminate this unhallowed strife
He consented at last to admit her.

And first to disguise her from bonnet to shoon,
This ridiculous lady proposed to put on
His breech—ah! forgive me—I meant pantaloon;
And miraculously did they fit her.

The Lodge was at work on the Master's degree,
The light was ablaze on the letter G,
High soared the pillars J. and B.,
The officer sat like Solomon at ease,
The brimstone burned amid horrid cries;
The goat roamed wildly through the room;
The candidate begged them to let him go home;
And the devil himself stood up in the east,
As broad as an alderman at a feast,
When in came Mrs. Bryde.

O horrible sounds! O horrible sight!
Can it be that Masons take delight
In spending thus the hours of the night?
Ah! could their wives and daughters know
The unutterable things they say and do,
Their feminine hearts would burst with woe!
But this is not all my story.

Those Masons joined in a hideous ring,
The candidate howled like anything,
And thus in tones of death they sing—
"Blood to drink and bones to crack,
Skulls to smash and lives to take,
Hearts to crush and souls to burn,
Give old Morey another turn,
And make him grim and gory."

Trembling with horror stood Mrs. Bryde,
Unable to speak a single word,
On the left of the Junior Warden there;
And scarcely noticed, so loud the groans,
That her chair was made of human bones.

Of human bones! On grinning skulls
That ghastly throne of horror rolls,
Those skulls, the skulls that Morgan wore;
His scalp across the top was flung,
His teeth around the arms were strung;
Never in all romance was known
Such use made of human bone.

There came a pause—a pair of paws
Reached through the floor, up sliding doors,
And grabbed the unhappy candidate!
How can I without tears relate
The lost and ruined Morey's fate?
She saw him sink in a fiery hole;
She heard him scream "My soul! My soul!"
While roars of fiendish laughter roll,
And drown the yells for mercy.
"Blood to drink," etc., etc.

The ridiculous woman could stand no more;
She fainted and fell on the checkered floor,
'Midst all the diabolical roar.
What then, you ask me, did befall
Mehitable Bryde? Why, nothing at all—
She dreamed she had been in a Mason's hall.

MISCELLANEOUS READING.

HER INHERITANCE.

A blustering uncomfortable day in early November, with a bleak promise of snow in the air, and a sky that was clouding over. The bare branches of the trees swayed and writhed savagely; occasional little showers of dry, dead leaves, that were not yet sodden and decayed, flurried up and down; and the roar of the fire in the chimney completed the outside picture of a dull autumn afternoon.

In Miss Miner's sitting-room, however, everything was as cozy and delightful as could be desired, with the warm crimson lambrequins, with their heavy cords and tassels, and the carpet to match in tint, and the furniture of light grey damask, puffed with crimson, and the gray and gold wall paper, and the pretty knick-nacks here and there that furnished the room in such admirable taste. And Miss Hetty Miner, sitting before the open grate-stove fire, her black silk skirt turned carefully back over her lap, and her substantially-made pebble-goat boots, resting comfortably on the fender.

An elderly woman—40 odd—with a sharp, shrewd face and bright little eyes, and a resolute look around her mouth. A homely, outspoken woman, who was proud to say she never had been in love, who lived in luxury, although on a small scale, and who had $75,000 in Government bonds to leave her relations when she died; and in all the world she had but two relatives, Mrs. Carlsford Carl, her married sister, and Mr. Parker Dollinffby, her half-brother, who, besides being inordinately jealous that old Simon Carmen had left Hetty his fortune, just because she had happened to befriend him in his poor, ante-mining days, were very much given to toadying her and writing affectionate letters to her, and loading her with presents, and forcing invitations on her; all of which Miss Miner accepted in a matter-of-fact way, and in return did exactly as she pleased.

This especial afternoon, as she sat meditatively before the fire, she suddenly broke the stillness, with an energy of speech that made the young girl reading in the bay-window, nearly concealed by the curtains, look startedly up from her book.

"Ellice, you're a fool!"

Evidently, Ellice Dunning had not lived five years as companion and personal attendant to Miss Miner in vain, for she manifested no surprise at the rough speech, beyond the brief little startled look in her soft winey-brown eyes.

She closed her book and came out into the room, a little flush on her face.

"Do you think so, Miss Miner?"

"Most certainly I think so. You are a fool, Ellice Dunning, and I hate to see you throw yourself away so foolishly. Do show your common sense, if you've got any, and let that young jackanape of a doctor go. You are better off without him. I'll give you a new sealskin sacque this winter if you'll give him up."

"I couldn't give him up, Miss Miner; I love him too well."

Miss Miner looked sarcastically at Ellice's sweet, flushed face, and gave a sniff of contempt.

"What nonsense! You love him too well. Love indeed! It's all absurdity. I never was in love in my life."

Ellice dropped her head in a pretty little confused way.

"I—can't help that, Miss Miner. I love Frank and he loves me. We'd be perfectly miserable if we were parted. Please don't tell me I must give him up! Indeed, it is impossible. We are engaged to be married just as soon as he comes back from his visit home."

Miss Miner dropped her feet from the polished silver bar to the tiled hearth with a resonant bang as she jumped up, indignantly.

"Engaged to be married to Dr. Olevin! Did I ever! Well, Ellice Dunning—very well! You may pack my hand-valise at once. I am going to New York on a visit by the 6:10 train, and I'll be home on Thursday. When I come back, don't let me find you here, you ungrateful little wretch—you!"

Ellice's lips quivered, and her eyes filled with diamond-bright tears.

"Miss Miner! You don't mean—to turn me away!"

"That is just what I mean! I have told you, time and again, I didn't approve of men-[illegible] and love-[illegible], and I won't have it where I am! You can take your choice—me or Dr. Olevin. I'll give you just five minutes."

"I don't want five minutes for a choice, Miss Miner!" she said proudly. "You have been very good to me, and I cannot forget your kindness; and I think I have done my duty to you. But nothing—no one—could come between me and Dr. Olevin."

"All right, then. Don't let me see you here when I come back—that's all!"

And then Ellice went up to Miss Miner's room and packed the red Russia satchel, dropping a few tears as she folded the garments Miss Miner would require.

"I'll go to Mrs. Carlsford Carl," Miss Miner decided, as she sat in the city-bound express, in the early dusk of the November evening. "Cornelia thinks all the world of me. Her daughter would not act as that ungrateful young minx dared act. The idea!—the idea!—of preferring—actually preferring—a penniless young doctor, with a moustache—a nasty black moustache—to me! After all I've done for her, too!"

And then Miss Miner leaned back very contentedly in her seat, satisfied that she had done her whole duty by herself, and Ellice Dunning, too.

It was just 8:30 o'clock when the hired hack deposited her at the door of Mrs. Carlsford Carl's red-brick house—a comfortable, cozy place, with the name on the door in full.

A servant showed her in, and asked her name; but Miss Miner wanted to surprise her sister, and sent word that a friend wished to see her, while she seated herself in the parlor, where a little girl sat curled up in a cushioned chair, reading.

"You want to see my mamma, I suppose!"

"Yes," said Miss Miner, with an affable smile. "You are Hetty, I suppose?"

The child gave a heavy sigh.

"Yes, I'm Hetty. Oh, don't I hate that name!"

"Why, I think it's a first-rate name. You are a namesake of somebody, I guess?"

"Yes, I am. Old Hetty Miner, my aunt, who lives out in the country. I never have seen her, and I don't want to, either, 'cause mamma says she's the meanest old thing in all creation—a regular old Miss Nancy, papa says."

Miss Miner smiled—a little queerly.

"Oh! that's what they say, is it? Well, Hetty, I am your Aunt Miner!"

The child opened her eyes wider.

"Are you? Then won't mamma be mad! We expect company after a while, and mamma won't want you at all. We'd be dreadfully ashamed of you before the Algerdons. You're going to leave us your money, ain't you? Papa and mamma said they were most tired of waiting—you had as many lives as a cat. We are going to Europe when you die!"

"Are you?" said Miss Miner, with an insane desire to shake the pert, self-possessed, venomous youngster. "Well, I wouldn't depend upon it if I were you!"

And before Mrs. Carl came down stairs, Miss Miner was out on the street, on her way to her half-brother's house.

"A pretty nest of vipers those Carls are. Thank heaven, I've found them out in time! Going to Europe on my money! Why, ungrateful as that spunky little Ellice is, she isn't half as treacherous as my own flesh and blood. Humph!"

And her complacency was not yet restored when she left the street-car on the nearest corner to Mr. Parker Dollingby's bachelor quarters, that were alight in a perfect blaze of bright cheer.

"It looks like a party," she thought.

But all the same she did not hesitate to go up the imposing stone steps and ring the bell, to which no response coming, she tried the door knob, and admitted herself into a large, brilliantly lighted hall, at the end of which was a room, from which came the sounds of revelry and jollification that had prevented her ring being heard.

Miss Miner went into the first door that stood ajar, and through another partly-closed door she saw the gay bachelor party—some ten or fifteen—merry over their wine.

"So that's the way Parker Dollingby does, is it?" she asked herself grimly, just as, the same instant, that gentleman rose high, and for a second silenced all others.

"Here's to the health of my most respected ancient mar[illegible]—a veritable old maid, all forlorn, whose legacy is a long time coming, but sure to get here some time. A cool $50,000 or so, boys; and imagine the swell we'll cut when the venerable Mehitable kicks the bucket. Drink to her, fellows!"

Somehow Miss Miner took herself silently out of the place. She was silent all the way to the hotel, and then, once in the room, locked the door, and sat down and—actually cried—and then went to bed, wondering if it was ever granted to mortals to come nearer to being made a fool of than she had been; and at two o'clock in the morning to awaken with a strang, sick feeling that was awful to endure in that big, lonely hotel, where she didn't know a living soul.

But she rang for assistance, and the servant brought her a physician, who happened to be staying over night, and Miss Miner's life was saved from the terrible attack of gastralgia by Dr. Frank Olevin.

"I'll pay you when I get home," she said, tersely. "You can go with me, if you don't mind my green vail and bag."

And so, after reaching home, where Ellice Dunning in readiness to leave by a train an hour later, opened the door in answer to an imperious summons, Miss Miner stalked in followed by Dr. Olevin.

"You needn't be frightened, Ellice," she said, in a wonderfully soft tone of voice. "I've changed my mind. I'm the fool, not you. Here's your beau; you can have him in welcome! And when you're married, I'm going to settle my fortune on you and let you live here, if you'll give me a room somewhere. I've changed my mind, I tell you, Ellice Dunning. Take off your things and go get a cup of coffee for us."

And that was the way little brown-eyed Ellice came into her double inheritance of love and fortune.

A VILLAGE OF TERRORS.

A Detroiter who had business in a village in Washtenaw county drove out there in a buggy, and of course went to the inn for his dinner. The landlord made no inquiries until after the meal was eaten and paid for and he then found opportunity to inquire:

"Were you going out to 'Squire Brown's place?"

"No."

"I didn't know but you were a lightning-rod man and I was going to say that the 'Squire has threatened to shoot the next one on sight. We don't go much on them. Loafers around here, and I'm glad you are somebody else. Maybe you are going over to Judge Hardy's to sell him some fruit trees for fall setting?"

"No."

"Well, that's lucky. Only yesterday the Judge was remarking to me that the next fruit-tree agent who entered his gate would want a coffin. Fact is, myself have got to do some kicking to pay for being swindled on grape vines. You are not a patent-right man, eh?"

"No."

"Well, that's a narrow escape for you. We've been swindled here on hay forks, cultivators, gates, pumps, churns and a dozen other things, and I'm keeping sixteen dozen bad eggs to use when the first patent-righter shows his face in this town. Perhaps you are a lecturer?"

"No, no."

"Well, you haven't lost anything. We never turn out very strong here to lectures. The last man who struck us lectured on 'Our Currency,' but didn't take in enough of it to pay for his supper. You are not a book canvasser?"

"No."

"That's another escape. We've been laid out here so often that if an agent should offer to sell a $20 Bible for fifty cents we'd suspect a trick to beat us. Strikes me now that you may be a lawyer?"

"No."

"Good 'nuff. Last one who settled here had to leave town at midnight, and we don't want any more. Say, what are you, anyway?"

"A politician," replied the Detroiter.

"A politician! Then git! For Heaven's sake! don't stand around here if you value your life! We have just impeached our pound-master for embezzling the public money, and the excitement is so intense that the Democrats will ride you on a rail or the Republicans duck you in the water-trough. Git right up and scoot!"—Detroit Free Press.

THE FLY.

Much has been said of the fly of the period, but few write about him who are bald-headed.

Hence we say a word. It is of no use any more to deny the horrible truth. Although as beautiful as a peri in other ways, our tresses on top have succumbed to the inclemency of the weather, and our massive brow is slowly creeping over toward the back of our neck. Nature makes all things even. If a man is possessed of such ravishing beauty and such winning ways that his power might become dangerous, she makes him bald-headed.

That is our fix.

When we have our hat on and go chasing down the street with that camel glide of ours, everyone asks who that noble-looking Apollo with the deep and melancholy eye is; but when we are at the office with our hat hung up on the French walnut side-board, and the sun comes softly in through the rosewood shutters and lights up the shellac polish on our intellectual dome, we are not so pretty.

Then it is that fly, with gentle tread and seductive song, comes and prospects around on our bump of self-esteem, and tickles us and makes us mad.

When we get where forbearance ceases to be a virtue, we haul off and slap the place where he was, while he goes over to the inkstand and snickers at us. After he has waded around in the carmine ink awhile, he goes back to the pump of spirituality and makes some red marks over it.

Having laid off his claim under the new mining law, he proceeds to sink on it.

If we write anything bitter these days; if we say aught of our fellow-man that is disagreeable or unjust, and for which we afterward get licked, it is because at times we get exasperated and are not responsible.

If the fly were large and weighed 200 pounds, and came in here and told us that if we didn't take back what we had said about him, he would knock out the window with our remains and let us fall a hundred feet into the busy street it wouldn't worry us so much, because then we would strangle him with one hand while we wrote a column editorial on Conkling with the other. We do that frequently. But a little fragile insect, with no home and no parents, and only four or five million brothers and sisters, gains our confidence, and then tickles our scalp till we have to write with a sheet of tar roofing over our head.

Then he comes in and helps us read our proof. We don't want him to help, but he insists on making corrections and putting punctuations in the wrong place, and putting full stops where they knock the sense all out of the paragraph.

If the fly could be removed from our pathway, we would march along on our journey to the tomb in a way that would be the envy and admiration of the civilized world. As it is, we feel that we are not making a very handsome record.—Boomerang.

NYE ON THE COMET.

The versatile editor of the Boomerang saw the comet the other morning under peculiar circumstances, which he thus describes:

Yesterday morning between 3 and 4 o'clock we were called from our bed by the presence of a sorrel cow with an inadequate tail in the grounds of our winter palace.

She had eaten a row of tube roses and some mignonette to sweeten her breath, and was just smelling of the statue of Eli Perkins, which stands on the west side of our boulevard, when we came up behind her with a bed slat and smote her on the snoot.

While merrily romping with her over the velvety lawn, our attention was suddenly called to a large 250 dollar comet, northwest by nor', and about three feet above the horizon, with its tail over the dashboard.

When first seen it was in perihelion with the dome of the court house, but while we watched it either the court house changed its position, or we did, and the space became more clearly defined.

Some are of the opinion that this comet is the one that appeared about twenty-five years ago, but our own idea is that it is a new one that has never been used.

It is something of the style of Roscoe Conkling, with a more subdued and pensive air, however, and is making good time.

It has a nucleus that shines with a nebulous light. It also carries with it a hyperbola and a parabola, in common valise.

A well-known astronomer claims that this is a comet which, according to the books, was not due yet for 200 years. There must be some mistake, however, unless it lost something when it was here 200 years ago, and has returned to see if it can find it. Still its running time may have been changed in order to stir up competition with other comets.

We had not time to fully investigate the wonderful celestial phenomenon, as people began to pass where we were taking observations, and noticing our simple costume called the attention of other people to us, and in a short time a large and demonstrative audience had gathered near us, which disturbed our scientific researches and concluded the early morning session.

WHAT A WOMAN CAN DO.

As wife and mother woman can make the fortune and happiness of her husband and children; and, if she did nothing else, surely this would be sufficient destiny. By her thrift, prudence and tact she can secure to her partner and to herself a competence in old age, no matter how small their beginning or how adverse a fate may be theirs. By cheerfulness she can restore her husband's spirit, shaken by the anxiety of business. By her tender care she can often restore him to health, if disease has overtasked his powers. By her counsel and love she can win him from bad company if temptation in an evil hour has led him astray. By her example, her precepts and her sex's insight into character, she can mold her children, however adverse their dispositions, into noble men and women. And, by leading in all things a true and beautiful life, she can refine, elevate and spiritualize all who come within reach; so that, with others of her sex emulating and assisting her, she can do more to regenerate the world than all the statesmen or reformers that ever legislated.

She can do much! perhaps more to degrade man if she chooses to do it. Who can estimate the evils that a woman has the power to do? As a wife she can ruin herself by extravagance, folly or want of affection. She can make a demon or an outcast out of a man who might otherwise become a good member of society. She can bring bickering, strife and discord into what has been a happy home. She can change the innocent babies into vile men and even into vile women. She can lower the moral tone of society itself and thus pollute legislation at the spring head. She can, in fine, become an instrument of evil instead of an angel of good.

Instead of making flowers of truth, purity, beauty and spirituality spring up in her footsteps till the earth smiles with a loveliness that is almost celestial, she can transform it to a black and arid desert, covered with scorn of all evil passion, and swept by the bitter blast of everlasting death. This is what woman can do for the wrong as well as the right. Is her mission a little one? Man may have a harder task to perform, a rougher road to travel, but he has none loftier or more influential than woman.

NOVEMBER.

The voters of Union County are to elect next November a Senator and Sheriff.

They are important positions and should be filled by men thoroughly competent and worthy.

The time for selecting candidates is fast approaching, and it becomes the Democracy to consider who shall be commissioned to receive popular support.

The Democratic party of Union abounds in nominating material of the best quality, but the honor can fall only upon two.

Let there be a full and friendly canvass of the merits of individuals, with the determination to cast aside personal and local preferences and zealously unite in making the expressed choice of the Convention victory at the polls.

Onward! Democrats!

THE COMMISSION.

The Commission appointed in accordance with a resolution of the last Legislature to propose amendments to the Constitution of New Jersey has been holding meetings at different places and listening to a diversity of sentiment.

We notice in a newspaper report that the following amendment regarding special legislation for municipalities has been agreed upon:

"The Legislature may pass special laws regulating the internal affairs of any municipality, only when such proposed law shall have been approved and asked for by the Township Committee, Board of Freeholders, Common Council or legislative body of such municipality; the same having been considered in at least two meetings of such body, and at least ten days' notice given between such meetings of the objects of the proposed legislation by advertisement in a paper printed in that locality, or by putting up notices in at least five of its prominent places. The Legislature may at any time repeal a special act heretofore or hereafter passed; but the title and date must be stated."

It is an ascertained truth that special legislation is a necessity for the proper government of cities, and that general laws for that purpose are impracticable, but, it is no less vitally important that, in all matters pertaining to municipal finances, debt and taxation, the will of the people should be formally obtained.

The fact of a Common Council asking the Legislature to pass a special act, although a dozen instead of two Council meetings may have been held and ample public notice thereof given, does not prove that the people want it. A Common Council may do many things as foreign to the public welfare as Alaska is to Patagonia.

The only safety abides in a special vote of the people when increased money is the question at issue.

That has heretofore saved Plainfield from debt and extortion, and if that had been observed in the case of some other cities of this State, the terrible effects of bankruptcy would not now be upon them.

The authority of the Legislature to make a law dependent upon a popular vote has been questioned. If such doubt exists, remove it by adding to the Constitution a clause something like this—

"The Legislature may cause the validity of any act relating to the finances of a City to be subject to the ascertained approval of a majority of legally qualified votes cast at an election duly announced and regularly held."

The all important object is to guard well THE RIGHTS AND POCKETS OF THE PEOPLE.

Fortunately, to amend the Constitution of New Jersey involves both Legislative ratification and a popular majority.

Citizens! Watch!

THE COUNCIL AGAIN AT FAULT.

Sec. 30 of an Act to Amend the Charter of the City of Plainfield, approved April 4th, 1872, says: "That the Common Council of said city, or a majority thereof, shall have the exclusive right and power to regulate, or prohibit the sale of spirituous and fermented liquors." On Monday evening last the Common Council by a vote of five (which is not a majority of that body) and two against, granted (?) Mr. Chas. H. King a license to "sell spirituous and fermented liquors in the building known as the Hotel Netherwood." This was done without referring the petition to the License Committee for examination as is customary and necessary, and without the ten day's publication provided for by a resolution presented by Mr. Whiton and adopted at a meeting of the Common Council held Jan. 12th, 1880. The Mayor has not signed the license and it is fair to suppose that he will not do so upon an understanding of the unusual manner of its presentation and the unprecedented method of its concession.

THE PRESIDENT'S CONDITION.

The College of Experimental Surgery at the White House continues to hold daily sessions, and bulletins are regularly issued claiming improvement in the President's condition. There is much reason, however, for disquiet over the slow recovery of the patient and every cause for uneasiness is presented. Another incision has been made since our last issue and the copious discharges however salutary from the surgeon's point of view, are a constant drain on the strength of the patient and the waste thus established must be steadily repaired to afford any prospect of ultimate recovery.

Of the Senators whose places are to be filled, seven are Republicans and one Democrat. The Senators holding over are: Republicans eight, Democrats five. The Secretary of State has forwarded to County Clerks the notices required by law when vacancies are to be filled.

Orville Grant, brother of General Grant, died at the Morris Plains Insane Asylum on Thursday, and his remains were brought to his late home in Elizabeth Sunday night by undertaker James C. Ogden. He leaves a wife and several children.

Fun Ahead. The Circus Is Coming.

Our citizens may all prepare for a Grand Holiday on Tuesday Aug. 23d, that being the date advertised for the Exhibition by Batcheller & Doris' Great Inter-Ocean Largest Show on Earth, at Plainfield. This gigantic consolidation of 12 colossal shows in one has been absorbing by purchase for the past three years all the smaller shows in the country, and have increased in size so suddenly that the public have scarcely ascertained the fact which is undisputed that the Batcheller & Doris Combination now own, control and exhibit more show property than any other similar organization in the country. They make a specialty of advertising and exhibiting exclusive features and novelties which cannot be duplicated or seen in any other show, and in addition to an immense menagerie and museum and circus, such as possessed by none of the other shows, call attention to some features which have never before been exhibited, such as the seven ton, two-horned, black hairy Rhinoceros, the only one ever imported to America; not the only Rhinoceros, remember, but the only one possessing two horns and covered with a coat of black hair two and a half inches long; also, the wonderful monster of the deep, a genuine Egyptian Bovalapus, which they positively assert is the only one ever in captivity and recently imported for them. This rare specimen was captured in the Mediterranean off the coast of Alexandria, Egypt. These two rare zoological specimens have already attracted the attention of scientists, and will probably only be exhibited with a travelling menagerie the present season. Almost fabulous sums have been offered Messrs. Batcheller & Doris to secure them for one of the leading zoological gardens. Another exclusive feature possessed by no other show is Zazel, better known as the Human Cannon Ball, who is fired from a massive mortar seventy-five feet into mid-air, and afterwards walks a wire the size of a knitting needle, stretched across the top of the canvass. Her performances are pronounced by all who have seen them as the most exciting and miraculous ever witnessed. In addition to these novelties, they have the only group of Native Zulus ever in this country, a genuine band of savage Sioux Warriors, direct from Sitting Bull's Band, Prince Satsuma's Royal Japanese Troupe of Athletes, Jugglers and Necromancers, Morris' Band of Georgia Jubilee Singers, Mdlle. Sara, the renowned French Bareback Equestrian (first appearance in America), Romeo Sebastian, Champion Bareback Rider of America, W. J. Morgan, the fearless Hurdle Rider, the celebrated Siegrist Children in gymnastic exercises, and a Grand Double Circus Company, all exceling in their various specialties. The Grandest Street Demonstration, free to all, ever witnessed in this country will be made at 9 o'clock on morning of exhibition, and will actually eclipse anything of the kind you ever saw. Excursion trains will be run on all railroad and Steamboat lines at greatly reduced rates of fare, to bring in the multitudes.

NORTH PLAINFIELD PARAGRAPHS.

The Colored people's Camp Meeting commences in Hyde's Grove August 13th.

Mr. R. R. Fairchild the popular furniture dealer of Plainfield, has recently purchased the property of the late W. H. Vandeventer on Grand View avenue, and intends becoming a resident of this township.

A laborer named Pepper, but a few days in the employ of Hon. David Smalley, near Sterling, died from sunstroke on Saturday last while working on the farm of that gentleman. The man was one of two brothers recently arrived in this country from Ireland. The other brother worked on a farm for a Mr Kenney, at White House.

On Monday afternoon last pedestrians on Somerset street and residents in the immediate neighborhood of Wooden's Grove were astonished at the sounds of music, dancing and laughing boys and girls proceeding therefrom. Your reporter was one of the astonished ones, and with the usual "poke your nose in other people's business," belonging to this fraternity, specially, (but honest only in search of items) entered the grove and soon found the cause for so much music and merriment. Nothing daunted by a table spread with sandwiches, cake of every variety and lemonade, we proceeded to the dancing platform and found Mrs. H. N. Spencer and all her scholars enjoying themselves hugely. It seemed evident that no such a thing could be as recess in vacation, for on assembling the scholars on the departure for home, the line of march was taken up and gone through with, just as from the school room, showing discipline not often seen. Among the visitors to the grove we noticed Mr. Al. Johnson and friend Mrs. Walsh of New York, also Mrs. C. Boice, who rendered some fine vocal music. Success to Mrs. Spencer and her school, particularly the school picnics. We hope to be one of her guests next August.

Augustus Mobus, a well-known citizen of North Plainfield Township died at his residence, near French's Mills, Washingtonville, on Saturday afternoon last, after a brief illness, from erysipelas in the face. Deceased had been ailing about two weeks previous, but failed to call a physician until three days before he died. Dr. Chas. Tomlinson, of this city, was then summoned, who at once gave his opinion that Mr. Mobus could not survive many days or hours. Augustus Mobus was born in Sassen Kohrhessar, Germany, and came to this country when in the 13th year of his age, settling in Warren Township. About 15 years ago, while engaged in sharpening rails for an employer on the "Spencer Farm," Washington Valley, he accidentally cut himself in the knee by a slip of the axe he was using. The wound continued to grow worse until physicians decided that the limb must be amputated to save his life. This was done, although strenuously opposed to by the injured man. It afterward became necessary to again amputate the limb farther up. Mr. M's loss of his leg seriously interfered with his labors and he gradually drifted into politics, he being a Democrat of strong proclivities. His influence among the Germans of his County and Township was considerable, and he was always a hard worker at the polls. Some three years after receiving his above mentioned injury, he was nominated for Overseer of the Road in the district wherein he lived. Mr. George Demler was also a candidate for the position, and by party usage entitled to it, but he generously stood aside and assisted his friend Mobus to gain the nomination (which was equivalent to election) knowing that he was more in need of its emoluments than himself. Mr. Mobus held this office for some three years, satisfactorily to his constituents, and was then elected a Town Committeeman, which position he held when North Plainfield Township was created from Warren Township. Residing within the limits of the new Township he was elected a member of its Town Committee for another term. His name was also prominently mentioned in connection with the office of Chosen Freeholder of Somerset County and member of Assembly from his district. During all these years he was engaged in the business of huckster for the country market, and had quite an extensive business.

Deceased leaves a widow and nine children, none of whom are married. He was married twice. His first wife was a Miss Link, of Washington Valley, by whom he had five children, 3 girls and 2 boys. His second wife was a Miss Goodman, from the same locality. The fruits of this union were four children. He was about 41 years of age at the time of his death.

The funeral ceremonies of deceased took place at the German Lutheran Church of this city, on Tuesday last. The Rev. Mr. Schlieder delivered an eloquent discourse in German which was appropriate and touching. The pall bearers were Messrs. F. Casper, J. Blatz, W. Heldeloff, P. Eickert and C. and J. Keller.

FIRE MATTERS.

The Board of Managers of the Plainfield Fire Department met in adjourned meeting on Wednesday evening. All present excepting Mr. Depew. The reading of the minutes of the previous meeting was dispensed with. Mr. Jones from the Com. on Wells reported that the fire well on Second street had been repaired. The following bills were approved and ordered paid: J. F. Preston, $67.80; J. R. Frazee, 1.20; Jake Seiphen, 3; Henry Hamilton, 5; T. O. Doane, 16.66; Wm. Grattan, 1.60; J. B. Miller, 10; Wm. Laing, 2; Curtiss & Griffen, 46.09, and Valentine Utzinger, 7.20. Two claims of John N. Schenck were referred to the Com. on Repairs & Supplies for examination and certification, and bill of Runyon & Leonard returned for presentation on proper blank. The Constitution and By-Laws of Engine Co., No. 2, which had been referred to the Sec. of the Board for examination, were reported on by that officer as conforming with the rules of the department and were approved by the Board. The Com. on Repairs & Supplies was authorized to make such changes regarding the water works in No. 2 house and such repairs as were needed to the doors of No. 2 house, as it considered proper. The same Committee was instructed to have the lamps in front of No. 1, No. 2 and Alert houses lighted at the best figures possible. In reply to a question of Foreman Saltzman, Mr. Morris stated that he did not consider it was in the province of the Board to compel any fireman to purchase or wear one of the badges it was proposed to adopt. And that unless all the companies agreed to use them it was not the intention of the Board to get any at all. Foreman Doane stated that he was authorized by Warren and Gazelle Eng. Cos. to request the Board to change its regular meeting to the second Wednesday in each month in order to allow the companies to attend. Mr. Jones gave notice of his intention to propose such amendment to the rules and the Board then adjourned.

MISCELLANEOUS.

AN ORDINANCE

Regulating Sewage and Drainage in Peace Street, North Avenue and adjacent territory.

Whereas, on the 30th day of December, 1874, an ordinance was passed regularly laying a sewer to drain through Peace street, certain territory adjacent thereto, and

Whereas, said sewer is a public work under the care of the city, and

Whereas, said sewer has been used by the railroad company and, to some extent, by other parties for the disposition of sewage matters in a way to create a nuisance, and to endanger the public health, and

Whereas, the Mayor reports a willingness of the railroad company to construct, at its own expense, a capacious and substantial receptacle, on plans as specified, for the deposit of said sewage matter, in order to the abatement of the nuisance; now, therefore,

The Inhabitants of the city of Plainfield, by their Common Council do enact as follows:

Section 1. That the improvement as set forth in the letter of the railroad company bearing date July 5, 1881, and the plans hereto attached, upon the conditions therein set forth and the drainage system described therein, are hereby approved, authorized and accepted.

Sec. 2. That the said drainage be under the care of the street commissioner, who in all things relative thereto shall act under advice of the street committee.

Sec. 3. That the street commissioner is directed to construct at once, at an expense not to exceed $50, an additional cesspool for the reception of overflow or waste drainage at some convenient point on the line of the Peace street sewer.

Sec. 4. That any private citizen may, by the payment in advance on the first day of August of each year of ten dollars to the city treasurer, make properly trapped sewage connection with the sewer, under arrangements to be approved by the street committee, and may maintain the same at the discretion of the said committee so long as the said fee is annually paid.

Sec. 5. That in case where the terms of the last section (14) are not complied with the street commissioner is hereby charged with the duty of severing any private sewage connection with the said sewer.

Sec. 6. That all ordinances and resolutions and parts of ordinances and resolutions inconsistent herewith are hereby repealed.

Adopted by the Common Council, Aug. 8, 1881.
Approved by the Mayor, Aug. 10, 1881.
L. V. F. RANDOLPH, Mayor.
Attest:—O. B. LEONARD, City Clerk. 12a1w

A STRAW hat was picked up at Madison avenue after the fire last week. The owner will derive information of its whereabouts at this office.

WELCOME rain since our last issue has naturally helped the growing corn and the cooler weather following materially relieved suffering humanity.

IF you propose making an exhibit of your wares or crops at the approaching Fair of the "U. & M. C. M. A. A.," secure your space for entering the same by applying to the Secretary.

PLAINFIELD'S "oldest inhabitant" Jack Cuff, a colored man, who claims to be 104 years of age, was observed walking through Park Avenue on Monday, at a smart pace, contentedly smoking his clay pipe.

EVERY active fireman in any volunteer Fire Department in this State, is entitled to a reduction of $5 on his taxes (if they exceed that amount) according to the provisions of a law passed by the last Legislature.

RICHARD Vail, a well-known former resident of Plainfield, died recently in the far West, intelligence of the same reaching his relatives in this city a few days ago. Mr. V. was well known to many of our citizens.

FARMERS and others who desire a superior article in the fertilizing line, should read the advertisement in another column by Elisha Sheppard. The article offered for sale by him is pronounced the best in the market by those who have tried it.

LOVERS of the game ten-pins, are reminded that there are two excellent bowling alleys at Blatz's hotel, North Plainfield, where also may be procured Balentine's celebrated lager beer, on draught. A fine lunch is set out every Saturday evening, between the hours of 8 and 10 o'clock.

A LARGE party from Green Village and Liberty Corner visited the "Rock House" on Wednesday and enjoyed themselves in picnicing and dancing. Prof. Frazee furnished music for the occasion. Hardly a day passes but that large picnic parties from the surrounding country visit this delightful spot.

AT the adjourned administrator's sale of the property of Alx. Dunham, deceased, on Monday last, only the homestead property, on 4th street, was sold, the purchaser being Mr. Geo. H. Babcock, for $1,975. The sale of the rest of the estate was adjourned for one month, the exact date of which will be given in due time.

THE water power in the old mill on the Mystic property is being put in order. The raceway leading to it through Mr. John Taylor Johnston's property, over which there has been so much law controversy, is about completed. A stone culvert has been erected over the race the entire width of Farragut avenue where it crosses that thoroughfare.

ON Tuesday, August 16th, at 10 o'clock a. m., the stock, crops, tools, implements, furniture, etc., on the farm lately occupied by Jacob F. Randolph, deceased, situated on the road leading to New Providence, beyond Seely's paper mills, will be sold at public auction, by order of the administrator, John H. Van Winkle. See adv. in this issue.

"GOOD-BYE, until Monday morning," was the salutation a colored belligerent got from friends as he was being marched off to the "cooler" by officer Randolph Saturday night last. Judge Runyon decided on the morning in question that "George" had imbibed too much benzine, been noisy, resisted an officer (of his own color) and therefore assessed him $2.00 for his fun.

THE Congregationalists have been fortunate in securing Dr. Albert S. Hunt, Secretary of the American Bible Society, to preach for them on next Sunday at their morning service in the Seventh-Day church, Central avenue and Fifth street. The Doctor's well-known ability and reputation is a promise for good words, and those who may go to hear him are sure of a good sermon.

DR. Charles Thiers, of this city, has a son not yet five years of age, who rides a bicycle to perfection, mastering control of the machine at once after purchase, although he had never before ridden one of them. The Dr. says he will match him against any boy of his age in the State for a race on the bicycle. Little Willie certainly rides well on the "mersheen."

PER order of the Committee on Wells of the Fire Board, Street Commissioner Hand on Saturday last dumped a couple of loads of gravel in the depression of the road-bed about the Second street Fire Well, caused by the earth settling after the steamers worked on the well last week. He previously descended into the well and found the walls perfect in every respect and over 6 feet of water in it.

THE interior of Fine's segar store, on Park avenue, has received a new coat of paint, Mr. H. Pound doing the work, while the proprietor has indulged in new shades to his show windows. The owner of the property should now tear up the concrete payement in front of the store and put down a good, substantial blue stone flagging. By the way, Fine has for sale Lorillard's "Climax" chewing tobacco, a superior article for chewers.

AMONG the many narrow escapes from drowning happening at Summer resorts along the sea shore and not reported in papers, was that of Mrs. Fred Martin, a resident of Plainfield, and now stopping at a cottage in Asbury Park. While bathing in the surf one day last week, she was suddenly taken with a chill and was rescued with difficulty by a member of the life saving service. She has since been confined to her room by an attack of pneumonia.

ON Monday last as a lady customer was making purchases at the store of Parsons & Co., a colored man entered the store, ostensibly for the purpose of asking aid for a camp meeting. As the lady's back was turned he picked up from the counter her pocket book. Discovering her loss she accused him of the theft, when he walked to the other end of the counter, and while denying his guilt, deposited his booty there. Talks of arrest were made but not fulfilled. The full benefit of the law should have been accorded this sneak thief.

IT is not often that one gets such a handsome present as did our friend Joe Blatz, of North Plainfield, on Tuesday last. It being the occasion of his birthday, his wife presented him with a handsome breech-loading "Bonehill" gun and necessary accoutrements, purchased from Vanderbeek's, on Park Avenue. "Joe" is as proud as a peacock over his better-half's gift, and boasts of how he will slaughter the blue-jays and sparrows when the "open season" commences for game. Such a birth-day present is one we would not object to receiving ourself.

THREE young Misses had a narrow escape from serious injury on the corner of Park and North avenues last Tuesday. They were riding in a buggy behind a horse, which, [illegible], wanted someone behind him who knew how to drive. Becoming restless at a passing railroad train, the animal began to back, and the driver helped the overturn of the buggy by pulling on the reins. All three were thrown out, and happily escaped any serious injury, the shafts and dash-board of the buggy being wrecked. Bystanders caught the horse before he could start to run and probably averted a calamity, as one of the young ladies, the driver, held on to the reins when the carriage was overturned on her.

NEXT Saturday is Amboy day.

OVER $2,150 in premiums will be offered at the approaching Union & Middlesex Counties' Fair, for trotting.

THE next Fair of the Union & Middlesex Counties' Mutual Agricultural Ass'n, at Plainfield, Sept. 26, 27, 28, 29 and 30, will be a grand affair.

FOUR others almost met their death while bathing at the same time and place as Mr. Adam Craig, whose decease is recorded elsewhere. They were rescued and resuscitated with much difficulty.

A MEETING of Gazelle Eng. Co. No. 1 will be held in their parlors on Monday evening next, Aug. 15th. A full attendance of the members is solicited, as business of importance is to be transacted.

MADAME Rentz's female minstrel troupe will give one of its unequalled entertainments in Van Deventer Hall on Tuesday evening, Aug. 17. This troupe gave great satisfaction when here last year, and will undoubtedly draw a full house as they deserve to.

THE best article in the way of a window catch and sash holder we have seen in a long time, is that for which Mr. E. Shepherd, of Bound Brook, has the agency. A working model may be seen at J. H. Force's Billiard Parlor, opposite the Post Office.

THE Crescent avenue Presbyterians, as usual, will auspiciously close the excursion season by their trip to Long Branch and Ocean Grove on Tuesday the 30th. All are invited to accompany the scholars, and the customary "big time" will surely result.

THE will be a Union Temperance meeting held in the Park avenue Baptist Church on Sunday evening at eight o'clock. An address will be delivered by Mr. W. H. H. Bartram of Paterson. Those who have heard Mr. Bartram pronounce him one of the ablest advocates of the cause.

MRS. Wm. Bunn of Somerville, while canning fruit on Tuesday last, was burned to death by her apron catching fire from the stove over which she was leaning. Her little boy, aged 9 years, who was with her, was unable to afford the unfortunate lady any assistance and she was so terribly burned from her knees up that death resulted after five hours of the greatest agony. The deceased's husband is a brother of Mrs. Sam'l. H. Stevenson of West Front steet, this city.

ANOTHER instance of the carelessness of drivers leaving their horses standing in front of the Post Office with only children in the wagon, occurred Thursday morning. A vehicle containing three small children was thus left while the driver went inside the P. O. The animal attached became frightened and started to run away. A serious result would have followed, but for the fortunate circumstance of Mr. Joseph Cutter rushing into the street, and at the peril of his life, arresting the flight of the runaway.

Mount Holly can boast of better shaded streets than any other town in the state.—News.

It is an empty boast, though. Flemington can beat Mt. Holly all to death in the way of shade. Our Main street furnishes an unbroken shade its entire length of nearly a mile. What everybody says must be true, and everybody who visits the town says that it beats all other towns in the State for its luxuriant shade and beauty.—Hunterdon Democrat.

Oh! come off! Plainfield takes the cake for shade, and don't you please forget it. We have handsomer shade trees—and girls too,—than two such towns as Mt. Holly or Flemington, put together.

THE temperance people of New York State have taken hold of a subject, which if carried out as stated, will be an important and beneficent feature to the temperance cause. They propose to ask brewers of malt liquors twelve leading questions relating to the ingredients used in the manufacture of beer, and also for samples to analyze. As it is supposable that the temperance folks have already made analysis of samples of beer now sold by these brewers, they will have no chance to help their cause by furnishing samples of a better grade than those they are now selling for a pure article.

A Fit Subject for the Reform School.

Whitney Frazee, a young 16 year old lad, was arrested in this city on Tuesday last for stealing a watch from the flag shanty of a switchman at Roselle. Young Frazee stole a ride to Roselle that morning on a coal train, and when the switchman's back was turned slipped into the shanty, took the watch and started on his return home, showing the watch to the driver of a grocer's wagon, in which he rode a portion of the way. The switchman, in company with another railroad employee, immediately came to this city, and hunting up young Frazee accused him of the theft, which he strenuously denied, finally admitting the fact, and sending a companion to his home for the article, telling him where it was secreted. The lad's father was informed of the fact, but stated that "Whit" had become so incorrigible that he could do nothing with him, and thought the Reform School would be the best place for him. A complaint was issued against the boy before Justice Wadsworth, and he was committed to the County Jail at Elizabeth. It was found that under the law he was too old to be admitted to the Reform School, and he will therefore have the consolation of a few week's sojourn at Elizabeth until the Grand Jury meets, to answer to the charge of larceny, unless he is released on bail before that body sits. His mother is near heart-broken by the bad ways of this son. Perhaps this arrest will prove a salutory lesson to him. He has long been in the habit of stealing rides on coal trains, and it is a miracle that he has not been brought home a mangled corpse before this.

Moonlight Pic-nic.

The moonlight pic-nic given by the young men of St. Mary's parish, in aid of a fund to furnish the residence of the pastor of St. Mary's church, Rev. Father Morris, on Thursday night of last week, was a grand success and an enjoyable occasion. The pic-nic was given on the grounds adjoining St. Mary's Hall, on Fourth street, while the Hall itself was utilized for dancing privileges, Bannan's orchestra furnishing excellent music. There was a large attendance, and the pleasures of the occasion were continued until the small hours of morning. The grounds were illuminated by innumerable Chinese lanterns, the bright moon lending additional light and charm to the scene. Those tired of dancing found pleasure in promenading the extensive grounds, while handsome young ladies solicited their patronage in the purchase of nick-nacks and eatables from behind stands and booths erected on the grounds. From other stands were dispensed lemonade, sarsaparilla, and other harmless beverages. A feature of the occasion was a drawing for a large iced cake, which was won by Miss J. Fields. The Committee of Arrangements, Messrs. Pat. Muldoon, H. O'Donnell, M. Fields, Thomas Marley and D. McCarthy, did everything in their power to make the occasion an enjoyable one to all who attended. We learn that the proceeds netted a handsome sum toward the object intended, and that it is the intention to hold another pic-nic on the same grounds about a month hence, due notice of which will be given. The Committee desire to thank those ladies who kindly furnished refreshments for the occasion, as well as to Mr. Tier for his liberal donation of ice.

Found Dead in a Barn.

The residents of our neighboring village, Scotch Plains, were greatly excited the morning of Monday last, by the discovery of the dead body of a woman in the hay loft of the barn of Mr. C. Snyder, who resides about a quarter of a mile from Seeley's paper mills, on the road to New Providence. Upon investigation the body proved to be that of a well-known and hard-working woman, named Annie Decker, who mysteriously disappeared from the residence of Mr. J. T. Vail, of this city, on Wednesday of last week, where she had been employed for some time as a laundrywoman. This family spoke in the highest terms of her and could not account for her sudden disappearance, except that for a short time she had acted queer in her mind. As soon as Mr. Vail learned of the circumstances he set about notifying the proper authorities of the case. The remains being found in North Plainfield Township, Justice McLoughlin sent an official to the premises, who after viewing the remains, decided that an inquest was necessary, as the woman had been heard repeatedly to declare that she would kill herself. Undertaker Runyon, of Plainfield, was delegated to bring the remains to his establishment, where Dr. Long, of North Plainfield, and Dr. Westcott, of Scotch Plains, proceeded to hold a post mortem examination, after the Justice had empanelled the following jury: James Henry, foreman; Geo. W. Kelsey, Harvey Bird, Isaac Coulter, Miles Compton, Lewis Willett, John Becker, Geo. Collins, S. Lester Horton, Geo. Kenselring, Jacob Keller, Jacob Long, Wm. A. Smith. On the person of deceased was found sewed in her clothing the sum of $322.90, while in bundles near her were found a quantity of fine clothing. After viewing the body, the jury adjourned at 2 o'clock to meet at Blatz's Hotel, at 7 o'clock in the evening, to hear the report of the Coroner's inquest. At that time, after hearing all the evidence in the case they rendered a verdict that deceased came to her death from disease of the liver. No traces of poison were found in the stomach.

Deceased was an aunt of Postmaster Fred Decker of Westfield, and a sister to Mrs. Albert Vanderveer of this city. She left a will bequeathing all her effects to Mrs. Vanderveer.

THE season in which, under the law, woodcock may be shot in New Jersey, closed on August 1, and simultaneously the doors of New York were thrown open to sportsmen. From September 30 to December 16 the woodcock season is again open in this State.

OUR acquaintance with the "back-bone" of our County Attorney Mr. P. H. Gilhooley, leads us to imagine that he will survive the scathing resolutions recently adopted by the Plainfield Common Council in denunciation (!) of his communication to the Board of Freeholders. Mr. Gilhooley's resignation is not expected.

The Next Excursion

Will be that of the St. Mary's T. A. B. Society, of this city to Excelsior Grove, on the Hudson, Thursday, Aug. 18th. Excellent music will be provided for the occasion. The excursionists will go by the steamboat Gen. Sedgwick, which has a steam calliope on board. Trains leave this city at 7:30 in the morning. The tickets are put down to the low figures of $1.00 for adults and 50 cents for children. Go on this excursion if you desire to enjoy a good time.

Death of Adam Craig.

Our community was shocked on Monday afternoon last by the news received that Mr. Adam Craig, an old and respected citizen of Dunellen, and well-known in this city, had come to his death while bathing at Asbury Park. The news soon proved to be too true, his son James receiving a telegram to the effect that his father's body was then on its way to his home in Dunellen. From a private letter to us by Mr. Jas. Phillips, of Evona, we take the following facts relating to the sad occurrence. He says:

"Arriving here on the morning of the 6th, the first to meet me was Adam Craig; a finer specimen of health was hard to find, and expressed himself as never feeling better in his life. He found a boarding place for my wife who has been sick, next house to where he himself was stopping. He left us there, and soon after appeared in his bathing suit going to the beach. I went with him; going along he talked of how he liked to lay and float around in the surf, and said what a good time he had on Saturday for near two hours, and that he was going to get his wife down next week. Arriving at the bathing ground we stood awhile, and tossing his hat to me he ran to the water as lively as a young boy. He swam around and floated, and I did not take my eyes from him it seemed to me not a second, when after about 10 minutes he seemed to be making for the shore. I observed that he made no progress, although he could stand just in that spot as the tide was going out. At this time my attention first was called to the way in which the bathing master was looking at him; and I said do you think there's something wrong? At that moment he fastened the life line to himself and rushed into the sea, and then I could see there was something wrong; and when he was brought to shore there was not a sign of life; from the time he went into water until he was brought on shore, was inside of 15 minutes. Dr. Lawrence of 29 E. 125th St., N. Y., was on the spot, and four other Doctors worked faithfully on him for nearly an hour. Drs. Van Wranken, J. H. Gunning, 24 E 65th St., N. Y., Wilbrock, and J. H. Polhamus, Colbra college, all agree that it was a case of apoplexy; and it must be so, for I am positive the body never left the surface of the water."

Mr. Craig had resided in the vicinity of Dunellen for a number of years on a farm and had amassed considerable wealth since he came to this country from Scotland, the land of his birth. He was universally esteemed as a good citizen and Christian gentleman. He leaves a wife, who is an invalid, and two sons, James and William, and a daughter, Mrs. James Blair, of Dunellen.

Personalia.

Rev. Dr. Yerkes is at Saratoga.

Rev. E. M. Rodman is vacating on Long Island's shores.

James Clark, Esq., has returned to his home in this city from his business trip to St. Louis.

Dr. Henry R. Cannon, (ex-County Clerk,) is confined to his residence in Elizabeth by illness.

Rev. Dr. H. J. Burlingham, of Chicago, will occupy the pulpit of the First Baptist church next Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Delgado, of this city, are among the recent registrations on the books of the Cahill House, Asbury Park.

The Occidental Hotel, at Coney Island, now numbers among its efficient clerks, Mr. Merritt, formerly of Hotel Netherwood.

Mr. C. F. Goddard and family, having spent a few pleasant weeks at the Adirondacks, have returned to their home in this city.

Mr. Geo. Demler has again been making improvements about his hotel property, in laying down a new flooring on his piazza.

Mr. George Wotherspoon is the composer of the very beautiful galop published in this week's issue of the New York Mirror.

Wm. Potter, Esq., Secretary of the Somerset County Agricultural Association, was in our city on monday last, on official business.

Mayor Randolph having returned from his trip to the sea shore, President Whiton goes with his family for a few weeks to Beach Haven.

Mr. John H. Van Winkle and family left on Thursday for a few days' sojourn at the seashore. They are registered at the Ocean House, Long Branch.

Mr. Arthur Griffin, of the firm of Curtis & Griffen, hardware merchants of this city, left on Monday last for a two week's pleasure trip among friends in Maine.

The genial countenance of Sheriff Ryder was seen on our streets on Tuesday last. Of course he had some disagreeable official business to transact.

Mr. J. B. Wrighton, mason builder of this city, has exchanged his property here for a farm at Ambleton, Talbot Co., Maryland, and will remove his family thence and engage in farming.

Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Bushnell have returned from their pleasure trip to Green County, N. Y. Mr. B. left at this office a sample of delicious maple sugar of his own manufacture while on their trip.

Miss Mamie DeCamp, of Chester, N. J., after a 2 week's visit with her friend, Miss Nellie Pangborn, of North Plainfield, returned to her home yesterday, to the regret of her many acquaintances and friends.

Mrs. W. E. Smalley, daughter of our esteemed citizen Geo. Hoadley, Esq., is spending a few weeks at the White Sulphur Springs, W. Va. Andrews' American Queen, in a recent issue, speaks of her as "a very notable-looking personage."

Our respected and weighty friend, Joseph Edwards, of Westfield Township, paid us a visit on Monday last. "Uncle Joe" feels the effect of the warm weather, tipping the beam of the scales at only 309 lbs., when he used to weigh 346.

Plainfield's local expressman, Augustus Frazee, started on a two week's vacation trip to Ohio and the West on Tuesday last. He will combine pleasure with business during his absence. "Gus" is a faithful worker and needs the vacation. We hope he will have a pleasant time.

Mr. Mulford Estil returned on Wednesday last from a two week's trip through Central Illinois. He visited several former Plainfielders who have settled in the West, and expresses himself by saying that the West is a great place for farming, but to live in give him Plainfield.

Abraham Klisheimer, brother-in-law to ex-Chief Breen, spent last week among friends and relatives in this city. "Abe" is an old member of the Fire Department of New York city, his company being No. 10 truck, stationed in Fulton street, and chooses to spend his vacation among his numerous friends in Plainfield.

Mr. Auguste Saltzman has just been awarded by the judges at the Switzerland exposition, with the first medal of silver for the finest display of watches and the greatest perfection and improvements in movements. This is the second received by this manufacturer, and is a most valuable one by reason of the extensive competition that occurred upon the occasion.

Mr. Geo. F. Brown, of North Plainfield, of the firm of G. F. & G. E. Brown, shade manufacturers, N. Y. city, started on Monday, in company with his wife on a two week's pleasure trip to Windham, Greene County, N. Y. They adopted the pleasurable plan of driving in a buggy to New York City, then embarking on a steamboat to the Catskills, where again they take their conveyance and drive to their point of destination.

The sympathies of many friends are with the family of the late Mrs. Lemuel Hedden, whose decease occurred suddenly on Monday night last after an illness of only three and a half hours. Mrs. H. was apparently in the full enjoyment of health until about eight o'clock, p. m. of that day, when she was suddenly attacked with apoplexy, and died at 11:30 the same night. Deceased was an old resident of Plainfield, highly respected and leaves a family of five grown up and married children, all males. Her funeral, which occurred on Thursday, was largely attended, her remains being interred in Evergreen Cemetery, this city.

Painful Accident.

Saturday morning last, while a young man named Robert Skinner, a trusted employee of Mr. J. F. Wilson, residing on Green Brook road, North Plainfield, (old Pride property) was engaged in attending to his stable duties, he slipped on the floor of one of the stalls, and broke one of his legs below the knee. He was conveyed to his residence near the scene of the accident, and the injured limb set by Dr. Probasco. "Bob" is doing as well as can be expected under the circumstances.

Tableaux at Hotel Netherwood.

A series of tableaux was given at the Hotel Netherwood on Tuesday evening last, by the young lady and gentlemen guests of that resort. The parlors were filled upon the occasion and a most pleasurable evening resulted. The programme included many beautiful pictures, that were commendably presented by the Misses Fechsimer, Nathan, Rogers, Colegate, Stratton, Allen and Solomon, and Master S. Fechsimer. The event was ostensibly for the benefit of the "Seaside Sanitorium" and a collection subsequently taken up resulted most satisfactorily.

Common Council Proceedings.

MONDAY EV'G, Aug. 8, 1881.

Council met in special meeting.

Members all present except Messrs. Darling, Gilbert and A. H. Smith.

Pres. Whiton in the chair.

Minutes of last meeting read and approved.

By the Pres., a com'n from A. B. Dunlap declining to serve as member of Council. Filed.

By Mr. Waring, petition from Gabriel Bachman for permission to enlarge his dwelling on Second street. Also, petition from P. M. French for permission to tear down some old wooden buildings, and remove thereon an old blacksmith shop to be used as a carriage shop, and also permission to erect two brick store buildings. On motion, ref'd to Fire, Water & Lamp Coms., with power.

By Mr. Finch, a petition from Mr. Chas. King, for license to keep an inn and tavern at Hotel Netherwood, and to sell spirituous and fermented liquors therein. Ref'd to License Com.

By Mr. Hamilton, the following police claims: Chas. W. Dodd, $58.34; Robert Randolph, 22.18; G. Grant, 6.50; James Martin, 3.75; Geo. M. Smith, 1.50. Ref'd.

By Mr. H. Smith, the following claims: N. Y. & N. J. Globe Gas Co., $49; J. O. Nodyne, 6.60. Ref'd.

By Mr. Finch, the following claims: P. Casey, $14; Mrs. J. Wilkins, 12; Jas. Ross, 8; P. Langenbahn, 6. Ref'd.

By Mr. Guion, the following claims: Chas. W. Kimball, $128.52; N. Runyon, 150; J. A. Hubbard, 165.75; Dr. H. H. Lowrie, 62.50; Wm. Hand, 50; Jas. O'Neil, 5; Runyon & Leonard, 47.10; W. L. Force & Bro., 33.10; Wm. Hand, 22.50. Ref'd

By the Pres., the following opinion of Corporation Counsel:

I am requested to give an opinion as to the legality of that part of the tax ordinance of the present year which provides for a library fund.

The law which authorizes a tax for this purpose was approved March 14th, 1879, (P. L. 1879 c. 161, p. 262.) This tax is to be levied and collected in the same manner as are general taxes for city purposes (Sec. 1 of Act just cited.)

The method of raising city taxes, so far as it is provided for in the charter, is pointed out in section 17 of that instrument.

The language is "It shall and may be lawful for the Common Council of said city to order and cause to be assessed and raised by tax, &c."

In the absence of legal provisions prescribing any specific mode of procedure it is competent for the Common Council to "order" the tax raised by resolution or any other method (not repugnant to established parliamentary rules) which amounts to an unequivocal exercise of the power conferred.

Such being the case, it is not important whether the ordinance in question was passed at the same meeting at which it was amended.

The Common Council "ordered" the tax to be raised in an unequivocal manner and the tax is, in my judgment, legal.

Respectfully submitted,
CHAS. W. KIMBALL.

Dated Aug. 1, 1881.

Filed.

By the same, report and com'n from Com'r of Alms Vanderbeek:

Finding the burial plot for the poor entirely full I, with the advice of Mr. A. Gilbert, the member of the Alms Committee, bought the adjoining plot in the Presbyterian Cemetery, North Plainfield, 19 feet wide by 40 feet long. Price $40. I have been under the necessity of making several burials already in it. What is your pleasure in the matter?

A. VANDERBEEK.

On motion, report filed, and the action of the Alms Com. sustained by Council.

By the Pres., the following com'n from Assessor Hubbard:

Plainfield, N. J.,
August 1, 1881.

To the Honorable Common Council of the city of Plainfield:

Gentlemen: On July 16th the County Collector Mr. F. Sheridan made a requisition upon me as the assessor that I should levy in addition to the amount for State School and County taxes for the year 1881 the sum of $3,115.05, being the amount of deficiency for last year together with interest upon the same to July 15th 1881.

Will your Honorable body decide whether it is expedient to levy this sum in addition to the State School and County taxes this year and so inform me at your next meeting.

Very Respectfully
J. A. HUBBARD, Assessor.

The amounts to raise for this year are

County	$18,[illegible]
State School	9,822.00
Total	28,[illegible]

The State School is $2,[illegible] more than 1880.
The County is $771.21 less than 1880.
Making in the total $1,228.49 more than 1880.

By Mr. Finch, the following res. pertaining to above:

Resolved, That while it is the opinion of this Common Council that it is not within its province or a part of its duty to direct or in any way control the action of the Assessor in relation to State and County taxes, it is also of the opinion that it is his duty to obey the plain directions of the law upon the subject, as found in Section 33 of the Act concerning taxes, approved April 14th, 1846, (Revision p. 1148.)

Adopted, and the com'n filed.

J. VAN WINKLE,
City Treasurer.

Filed.

At the call for report from Aud. Com., Mr. H. Smith announced that he was the only member of the com. present.

Mr. Tyler moved that the rules be suspended for a report from the Aud. Com. Carried.

Mr. H. Smith, the following claims as correct from Aud. Com.: N. Y. & N. J. Globe Gas Co., $596.12; Plainfield Gas Co., 477.31; C. W. Dodd, 58.34; Robert Randolph, 18.32; Morgan Bird, 62.50; E. Hapeny, 9; Berry & Thorn, 12.50; J. R. VanDeventer, 15; O. B. Leonard, 87.50; Treas. VanWinkle, 75; H. Hamilton, 22.50; J. S. Cutter, 77.11; Wm. Hand, 112.67. General Fund. Poor Fund—D. Lennon, $22; H. McAleer, 36; Plainfield Relief Ass'n, 65.34. On motion, report rec'd and warrants ordered drawn for the several amounts, all aye.

By Mr. Waring, from Lamp Com., as correct, claim of N. Y. & N. J. Globe Gas Co., $122.30; Plainfield Gas Co., 244.10. Ref'd to Aud. Com.

By Mr. Finch, from License Com., as favorably upon petition of Mr. Charles King, for a license to keep an inn and tavern, recommending that the license be granted.

At the request of Mr. Tyler, action was taken separately on the application, for license to keep an inn and tavern, and to sell liquors therein. Upon the first motion to keep an inn and tavern, all the members present voted in favor except Mr. H. Smith who voted "no." Upon the motion to sell liquor therein, Messrs. H. Smith and Tyler voted "no." The Pres. thereupon announced that the petition of Mr. Chas. King for a license to keep an inn and tavern and sell liquor therein, had been granted.

By Mr. Hamilton, from Police Com., as correct, the police claims presented this evening. Report rec'd, and claims ref'd to Aud. Com.

By Mr. Guion, from St. Com., as correct, claim of Wm. Hand $146.30; A. A. Titsworth, 13. Ref'd to Aud. Com.

By Mr. Hamilton, a motion that the rules be suspended in order that action may be taken on police claims this evening. Agreed to.

By Mr. Smith, from Aud. Com., as correct, the police claims presented this evening. On motion, warrants were ordered drawn for the several amounts, all aye.

By Mr. Hamilton, a further motion for suspension of rules, in order that the Salary and Aud. Coms. may report on those claims of salaried city officers, this evening. Adopted.

By Mr. Finch, a res. that the Mayor and City Treas. renew note of $3,500. Adopted. All aye.

By Mr. Guion, a motion that the res. relative to the appropriation of $100 on the grading of 7th street, be taken from the table. Carried.

By the same, a motion that the res. be adopted. Carried. All aye.

By Mr. Tyler, a motion that the claim of Wm. Hand for work done on Park avenue, $79.26, be taken from the table. Carried.

By the same, a motion that a warrant be drawn for the amount of Mr. Hand's bill. Adopted. All aye, except Mr. Whiton, who voted "no."

The Pres. then stated that the ordinances relative to Peace street sewer and Public Pound, should be acted upon this evening. They were then read for the 3d time; the one relative to Public Pound was, on motion, laid upon the table until next meeting of Council, and the other bearing on the Peace street sewer, was passed, all aye.

The Pres. then stated that to-night a Councilman had to be elected to fill the unexpired term of Councilman Coriell.

Mr. Waring moved that we now go into nomination for Councilman. Carried.

Mr. Tyler nominated J. Evarts Tracy. Upon a ballot being taken, Mr. Tracy received 7 votes, and was declared elected, and the Clerk instructed to notify Mr. Tracy of his election.

By Mr. Guion, from Salary Com., as correct, claim of C. W. Kimball, $138.53; N. Runyon, 150; J. A. Hubbard, 165.75; H. H. Lowrie, 62.40; Wm. Hand, 50. Referred to Aud. Com.

By Mr. H. Smith, from Aud. Com., the above claims as correct. On motion, warrants ordered drawn. All aye.

By Mr. Hamilton, the following:

WHEREAS, At a recent meeting of the Board of Chosen Freeholders of Union County, a communication was received from P. H. Gilhooly, County Attorney, in which the statements were made, that "The authorities of the City of Plainfield evince a disposition to use every means in their power to thwart and defeat the payment and even collection of the State and County taxes. Through their Common Council a resolution directing their officials to proceed with the collection of these taxes was defeated. They sought the opinion of eminent Counsel in Jersey City, and because that opinion advised them to pay these taxes they repudiated it." Which statements of Mr. Gilhooly were ordered to be spread upon the minutes of said board of Freeholders, and

WHEREAS, the Common Council of the City of Plainfield never has evinced any disposition, either as a body or individually to thwart and defeat the payment or collection of State and County taxes, but did on the 18th day of April, 1881, unanimously pass the following resolution:

Resolved, That the Finance Committee be requested to confer with L. E. Clark, Collector, in reference to the measures he has pursued since 1878, to enforce the collection of State and County taxes, and report the facts to this Council, and to urge him to use any means within his power to collect all arrears of said taxes by the issue of a warrant or otherwise, and

WHEREAS, The Common Council of the City of Plainfield has not received the opinion of eminent Counsel of Jersey City or any other place, advising the payment of these State and County taxes from monies levied and raised from the inhabitants of the City of Plainfield, under their Charter for City purposes only; therefore

Resolved, That said statements of Mr. Gilhooly are unwarranted as to matters of fact and record; and are calculated not only wrongfully to prejudice opinion, but also to injure the good name and welfare of the City of Plainfield; the only City in Union County which has never defaulted in the payment of its just obligations.

Resolved, That the City Clerk be and he hereby is directed to send a copy of these resolutions to the representatives of the City of Plainfield in the Board of Chosen Freeholders of Union County, who are hereby respectfully requested to enter their emphatic protest against the injustice done the City of Plainfield by the reception by said Board of said statement of Mr. Gilhooly, and their entry on their minutes.

Resolved, That while this Common Council always has exerted, and always will exert, all its lawful authority, under the City Charter or the laws of the State, to collect taxes, and disburse the same as far as collected, it will resist to the extent of its ability any attempt of the County authorities to seize for their own purposes, and without warrant of law, monies assessed and raised from the inhabitants of the City of Plainfield under their Charter, for City purposes only, hereby affirming the belief that these taxes collected from the people, should be expended only for the purposes for which they are assessed and any voluntary diversion of the same is a breach of official trust, meriting the emphatic condemnation of every honest citizen.

On motion, adopted. All aye.

On motion, Council then adjourned to meet first Monday evening in September.

WESTFIELD WISPS.

Our sympathies are extended to Mr. Chas. E. Vail, in the loss of his infant daughter on Sunday last.

Road Overseer of District No. 8, should repair holes in sidewalk in front of Moore's and Baker's on Broad street.

Citizen Smith of Central avenue, should trim the trees on his property so as to prevent their hanging over and close to the sidewalk.

Our artist, Jerome Neil, has been busy decorating the front of Mr. George A. Bayard's residence on Broad street, during the past week.

Mr. Ed. Chamberlain and family left town last week intending to pass the month at Little Silver, on the North Shrewsbury river.

The roadway from the Truck house to the street has been entirely rebuilt, under the supervision of Mr. Joel Moffett, during the past week.

That always irrepressible naturalist, Augustus K. Gale, has added another to his already inflated stock of curiosities, in the shape of a live alligator from Florida. Call and see it.

Our popular Postmaster Mr. Frederick Decker, returned from his Western trip last Monday and reports a truly enjoyable time all around. Mrs. Decker still remains with western friends.

The attention of our readers is called to the advertisement of Dr. Wm P. Humphreys, veterinary surgeon, in the list of Westfield advertisers. He has already treated successfully many horses here.

Our Chief Justice, Squire Godfrey, left town on Sunday morning last for Cape Cod, Massachusetts, his early residence, carrying with him the well wishes of his many friends here, for a pleasant journey and safe return.

Mr. Frederick Decker has in his possession a family Bible printed in 1777, and giving a complete record of his family from that date, including the birth of his father's grandfather and death. It is in the ancient Dutch print.

There was a regular meeting of the Directors of the Westfield Fish and Game Protective Society called for Tuesday evening last, but owing to an absence of a quorum the meeting was adjourned until Saturday night at 8:30 p. m.

The only accident reported to the many participators in the picnic of the Baptist Sunday School, which occurred last week, was the loss of a valuable pair of shoes, by our friend Cyrus F. Wilcox; the tide carried them off. Tie them next time, Cy.

Complaint was made Tuesday night before Squire Jaques by Mrs. Madeline J. Stultzman against William M. Kissen, for assault and battery; after examination the defendant was committed to the County Jail. Constable Marsh conducted the prisoner to Elizabeth.

Mr. Ernst Heldrich, of Berlin, Prussia, arrived in this country per Steamer Lessing of the Hamburg line, last week, and is sojourning for a short period with his cousin, Mr. Chas. F. W. Wittke, our popular newspaper dealer, real estate, insurance broker, &c., &c.

Capt. E. K. Shrope of this place, met with what might have proven a serious, but did prove a damp accident on Saturday last, at Pier 19, N. R. New York city. While examining a deck load of lumber in which he was interested, he was struck by a sling and knocked overboard. A new suit, however.

Mr. Edmund E. Hoyle and wife of Newcastle-on-Tyne, England, are visiting at the residence of Mr. Alfred Westbrook on Elm street. Mrs. Hoyle is a sister of Mr. Westbrook. We understand that Mr. and Mrs. Hoyle contemplate a trip through this country to include California, before their return home.

A horse, the property of Mr. Benjamin H. Woodruff, our popular distributor of fruits, vegetables, etc., took advantage of its liberty on Sunday morning last, and exhibited its enjoyment of liberty by rolling in the dust and dirt of Broad St., opposite Bayard's. Cyrus, however, don't enjoy or approve of the animal's actions.

Regarding the notice issued by our Town Committee ordering dogs to be muzzled, it is well to call the attention of owners of dogs to the fact that what are termed "spring muzzles" really allowing the dog to open his mouth as wide and bite as usual, are not in accordance with such notification, but simply an evasion of the law.

Scarcely a Sunday passes but that some kindly disposed person or persons, rescue from the danger of broken legs, necks or carriages, the turn-outs of church-goers tied upon Broad street, the danger of such accidents being caused by defective hitching. Moral—A broken wagon or injured horse would prove a proper lesson to some people.

Mr. Jas. T. Pierson is the first person to put into practical use here what has long since been an established and utilized invention in other townships. We refer to his introduction of Holcomb's Automatic Telephone. A line has been established between his store and his residence, a distance between a half and quarter of a mile. No battery is required, but the replies to questions asked were distinctly audible three feet from the instrument to your local.

Mr. Henry Miller formerly a resident here, but for the past year a resident of Baltimore, Md., has returned to Westfield and has once again taken up his old business of telegraphing. At present he has charge of two wires at the main office of the Western Union Telegraph Co., New York city, one extending over the Camden and Amboy route to Philadelphia, the other to Bristol, Pa. His ability to manage these or additional lines is unquestioned.

Mr. Chas. Young while driving on the Jerusalem road last week, met with rather an unpleasant as well as exciting encounter with a snake. Noticing the reptile stretched across the road, he urged on his trotter expecting to run over and destroy it; imagine his surprise after striking it with the fore wheel of his road wagon, to find it wound about the wheel and returning the compliment at each revolution by striking at him and retiring from his probably unexpected position, only after considerable space had been covered, and escaping apparently unharmed. Charley must be careful and not endeavor to slay snakes with a wagon.

The preliminary meeting to organize the Westfield Bucket and Engine Co., No. 1 was held at the Hotel Hall on Monday night last. 44 members were enrolled and the organization promises to be a success from its start. The following officers were elected: Foreman Otis O. Webb, Assistant Foreman J. Henry Manning, Secretary John M. C. Marsh, Treasurer Chas. F. W. Wittke. The necessary legal notice pursuant to incorporation will be found in our advertising columns. The following is the roll of members: Chas. F. W. Wittke, John M. C. Marsh, Mulford M. Scudder, Ottis G. Webb, Benj. A. Woodruff, Henry Dougherty, Frank N. Earll, George Godfrey, J. Henry Manning, John Logan, Chas. E. Vail, Joseph Perry, Sherman Cooper, Thos. Anderson, Wm. H. Edgar, Albert W. Moffett, John L. Roulston, Zachariah Moffett, Lafayette Moffett, George Ortted, Edward Edgar, Fred. F. Heinecke, Thomas Eustice, H. Irving Webb, John Pfeifer, Byron H. Ellis, William S. Moffett, Wm. M. Long, Wm. Appelgate, A. Edgar Wilcox, Benj. P. Davis, Cyrus P. Wilcox, Wm. Trano, Wm. Schoonover, Matthew Beller, John M. Ledley, Horatio M. Clark, Charles M. Wall, Robert Woodruff, Jr., Joseph Moffett, Chas. H. Daniels, Aaron G. Woodruff, George Scudder.

CARD.

The undersigned begs leave to announce to the property owners of Plainfield and surrounding country that having been practically connected with the Painting Business in all its several branches for many years past, in New York and vicinity, also Bound Brook, New Brunswick and Summit, that he will be glad to furnish estimates for any or all branches of the trade, at the lowest possible figures, and insure first-class work. Hoping for a share of your patronage, I remain,

Yours,
WILLIAM G. HAY.

HAY FEVER.

MESSRS. WHITE & BURDICK, Druggists, Ithaca, N. Y.—I can recommend Ely's Cream Balm to relieve all persons suffering with Rose Cold and Hay Fever. I have been a great sufferer from the same complaints; have had great relief by using the Balm. I have recommended it to many of my friends for Catarrh; and in all cases where they have used the Balm freely have been cured. T. KENNEY, Dry Goods Merchant, Ithaca, N. Y. Sept. 6, 1880.

TRENTON, N. J., Oct. 22, 1880.

I have suffered for eight years with Hay Fever, during July, August and September. In the beginning of July, this year, I resorted to Ely's Cream Balm, and have been entirely free from the Fever since the first application. I can recommend it as a cure. EDWARD C. HILLMAN, at the New Jersey State Arsenal. Price 50 cents.

Who ever passed two girls on the street without hearing them say "he" or "him"?

AN OLD LADY writes us: "I am 65 years old and was feeble and nervous all the time, when I bought a bottle of Parker's Ginger Tonic. I have used little more than one bottle and feel as well as at 30." See other column.

Who wouldn't take a fat office with no work?

COMPLICATED DISEASES.

A prominent gentleman in Cerro Gordo County, Iowa, writes us that he finds Kidney-Wort to be the best remedy he ever knew for a complication of diseases. It is the specific action which it has on the liver, kidneys and bowels, which gives it such curative power, and it is the thousands of cures which it is performing which gives it its great celebrity. Liquid, (very concentrated) or dry, both act efficiently.—N. H. Journal and Courier.

Who ever lost a fish but it was the biggest one he ever saw?

Parents must not find fault if their shoe bills are double what they used to be, and at the same time their children's toes are ragged, if they neglect to buy shoes which have improvements that protect them from wear at the toe, and that are not objectionable in any way. The A. S. T. Co. Black Tip prevents all these evils.

GUARD AGAINST DISEASE.

If you find yourself getting bilious, head heavy, mouth foul, eyes yellow, kidneys disordered, symptoms of piles tormenting you, take at once a few doses of Kidney-Wort. It is nature's great assistant. Use it as an advance guard—don't wait to get down sick. See large advertisement.

OH, WHAT A COUGH!

Will you heed the warning. The signal perhaps of the sure approach of that more terrible disease Consumption. Ask yourselves if you can afford for the sake of 50 cts., to run the risk and do nothing for it. We know from experience that Shiloh's Cure will Cure your Cough. It never fails. This explains why more than a Million Bottles were sold the past year. It relieves Croup and Whooping Cough at once. Mothers do not be without it. For Lame Back, Side, or Chest, use Shiloh's Porous Plaster. Sold by R. M. Steele.

DYSPEPSIA & LIVER COMPLAINT.

Is it not worth the small price of 75 cents to free yourself of every symptom of these distressing complaints, if you think so call at our store and get a bottle of Shiloh's Vitalizer, every bottle has a printed guarantee on it, use accordingly and if it does you no good it will cost you nothing. Sold by R. M. Steele.

ONE GREAT NEED IS KNOWN.

Watt invented the steam engine; Morse the electric telegraph; Whitney the cotton gin, and Dr. David Kennedy, of Rondout, N. Y., discovered and prepared the "Favorite Remedy," which is worth more than all of them, because it saves life and cures disease. It purifies the blood, drives bile from the system, cures those delicate diseases peculiar to women, and is, in short, a sheet-anchor in every household. Don't spend your money in paying doctors when for One Dollar a bottle you can have the "Favorite Remedy" always on your shelf.

This is the season when your sisters and your cousins and your aunts come out of the city to see you.

Those unhappy persons who suffer from nervousness and dyspepsia should use Carter's Little Nerve Pills, which are made expressly for sleepless, nervous, dyspeptic sufferers. Price 25 cents, all druggists.

We have heard of liver pads, lung pads, kidney pads, "footpads," etc., and now what the country wants is a mouth pad—to be recommended to those who are inclined to talk other people to death.

DR. KENNEDY

would have it understood that, while he is engaged in the introduction of his medicine, "Favorite Remedy," he still continues the practice of his profession, not confining himself exclusively to office practice. He treats all diseases of a chronic character, and performs all the minor and capital operations of Surgery. Parties living at a distance, except in surgical cases, by sending a statement of their case, can be treated at home. Address Dr. David Kennedy, Rondout, N. Y.

RESCUED FROM DEATH.

The following statement of William J. Coughlin, of Somerville, Mass., is so remarkable that we beg to ask for it the attention of our readers. He says: "In the fall of 1876 I was taken with a VIOLENT BLEEDING OF THE LUNGS followed by a severe cough. I soon began to loose my appetite and flesh. I was so weak at one time that I could not leave my bed. In the summer of 1877 I was admitted to the City Hospital. While there the doctors said I had a hole in my left lung as big as a half dollar. I expended over a hundred dollars in doctors and medicines. I was so far gone at one time a report went around that I was dead. I gave up hope, but a friend told me of DR. WM. HALL'S BALSAM FOR THE LUNGS. I laughed at my friends, thinking that my case was incurable, but I got a bottle to satisfy them, when to my surprise and gratification, I commenced to feel better. My hope, once dead, began to revive, and to-day I feel in better spirits than I have the past three years.

"I write this hoping you will publish it, so that every one afflicted with Diseased Lungs will be induced to take DR. WM. HALL'S BALSAM FOR THE LUNGS, and be convinced that CONSUMPTION CAN BE CURED. I have taken two bottles and can positively say that it has done more good than all the other medicines I have taken since my sickness. My cough has almost entirely disappeared and I shall soon be able to go to work." Sold by druggists. 1 s

A miraculous escape from death is an oft quoted remark in our newspapers, and yet, how many such occurrences happen every day and are unchronicled, unheard of and unappreciated except by the few who are closely interested. There is probably no family collection of such facts as those in the correspondence of R. F. Avery & Co., whose Elixir of Sulpher has caused many a grateful heart to express its thanks for help in time of danger. This preparation is a certain cure for all diseases of Throat and Lungs—Coughs, Colds, Consumption, Catarrh, etc., and is sold by A. Kingore, Druggist. 1 16dec

WHAT A GAME OF CROQUET LED TO.

"Has Myrtle come home?"

The speaker was a richly dressed woman of perhaps forty summers, although it might have been possible to add an autumn, and perhaps a couple of late springs to the account that time, that faithful but relentless chronicler of the world's doings, its lights and shades, its gala days and sorrowful anniversaries, had slowly but surely set opposite her name on the closely-written pages of that book which no man had read.

The person to whom she spoke—a delicate formed girl, with deep, hazel eyes and flaxen hair, that hung between her faultlessly molded, but not too fat, shoulders in a simple braid, looking not unlike a new rope tag of the kind used on horse cars—stood on the veranda of a handsome villa in the south of England, tapping gently with a croquet mallet which she held in her hand a tiny foot that peeped out from beneath the fleecy folds of her peignoir dress. Suddenly she startled, slightly, and a look of pain passed over the delicately chiseled features of her perfect face.

She had hit her corn.

This corn was the only sad chord in the otherwise perfect symphony of Ethelberta DeCoucey's life. Often when gliding dreamily through the measures of a soft, sensuous waltz, that set all her senses pulsing in harmony to the music her nose resting trustfully on the shoulder of Percy Montrose, her affianced, had she been suddenly called back from the realms of the rose-tinted meditation by some one stepping on her corn. Sometimes in the desolate moments that followed one of these painful society events she would almost sob out her grief to the world, and often in the still watches of the night would come to her the thought that even a bunion would be better.

Although of a timid, shrinking nature, and possessed of a reserve that insurance companies might envy, Ethelberta had an iron will, copper-fastened and clinched on both sides, and a proud spirit that could not brook the slightest affront. In point of spirit and reserve no girl among the proud aristocracy of haughty Albion was better fixed. Once when an elder sister had in a moment of passion charged her with eating slate pencils to improve her complexion, Ethelberta had only looked at her with an expression of withering scorn and said calmly: "I shall never speak to you again!"

It was nearly an hour before she borrowed the other girl's chewing gum.

Percy Montrose was the only man she had ever loved. He was a handsome, manly looking fellow of twenty-six, and came of an ancient Saxon family that got a start in life by stealing evergreen trees in Norway about Christmas time and shipping them to England. Ethelberta did not knew this. The one thought of her life was that she loved Percy with a wild, passionate love that was almost wicked in its intensity. He was in her thoughts by day and her dreams by night. She had told him of her love freely and fully. Often, in the parlor of her father's house, her head resting in perfect confidence just below his clavicle and above his right lung, had she murmured softly to him that she lived only for his love, and that without the oasis of his affection life would be a dreary desert upon which the sun beat pitilessly down.

It is not every young man that can be an oasis all by himself, and Percy felt pretty corky about the fact.

Shortly after Ethelberta's mother had gone over to town and left her standing on the porch alone with her thoughts and corn, Percy Montrose came sauntering up the graveled walk that wandered gracefully through the front yard until it reached the sidewalk. The girl greeted him with effusion and a kiss. He took both.

In a little while they walked together to the croquet lawn and began to play. Both were experts at the game, and neither could gain an advantage. Finally Ethelberta's ball was in a favorable position. With her dainty foot upon the ball and mallet upraised, she was the picture of beauty and grace. Should she make the shot the game would be over. Just as the mallet was descending with a graceful sweep, Percy's voice was heard.

"Your stocking has come down," he said.

The mallet fell with a crushing force. There was a wild whoop of anguish, and Ethelberta fluttered toward the house on one leg like a wounded bird. She had hit the corn and never spoke to Percy again.

"Did Myrtle come home?" some may ask who may remember the opening sentence of this story.

I should smile. She not only came home, but she played out the game with Percy and subsequently married him.

A FAMILY EPISODE.

At 8 o'clock the other morning a wife followed her husband down to the gate, as he was starting for down town, and kindly said to him:

"William, you know how sadly I need a blue bunting dress."

"Yes, dear," he remarked, "but you know now hard up I am. As soon as I can see my way clear you shall have the dress and a new hat to boot. Be patient, be good, and your reward will be great."

Forty minutes after that he emerged from a restaurant with a big basket and a fish pole bound up the river. In the basket was a chicken, pickles, cake, fruit, pie and a bottle of liquid of a rich color, and he was just lighting a 20 cent cigar when his wife came along.

"What! you here?" he exclaimed.

"Yes, I was going to the market. Where are you going—what's in that basket?"

"I was going to carry this fish pole around to a friend on Jefferson avenue," he modestly replied.

"And that basket?"

"This basket—well I was going to take it to the orphan asylum as a present to the children. It is a donation from six leading citizens."

"William, I don't believe it."

"Sh! Don't talk so loud."

"William, I shall talk louder yet!" she exclaimed. I'll bet you are going a fishing!"

"Mary, have I ever deceived you?" he plaintively asked. "I never have. As proof of my sincerity you can take this basket to the asylum yourself!"

"And I'll do it," she promptly replied, as she relieved him of it.

"Mary hadn't you—?"

"No, sir, I hadn't. You had better hurry up with that fish pole, as the man may want it, and be careful how you stand around in the hot sun!"

She left there. He watched her take the car for home, and then he returned the fish pole and crossed the street and said to an acquaintance:

"Tom, I'm suffering from neuralgia, and the excursion is off till next week. Too bad but we can never tell what a day will bring forth."

There was chicken and pickles and other good things on the table at dinner, but he never smiled. Even when his wife wished she was an orphan, if that was the way they were fed, he never betrayed the gloom in his heart. It was only when she handed him the bottle he had so cheerfully tucked into the basket, and he saw it labeled "Good for little children," that he said:

"Mary it is awful thing for a wife to get the impression that her husband is a cold-blooded yarnist."

"It must be," she replied as she took the other chicken leg.

HUMOR OF THE DAY.

Out of season—An empty spice-box.

The retired theatre star is always an ex-acting creature.

"Love lightens labor," as the man said when he saw his wife doing his work for him.

When a man applies for a situation as a policeman it is supposed he has a taste for a club life.

Sore financial distress—When you haven't got money enough to buy ointment for a wound.

A canal differs from most things in one respect—It is always filled before it is opened.

Gate posts should be set out firmly. A great deal may hinge upon them as your girls grow up.

Some one has said that parks are the breathing places of a city. No one has said that parks are the sparking places of a city.

"When yesterday I asked you, love, one little word to say, your brother interrupted us; so please say yes ter day."

A woman requested her husband not to associate with a certain man who was a hard drinker. "Why," he exclaimed, "he's my booze'm friend."

An Irishman, who was found guilty of stealing coffee, was asked by the magistrate what he did with it. "Made tay with it," was the Hibernian's reply.

An exchange says that "the coming girl is to be prettier than the kind we now have." Impossible; there can be no improvement upon the original article.

Wasn't it rough on Ella, just as she was telling Frederick, at lunch, how ethereal her appetite was, to have the cook bawl out: "Say, will ye have yer pork and beans now, or wait till yer feller's gone?"

"Which side of the street do you live on, Mrs. Kipple?" asked a counsel, cross-examing a witness. "Oh, either side, sir. If you go one way, it's on the right side; if you go the other way, it's on the left."

The best runs for poultry are where grass and gravel are plentiful. Grass runs are of great value where they can be had, but they must be large if fowls have constant access to them or the grass will soon cease to grow.

A London servant girl is represented as saying: "Hard weather, indeed, sir. I wish the Lord would take the weather in his own hands again, instead of trusting it to them Yankee probability men. We might then get something fit to live in."

A school teacher, discharged for using the rod too freely, applied for employment in a dressmaker's establishment. "Have you had any experience in sewing?" asked the dressmaker. "No," was the reply, "but I have a thorough knowledge of basting."

A sleeper is one who sleeps; a sleeper is also a place where a sleeper can sleep; and a sleeper is, too, a thing over which runs the sleeper in which the sleeper sleeps; so that the sleeper in the sleeper sleeps while the sleeper runs on as well as sometimes leaps off the track.

Delicious—To have a pretty girl open the front door, and mistake you for her cousin. More Delicious—To have her deceived till she kissed you twice, and hugged the buttons off your coat, exclaiming, "Ma, here's Chawles." Most Delicious—To favor the mistake until the lady discovers it herself, and have a big brother come along the entry, catch you by the collar, half shake the life out of you and ask you what you are doing to his sister. with an agreeable hint at immediate satisfaction.

SOMETHING IN A BED.

Judge Pitman has a habit of slipping his watch under his pillow when he goes to bed. One night somehow it slipped down, and as the Judge was restless it worked its way down toward the foot of the bed. After a bit, while he was lying awake his foot touched it; it felt very cold; he was surprised, and jumping from the bed, he exclaimed:

"My gracious, Maria! there's a toad or something under the covers; I touched it with my foot."

Mrs. Pitman gave a loud scream and was on the floor in an instant.

"Now don't go to hollering and waking up the neighbors," said the Judge. "You get me a broom or something and we'll fix the thing mighty quick."

Mrs. Pitman brought the broom and gave it to the Judge, with the remark, that she felt as if snakes were creeping up and down her legs and back.

"Oh nonsense, Maria! Now turn down the covers slowly while I hold the broom and bang it. Put a bucket of water alongside the bed so that we can shove it in and drown it."

Mrs. Pitman fixed the bucket and gently removed the covers. The Judge held the broom uplifted, and as the black ribbon of the silver watch was revealed, he cracked away at it three or four times with the broom; then he pushed the thing off into the bucket. Then they took the light to investigate the matter. When the Judge saw what it was, he said:

"I might have known. It is just like you women to go screeching and fussing about nothing. It's utterly ruined."

"It was you made the fuss, not me," said Mrs. Pitman.

"You needn't try to put the blame on me." Then the Judge turned in and growled at Maria until he fell asleep.

When a weather prophet predicts that "the 14th to the 18th will be cool, with heavy rains," and the days specified are as hot and dry as the desert of Sahara within a radius of twelve hundred miles from the base of his predictions, and the weather fiend rushes into print and points to a rainfall on the 16th in a small town out West, two thousand miles hence, as a verification of his forecasts, we are reminded of Hans Breitmann, who heard a dog howl at night in Philadelphia, and his wife told him it was a sign of death. "Un py chinks!" he exclaimed, when he looked at the paper next day, "dot vos so. Dere vos a man died in Pittsboorg!"

THE STATE FAIR.

On September 19, the State Fair at Waverly will open, and continue for a week. The Directors are now at work perfecting arrangements, so that there will be a better chance to exhibit goods and stock of all kinds than ever before. There will be additional poultry tents and cattle stalls. Mr. Benjamin Haines will have charge of all the athletic sports, and inside of the race course he is going to construct a bicycle track and erect all that will be necessary for athletic exhibitions. It is expected that there will be upward of two hundred bicycles on the track at one time.

MARRIAGE OF "BRIGHT EYES."

"Bright Eyes," the Ponca Indian girl, who was for quite a long while a pupil at Miss Reed's school on North Broad St., has been united in marriage to Mr. T. H. Tibbles, the Omaha (Nebraska) editor, who advocated the cause of the Ponca tribe, speaking in many prominent cities winter before last. Mr. Tibbles spoke in the Third Presbyterian Church of this city, and had a large audience. The old Chief whom he now calls father-in-law made an address, which was interpreted by the woman now known as Mrs. Tibbles. The wedding, it is stated in the despatch, was attended by several chiefs, friends of the dusky bride, and by prominent whites. Mr. Tibbles has our congratulations, and may he never have his scalp lifted.—Elizabeth Herald.

A LONG SLEEP.

John Gyumbere, the Hungarian who was in a trance continuously for 169 days in the Lehigh county poorhouse, Penn., has for the first time sufficiently rallied to give the story of his life and experiences. He was first found insensible at a neighboring inn. After being satisfied that the man was in a cataleptic state the officials removed him to the county almshouse. This was over six months ago. Since that time he had not spoken half a dozen words until now. During his trance he was examined by at least fifty physicians, who pronounced his case the most remarkable on record. On the 22d of April Gyumbere opened his eyes for the first time and kept them open for four days. He never spoke a word to any one, but remained in a dazed condition. April 23d he either fell or jumped out of the hospital window, falling a distance of twenty-five feet, but was not seriously injured. April 26 he again closed his eyes, and did not open them until May 20, when he spoke two words after a flower had been held to his nose. Six hours afterward he closed his eyes and kept them shut until late Sunday night, when he was called upon by a Polander named Frank Laskowiski, when to the great astonishment of the keeper and attendants the long sleeper upon being hailed in Slavonic opened his eyes, raised up and made a brief reply in the same tongue. The sleeper conversed with his friend about three hours. His talk is translated as follows:

THE SLEEPER'S STORY.

"I arrived in America about two years ago. My father and one sister live in the Old Country; two of my brothers died of brain fever. I was well educated and I paid special attention to music and became a fair violinist. I left Castle Garden and went to Virginia, and was employed by a man named Porter, near Charlottesville. A negro woman there put red pepper in my coffee, which nearly killed me. Many very rough jokes were played on me, and I thought they were going to kill me by poisoning me. I fled from that part of the country and went to Baltimore, and then wandered into Pennsylvania. It was after New Year's day some weeks when I became out of my mind. I fell asleep in a barroom near the place where I now am, and from that time up to about four weeks ago—about one hundred and twenty-one days—I knew nothing at all. I never felt any of the many ways you say the officials tried on me to awaken me. I know nothing of my falling out of the window, and know nothing about the abscess on my head. Four weeks ago I realized that I existed. It was as if I had been sleeping very long. When I awoke partially I thought I was in jail. I cannot believe that I have been asleep nearly six months. I feel very weak. I don't know what caused me to go to sleep unless it was some drug, or the pepper that affected my brain. I want to go to work again as soon as I am strong enough. I am glad this is no prison. I know nothing of anything that has happened for the past five months. My head feels light, but my appetite is good."

The story of the sleeper was listened to with great interest. His voice is low and husky. During his trance he was tenderly nursed and fed by special attendants and carefully waited upon by Dr. Erdman, the almshouse physician.

TERRIBLE ACCIDENT

Necessitating a Surgical Operation—Loving Mother Attempts to take Pair of Shears from Her Child.

PARENTS, BE CAREFUL.

Domestic accidents are common to women, and some of them are very serious. Mrs. Werner, of South Rondout, Ulster Co., N. Y., some weeks ago attempted to take from her child a pair of shears with which it was playing. A slight struggle ensued, in which the point of the shears entered Mrs. Werner's left eye, entirely destroying the sight. Her family physician did what he could, but intensely painful inflammation arose, which, by sympathy, threatened the loss of the other eye. Total blindness to a woman having the care of a household is an irretrievable calamity. In this trait Mrs. W. applied to the well-known and skillful Surgeon, Dr. David Kennedy, of Rondout, N. Y., who removed the injured eye by a very successful operation, setting aside all danger of further harm to the sight of the other eye. But, owing to pain and mental distress, her system needed a tonic and restorative medicine. To do this work the Doctor prescribed "Kennedy's Favorite Remedy," which sustained its reputation and laid a sure foundation of health.

Dr. Kennedy's "Favorite Remedy" removes all impurities from the blood, regulates the Liver and Kidneys, cures constipation, and all diseases and weaknesses peculiar to Females. It is for sale by all our druggists at ONE DOLLAR a bottle.

THE NEW BUSINESS OF THE EQUITABLE

Life Assurance Society of the U. S.

FOR THE YEAR 1880, WAS OVER

Thirty-Five Millions of Dollars,

The Largest Business Done by any Company in the World.

REASONS FOR THIS RESULT.

The Equitable is the strongest Company in the United States.

Its policies are, by their own express terms, made incontestable after three years. [For precise terms see form of policy contract.]

All such incontestable policies are paid immediately after receipt of satisfactory proof of the death of the insured, and without even the customary delay of sixty or ninety days.

Each ordinary policy provides for a definite surrender-value in paid up assurance, in case the policy is forfeited after three years from its date and is surrendered within a reasonable time thereafter.

By The Tontine Savings Fund plan of assurance, returns to policy-holders, after the expiration of what is called the Tontine period, are greater than are obtainable on any other system. Actual settlements of Tontine policies have been made in which policy-holders have withdrawn amounts varying from eighty to one hundred and twenty per cent. of premiums paid, besides enjoying a life insurance indemnity during the period. No other company can show such results.

The Tontine plan is the only one extant by which a person may withdraw from his insurance contract at specified periods, receiving the entire reserve and surplus accumulations in cash.

All the ordinary forms of insurance with annual dividends of profits, both cash and reversionary, are issued by this Society.

ASSETS,	$41,108,602.
SURPLUS,	$9,228,294.

Its business for the last ten years (represented by the new policies issued) has been larger than that of any other Company.

TUBULAR HOT-BLAST NON-EXPLOSIVE

Oil or Gas Stoves!

THE REASONS WHY THE TUBULAR HOT-BLAST OIL OR GAS STOVE IS SUPERIOR TO ALL OTHERS:

Its appearance is more like a stove than anything that has yet been offered.

It requires no wire gauze or water tank to make it safe.

A continual current of air passes to the burners over the Oil Pot, preventing the oil from getting warmer than the atmosphere in which it is burning. The bake oven is not in the way of the kettle or boiler.

Baking, roasting, and boiling can all be done at once, and in less time than with any other oil stove.

LEGAL NOTICES.

Surrogate's Order to Limit Creditors.

Union County, Surrogate's Office, April 27th, 1881.

Israel C. Mundy, Administrator of Sarah Bartis, deceased.

On application of the above-named Administrator it is ordered that said Administrator give Public Notice to the Creditors of the estate of the said deceased, to bring in their debts, demands or claims against the same, under oath, within nine months from this date, by setting up a copy of this order, within twenty days hereafter, in five of the most public places in the County of Union, for two months, and also within the said twenty days, by advertising the same in the CONSTITUTIONALIST for the same space of time; and if any Creditor shall neglect to exhibit his or her debt, demand or claim, within the said period of nine months, public notice being given as aforesaid, such Creditor shall be forever barred of his or her action therefor against the said Administrator.

By JAMES J. GERBER, Surrogate.

In Chancery of New Jersey.

To Washington E. Langley and Adelia Isabella Langley, his wife.

By virtue of an order of the Court of Chancery of New Jersey made on the day of the date hereof, in a cause wherein Abraham Runyon is complainant, and you and others are defendants, you are required to appear and plead, answer or demur to the bill of said complainant on or before the thirtieth day of August next, or the said bill will be taken as confessed against you.

The said bill is filed to foreclose a mortgage given by Washington E. Langley and Adelia Isabella Langley his wife, to said complainant on lands in the city of Plainfield, in Union County, New Jersey, dated April 16, 1866. [illegible]

And you Washington E. Langley are made defendant because you own said lands, or some part thereof, or may claim an interest therein. And you Adelia Isabella Langley are made defendant because you are the wife of said Washington E. Langley, and may claim an inchoate right of dower, or other interest in said mortgaged premises, and also because you may claim to own the premises by virtue of a quit claim deed made to you by one Bushrod F. [illegible], dated March 12, [illegible]

Dated June 28, 1881.

VAN WINKLE & MAXSON, Solicitors of Complainant, Plainfield, N. J.

NOTICE.—Be it known to all persons: That under and by virtue of an act entitled, "An act for the better protection of manufacturers and bottlers of and dealers in mineral waters, beer, ale, porter and other beverages," approved March 11th, eighteen hundred and eighty-one, I, Fred Caspar, bottler and dealer in beer, conducting business at No. 5 East Second street in the city of Plainfield, county of Union and State of New Jersey, do hereby in accordance with the provisions of said act, give and file notice that I have so filed in the office of the Clerk of the said County of Union, a description of said boxes and bottles, and of the name or names, mark or marks, stamped or impressed thereon, owned and used by me in my business as aforesaid, which description is as follows, to wit: Boxes painted blue and marked "Fred Caspar, Plainfield, N. J.," on the sides and are known as lager beer boxes. Bottles are 14 oz., white pint bottles, marked, "Fred Caspar, Plainfield, N. J.," on one side of the bottle, and on the opposite side are also the words, "This bottle not to be sold."

This notice is given and description filed for the purpose of protection under the provisions of the act above referred to. Witness my hand and seal this Sixth day of July, eighteen hundred and eighty-one.

FRED CASPAR.

Filed in the office of the Clerk of the County of Union, State of New Jersey, this Sixth day of July, eighteen hundred and eighty-one.

POETRY.

For "The Constitutionalist."

ON THE DEATH OF LAURA A., WIFE OF OTIS G. WEBB.

BY MRS. M. A. BRITTIN.

She sleeps beside her little one,
From all the cares of life set free,
Her suffering past, her life-work done,
Gone to a blessed eternity.

And yet how cruel seems the blow,
That takes from earth a life so fair,
And how we murmur, though we know,
That she is better "over there."

"Over the river," torn from friends,
Who shed the scalding, bitter tear,
Whose wails of anguish deep ascends,
While they surround the dismal bier.

But oh! what blessedness so fair,
Awaited in the other land,
Who watched and waited over there
For her to reach the beauteous strand.

Her little ones, both gone before,
Her cherished girl, her bright-eyed boy,
Were doubtless on the eternal shore,
And welcomed her with songs of joy.

LONGINGS.

If I were a railroad brakeman,
I'd holler the stations so plain,
That the man who was going to Texas,
Would go clear through to Maine.
I'd open the door of the smoking-car
And I'd give such a mighty roar,
That the passengers back in the sleeper
Would all fall out on the floor.
For I couldn't afford a tenor voice,
And I couldn't afford to speak
In the sweet, soft tones of the Æolian harps
For eleven dollars a week.

If I were a baggage master
I'd rattle the trunks about;
I'd stand them up in the corner
And tear their bowels out.
I would pull the handles out by the roots,
I would kick their corners in,
And strew their stuffing all round the car,
And make them lank and thin.
For I couldn't afford to wear kid gloves
Nor put soft pads on my feet,
Nor to handle things gentle, when all my pay
Just kept me in bread and meat.

If I were a railroad conductor,
As through the train I'd go,
I'd have for every question they asked
This answer already: "Don't know."
I'd miss connections for lots of men,
I'd run lone passengers past;
I'd tell them 'twas eight when I knew 'twas ten,
And I'd swear their watches were fast.
For I couldn't afford to be civil,
When I knew every man in the load
Would look at my watch and ring, and say,
"He stole them things from the road."
—Burlington Hawkeye.

MISCELLANEOUS READING.

THE LORD BOYS AND THE WOLF.

As recently as the year 1801, nearly the whole of what is now the populous county of Susquehanna, Pa., was an unbroken wilderness.

Very many of the first settlers were from New England. Among these were Josiah Lord, from Lyme, Conn., who took up a farm within the limits of the present town of Lathrop.

Mr. Lord's family consisted of a wife and four boys, hardy youngsters, named, as from true Puritan custom, Josiah, Elisha, John and Enoch.

In his later years, Mr. John Lord, one of the above, used to tell the boys of the writer's time the following story of an adventure he and his brother "Lisha" had with wolves.

I give it as nearly as I can in Mr. Lord's own language; for the old gentleman would tell it very graphically in word and gesture.

In those early days deer was so plenty that on hot summer afternoons the edges of the ponds in the woods would be fairly red with them, standing in the water, "cooling." In consequence of so many deer at this place, bears, panthers and wolves were also very numerous. These latter gave the settlers a great deal of trouble, and so indeed did the deer, whole herds of them coming out of the forests into the fresh growing fields of rye, oats and corn.

"One day, about the first of April,"—as old Mr. Lord used to begin the story, "father went away to get some seed rye and left 'Lisha and me to look after the cattle. 'Lisha, at that time, was twelve years old and I was ten.

"There were no pasture fences then; and the cattle ran about just as they chose. We had a yoke of oxen, eight steers and heifers, and three cows, one of which, the 'old mooly,' as we called her, had a little 'cossy' only a few weeks old.

"Just out beyond our clearing there was a small creek in the woods; and the cattle liked to go up this to get the green stuff which had begun to start along the banks. But so long as 'Lisha and I could hear the cow bell we did not mind where they fed.

"A little before sunset, we heard a loud bellowing away up the creek; and a few minutes after, the cattle came running into the clearing, snorting and acting as if much scared.

"But the old cow and her calf did not come with the rest.

"'Something caught the little bossy!' said 'Lish.

"He got father's rifle, and we went up the creek and hunted till dark, but could not find a sign of the cow or her calf. Father did not get back till after nine o'clock in the evening.

"Next morning we all went out to hunt again, and pretty soon found the old cow thrown on her back between the logs among some great basswoods, with her feet up and her horns stuck in the ground. Her neck was torn open, as if the blood had been sucked, and she was bitten and lacerated all over.

"Nothing of the little calf could we discover for some time; but at last 'Lisha found one of his little hoofs.

"Father said it was wolves' work. That afternoon he went to a neighbor's two or three miles off and borrowed a large double-springed, spike-jointed bear-trap, which he set close by the old cow and covered it with dirt.

"But nothing got into it for a week, and then father took it up and brought it to the house.

"The very next day 'Lish and I found that the old cow had been torn to pieces by the wolves; and 'Lish said that a German hunter had told him that father did not set the trap right for wolves; but we did not dare tell him so.

"The following forenoon father had to go to mill. It was a long way, and he would not be able to get back till the next day.

"As soon as he was gone, 'Lish says to me:

"'Let's go and set the trap as Stein says, and we'll have one of them wolves before father gets back.'

"'Lish took an axe, and together we carried the trap up the creek to the place where the old cow had been killed. There we cut two large handspikes and set it by prying down the stiff springs. We placed it in a pool of water in front of the pile of cow bait; and then we procured logs and arranged them so that the wolves could not get to the bait without running through the puddle of water.

"It was quite common to hear the wolves howling round the clearing in the night. About two o'clock we were waked up by these sounds. There was a whole pack of wolves around; and they howled without stopping till near daybreak.

"'Lish said there was sure to be one in the trap; and we got up to build a fire and run some balls for the rifle.

"Mother heard us and asked what we were doing. My brother told her that we had set the trap and got a wolf in it; and that they were going out to shoot it before it carried off the trap.

"She said, 'Oh no, no, you mustn't go; the wolves will catch you!' She was much frightened and tried to persuade us from going out.

"But 'Lisha thought himself quite a hunter; for he had shot three deer, and knew how to load the rifle as well as anybody.

"He told mother there was no danger, and that we must kill the wolf at once, or lose the trap.

"It was now just getting a little light in the east. Outside we found it cold and frosty, and on coming to the edge of the forest 'Lish said it was of no use to go any further just then, for he could not see the sights on the rifle barrel, it was still so dark in the woods.

"So we sat down on a log and waited for it to get lighter. Up the creek the wolves were howling fearfully. It seemed as if there were hundreds of them.

"I think 'Lish did not feel quite safe; but he said nothing. Sometimes the wolves would seem to be close on us. I could hear them running through the brush. I would have given a good deal then to have been back safe home with mother. My conscience smote me for deceiving her, when I thought how we had left her in tears.

"Suddenly the howling stopped. I thought the pack was surrounding us. Some of them had seemed within a few yards only a moment before.

"Just then 'Lish said,—

"'Come, Johnny, it's light enough now to commence the battle.'

"So frightened had I become that my legs would hardly support my weight; and I had to try two or three times before I could get up off the log.

"I would not let 'Lish know how frightened I was; but I told him that I felt sure the wolf had got out of the trap, and that we had better go home and not trouble mother any longer.

"But 'Lish said, 'No; we have got one hard and fast in the trap; and I want you to follow on after the very still.'

"Going on through the woods, we soon came near where the trap was. Here we lay in ambush for some time, and then, as it grew lighter in the woods, ventured up to the spot.

"But the trap was gone, as well as all the bait. There were tufts of grey hair lying near.

"'He's dragged off the trap,' 'Lish said, 'We must catch up with him or pa will flog us for loosing the trap.'

"It was easy to see the way where the trap had been dragged along, and we followed it for ten or a dozen rods up the creek, till we came to a sharp bend where the banks were steep. Here one or ten wolves started out of some hemlocks and ran up the bank. 'Lish fired, but did not kill one. They ran to quickly for him. Scurrying off a little ways, they all stopped and howled; and then we espied the one in the trap running along the bank a little way ahead of us.

"The bushes were thick here; but we ran on after the wolf for thirty rods, I should think, then lost the track close by the end of a great basswood log which had fallen across the creek.

"'Go across on the log,' said 'Lish, 'and see if he's over on the other side; and I'll go on up the creek.'

"I got on the log and walked across on it. Near the further bank a beech-tree with the leaves on had fallen the summer before and made a thick brushheap on and under the log. As I was climbing through this, I slipped off the log and my bare feet—I went barefoot in those days—came down on the wolf's soft fur and I heard the trap rattle!

"Didn't I jump! One bound brought me out of that brush.

"'Here's the wolf hid under this log!' I almost screamed.

"My brother had gone but a few steps up the creek. He stood looking across at me with a grin.

"'I thought you'd found something over there,' he said, 'by the way you jumped.'

"The wolf was snarling beneath the log. 'Lish came over and fired at it.]

"I stood behind the hemlock, but had my eye on the wolf. It was dead when we went up to it. It was a great wolf, almost as heavy as a calf.

"Hardly had we pulled out the wolf, when we heard mother scream! She seemed to be running towards us, through the woods, and was calling at every step.

"She'd been listening at home, and when she heard the report of the gun, she thought the wolves were certainly attacking us and could not stay in the house another minute.

"We both answered her; but she was calling so loud that she did not hear us.

"We ran to meet her, but she did not even see us till we were close to her.

"'Here we are, mother!' we both called out, and I caught hold of her arm.

"Then she sat down on a log and oh! what a picture of fright she was! In running through the laurel thicket, she had scratched her face in several places, so that it bled; her combs had fallen out, and her hair was streaming in every direction. She sat and tried to arrange it, but her poor hand trembled so that she could not; and it was some time before she could even speak.

"'We must fight for our cattle mother,' said 'Lish, 'or move from the place. We must dispose of the wolves, or be ruined by them.'

"We brought her some water in a piece of bark, and after a while she was able to walk home and carry the gun, while I dragged the trap and 'Lish dragged the wolf.

"We had shot the wolf and recovered the trap but I have never been able to think of the fright we gave mother without regret. We had a long contest with the wolves before our lives and our cattle were free from danger. Those were perilous days, but what a grand country we did secure!"

ABOUT BASE BALL.

She was young; she was fair, and she wanted to know all about base ball. He was hard hit, far gone and communicative. The result of this incompatibility of disposition can easily be guessed at, but can never be communicated or fully comprehended. It filled the grand stand so full of questions and answers (and groans and swearwords) that they rolled out into the field and annoyed the players. Hanlon says that he found one question way out in the centre field, and it was, "I think Wood and Knight are just too sweet for anything. Don't you?" That was what caused him to muff that fly on Wednesday. Here is what rattled past a Free Press reporter at 3 and 4:10 p. m., Wednesday, when he escaped from the back side of the stand, crawled to the gate, and then fainted from "utter" exhaustion. He went to Recreation Park at 1:30 o'clock that afternoon; a hale, hearty young man, with not a false tooth in his head. Now he is prematurely old and wrinkled; there is a boulder showing through his hair, and no food has passed his toothless jaws since he escaped that horrible death. Nausea continues unabated:

"What are they going to do now?"

"They are going to bat."

"Oh! are they? I'm so glad. Where are those Boston fellows going?"

"Out into the field. The Detroits go to the bat."

"Do they? Then they'll win, won't they?"

"That makes no difference. Each nine goes to the bat nine times."

"Do they. That's nice. Who's that fat man with the red cap? Don't he look comical?"

"That's Higham, the umpire."

"Where does he play?"

"He doesn't play at all. He umpires the game. Calls strikes, dead balls, and other things."

"What is a dead ball?"

"One that hits the batter or umpire."

"Is it dead when it hits the bat?"

"No."

"That's Wood at the bat. Ain't he sweet?"

"I think Houck is the prettiest."

"I don't. That horrid mustache! What makes Wood strike the plate with his bat? Does he do that to let the pitcher know he is ready?"

"I don't know."

"Ask that gentleman behind you. I want to know awfully bad."

"He wouldn't know either."

"Oh, dear! I wish I knew. Why don't Whitney do as the umpire tells him? The umpire told him to pitch a low ball, and there he is pitching them way up high. Can't he be punished for that?"

"No. He can pitch them where he has a mind to."

"I think he's real mean, anyway."

(Just at this moment, Wood was thrown out at first base.)

"Did Wood make a base hit?"

"No, he is out."

"Why how did that happen?"

"Barnes fielded the ball to Merrill before Wood reached the base."

"Does that put a man out?"

"Yes."

"How funny. I'll remember that. If the man gets the base before the ball does, he is out."

"No, no! It's the other way."

"There! Hanlon is out."

"No he isn't. He got there ahead of the ball."

"Is that an error?"

"No, it is a base hit."

"Oh! I'm so glad! How much does a base hit count?"

"If he gets home it will be a run."

"Who is that catching?"

"Charlie Snyder."

"What makes everybody joke about Charlie Snyder?"

"I don't know."

"Oh, dear! I wish you'd go and find out. I want to know awfully bad."

"Because," said the reporter, turning around in his seat, "a Chicago reporter wrote up the chatter of a couple of silly Chicago girls who were annoying everybody on the grand stand with their silly gush about Charlie Snyder."

"And she never tumbled."

"Was it awfully funny?"

"Very funny to read, but dreadful to listen to."

"Did you hear it?"

"No. It isn't necessary to go to Chicago to hear the chatter of silly girls. There's plenty of them in Detroit."

"That's funny; who are they?"

"Excuse me, I don't wish to be too personal in my remarks."

"That's the way with you reporters. You never tell anything that anybody wants to know real bad. I wish I was a reporter. Then I could go to all the theatres and balls and suppers and excursions and circuses and picnics and never pay a cent, and have nothing to do but write a little. It must be delightfully glorious."

It was no use. The reporter had thoughtlessly turned the torrent upon himself, and its flood was resistless. He leaped.—Free Press.

A KEY TO A PERSON'S NAME.

By the accompanying table of letters the name of a person or any word may be easily found out in the following manner:

A	B	D	H	P
C	C	E	I	Q
E	F	F	J	R
G	G	G	K	S
I	J	L	L	T
K	K	M	M	U
M	N	N	N	V
O	O	O	O	W
Q	R	T	X	X
S	S	V	Z	Y
U	V	V	Y	Z
W	W	W
Y	Z

Let the person whose name you wish to know inform you in which of the upright columns the first letter of his name is contained. If it be found in but one column, it is the top letter; if it occurs in more than one column, it is found by adding the alphabetical numbers of the top letters of these columns, and the sum will be the number of the letter sought. By taking one letter at a time in this way the whole number can be ascertained. For example take the word Jane. J is found in two columns commencing with B and H, which are the second and eighth letters down the alphabet; the sum is ten, and the tenth letter down the alphabet is J, the letter sought. A appears in but one column, where it stands at the top. N is seen in the columns headed with B D and H; these are the second, fourth and eighth letters of the alphabet, which, added, gives the fourteenth, or N, and so on. The use of this table will excite no little curiosity among those unacquainted with the foregoing explanation.

AN AWFULLY COLD-BLOODED LIAR.

At eight o'clock the other morning a wife followed her husband down to the gate as he was starting for town, and kindly said to him:

"William, you know how sadly I need a blue bunting dress."

"Yes, dear," he remarked, "but you know how hard up I am. As soon as I can see my way clear you shall have the dress, and a new hat to boot. Be patient, be good, and your reward shall be great."

"Forty minutes after that he emerged from a restaurant with a big basket and a fish pole, bound up the river. In the basket was a chicken, pickles, cake, pie and a bottle of liquid of a rich color, and he was just lighting a 20 cent cigar, when his wife came along.

"What! you here!" he exclaimed.

"Yes, I am going to the market. Where are you going—what's in the basket?"

"I was going to carry this pole around to a friend on Jefferson avenue," he modestly answered.

"And that basket?"

"That basket—well, I was going to take it to the orphan asylum as a present to the children. It is a donation from six leading citizens."

"William, I don't believe it!"

"Sh! Don't talk so loud!"

"William, I shall talk louder yet!" she exclaimed. "I'll bet you are going fishing!"

"Mary, have I ever deceived you?" he plaintively asked. "I never have! As proof of my sincerity you can take this basket to the Asylum yourself!"

"And I'll do it!" she promptly replied, as she relieved him of it.

"Mary, hadn't you—?"

"No, sir, I hadn't! You'd better hurry up with that fish-pole, as the man may want it, and be careful how you stand around in the hot sun!"

She left him there. He watched her take the car for home, and then he returned the fish-pole and crossed the street and said to an acquaintance:

"Tom, I'm suffering with neuralgia, and the excursion is off till next week. Too bad, but we can never tell what a day may bring forth."

There was a chicken and pickles and other good things on the table at dinner, but he never smiled. Even when his wife wished she was an orphan, if that was the way they were fed, he never betrayed the gloom in his heart. It was only when she handed him the bottle he had so carefully tucked into the basket, and he saw it labeled: "Good for little children," that he said:

"Mary it is an awful thing for a wife to get the impression that her husband is a cold-blooded liar!"

"It must be," she replied, as she took the other chicken leg.

THE CANADA THISTLE.

Farmers and others interested should bear in mind the following law which was passed by our State Legislature last winter:

Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That any person or persons who shall knowingly and wilfully bring into this State any bale or bales of hay containing Canada thistle or seeds of the same, or any grass or grain with which the seeds of Canada thistle shall be mixed, or who shall knowingly or wilfully sell any manure containing any Canada thistle or seeds of the same, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and, on conviction thereof, shall be liable to a fine not exceeding one hundred dollars or to imprisonment in the county jail, workhouse, or penitentiary of the county in which such conviction shall take place, or both fine and imprisonment may be imposed, in the discretion of the Court.

NEWSPAPER ADVERTISING.

Newspaper advertising is now recognized, business men having faith in their own wares as the most effective means for securing for their goods a wide recognition of their merits.

Newspaper advertising impels inquiry, and when the article offered is of good quality and at a fair price, the natural result of increased sales.

Newspaper advertising is a permanent addition to the reputation of the goods advertised, because it is a permanent influence always at work in their interest.

Newspaper advertising is the most energetic and vigilant of salesmen; addressing thousands each week, always in the advertiser's interest, and ceaselessly at work seeking customers from all classes.

Newspaper advertising promotes trade, for even in the dullest times advertisers secure by far the largest share of what is being done.

NOT HIS HANDWRITING.

"Sir," said a fierce lawyer to a witness, "do you, on your solemn oath, declare that this is not your handwriting?"

"I think not," was the cold reply.

"Does it resemble your handwriting?"

"Yes, sir, I think it don't."

"Do you swear that it don't resemble your handwriting?"

"Well, I do."

"You take a solemn oath that this writing does not resemble yours in a single letter?"

"Ye-e-s, sir."

"Now how do you know?"

"Cause I can't and never could write."

The Constitutionalist.

Published every Friday by
W. L. FORCE and A. L. FORCE.

CONTRAST.

Mr. Bookwalter, the Democratic candidate for Governor of Ohio, is an extensive employer of mechanical labor, and previous to the last Presidential election thus addressed his workmen:

"Men, I am a Democrat. Many of you are Republicans. I shall vote for Hancock. You may vote for whom you please. Men, this shop will not stop work, no matter who is elected, Hancock or Garfield. Work will continue all the same, and your wages shall not be reduced."

What a contrast between that noble utterance of Freedom and the dastardly threats of Despotism as made by many Republican employers in the State of New Jersey, who forced Democrats to vote contrary to convictions of right or be deprived of bread for their families.

FRAUD.

There was a flourish of trumpets at the coming in of the present administration over the discovery of extensive frauds in the letting of certain mail contracts, styled "Star Route," and assurances given that the investigation would be prosecuted and the guilty parties brought to speedy justice.

The matter appears to have died out. Honest men are wondering why.

It is obvious that great corruption has existed in that particular branch of the government service and an immense sum been thereby filched from the Treasury.

Why are not the facts made public?

The people have the right to know all.

Who were the plunderers?

How much did they steal?

What was done with the money?

Let us have the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth.

The day for "division and silence" has passed by.

EQUALITY.

Equality is a distinguishing feature of the Democratic party and of high honor. Democracy claims that all men, whether rich or poor, public or private, are exactly equal in the eyes of the law, worthy to receive its impartial protection, and alike liable to bear inflicted penalty for its violation.

The Democratic idea of equality is the meting out of strict justice to every person, affording all the sure opportunity of pursuing upright and prosperous lives, and shielding none beneath the flimsy covering of assumed personal superiority, whether of blood, treasure or position. Democracy cannot perceive equity in permitting rich and respectable, so called, thieves to go free and locking poor ones behind prison bars. It would punish each according to the extent of proven crime.

Equal and exact justice is the corner stone of Democracy.

ARISTOCRACY.

In this country we are, as yet, clear of a titled nobility and its absurd characteristics.

Here, fortunately, no privileged class can lawfully and imperiously extort tribute and admiration.

Are we safe?

The question is not frivolous.

Is not the foul germ of aristocracy seeking to take root even in the Republican soil of America?

We believe so. There is an aristocracy of wealth, fully as hateful as that of titled rank and more dangerous, because utterly mercenary.

Therein lurks our peril.

We have no controversy with personal wealth. If a man can honestly accumulate millions he has the right to do so, and if a good citizen, his enlarged riches will be a blessing to himself and others. But, if he presumes that, because rich he is better than fellow mortals, entitled to extraordinary favors, and makes money the lever of tyrannical self power instead of judicious generosity, he will become, if he can, the worst kind of an aristocrat.

The United States represents an immense domain. The public welfare demands that it be decreed not roomy enough for golden or any other stripe of kings.

MEDDLESOME OFFICIOUSNESS.

The Somerset Gazette's issue of the 11th inst. developed every symptom of one of its periodical attacks of irrationality—attacks that seem destined to become chronic with our contemporary. If it continues to foster such unreasonable sentiments as appeared in one or two of its editorials of the date referred to. Generally, obtuse remarks indirectly pointed at us in common with others, we pass unnoticed; but as THE CONSTITUTIONALIST was the only journal that called the attention of the Bound Brook citizens to their lack of appreciation of the services rendered them by the Plainfield firemen—which remarks were at once endorsed by the Bound Brook Chronicle—the Gazette's criticism in the premises takes the form of a personal attack upon this paper.

We feel sorry for the want of intelligence in the readers of the Gazette, when its editor feels himself able to impose upon their common sense by a mass of mis-statements and fabrications. Although knowing it to be false, the Gazette states that "from almost that day [when checks were sent the Somerville companies for their service] till this, some of the Plainfield journals, and even the Bound Brook paper, kept before the public the fact that Mr. Talmadge 'only sent his checks to Somerville'." The fact of the case is that the matter was only spoken of once, and then merely when referring to the payment by the Plainfield Fire Department without objection, of a bill for damages sustained by a steamer while on duty at the Bound Brook fire. Also it states that the "Plainfield journals hinted darkly that when next in need Plainfield might not respond so nobly"—which is the basest sort of a falsification as it is a creation entirely of the Gazette's vivid imagination.

Whose battle the Gazette has taken upon itself to fight, it is impossible to imagine. Mr. Talmadge says "I plead guilty to the indictment and hasten to make amends individually," and as no one else suffers from what the Gazette calls "the late successful attempt to extort twenty-five dollars," we are at a loss to understand who the Gazette is championing in such an absurd and preposterous manner. In speaking of the gift sent the Somerville firemen the Gazette says: "It was a voluntary gift from a private individual, such as he had a right to make and the recipients to receive. It was nobody's business but that of the donor and donees." Right you are, Mr. Gazette—and the gift to Plainfield most decidedly is none of your business. You seem fond of preaching but disinclined to practice. "Wise folks at such times keep their mouths shut" is another of your applicable texts, the suggestions contained in which should be followed at home. And to cap the climax, after criticising us as unwise and immoral, extorters of money, minders of other's affairs, censurers of a man's actions, and calling the Plainfield firemen ignoble, envious and crusty and so on through the vocabulary, this indignant journal generously remarks "The check has gone to them; we find no fault." Verily it strikes us that consistency is the one thing—besides intelligence—that the Gazette seems not to possess.

ANXIETY FOR THE PRESIDENT.

It is with regret that we have felt compelled each week since the shooting of President Garfield, to express our belief that he would never again arise from his bed alive. Although other journals have merely seen fit to reflect the wording of the unsatisfactory bulletins emanating from the physicians in charge, we have rather judged of the patient's condition from the state of his case as it appeared. Week after week he was reported as "better" and "improving" in spite of the facts that a loss of seventy pounds was noticeable and two additional incisions were necessary to carry off a strength-sapping and continuous flow from the wound. During the past few days a most alarming relapse has occurred, and not only has the President's pastor considered his presence appropriate but Secretaries Blaine and Lincoln have been summoned to Washington. Even the surgeons in attendance express anxiety, and the whole country—we may say the whole World—is in a state of sympathetic suspense. As we go to press a favorable change is reported, and the late crisis may be considered as past; but it would be rash to assume that he is beyond the danger of another and as unexpected a relapse.

It is reported that the late Judge Clifford left a detailed and complete history of the Electoral Commission, of which he is a member; that its publication will create a sensation throughout the country, and that it rests with his wife to say whether it shall be published.

Each of the twenty-one counties of this State (except Somerset) will elect a Sheriff and three Coroners, and some will choose other officers the coming Fall. Somerville elected a Sheriff at a special election to fill a vacancy caused by death, thus making the first break in the system of all the counties electing at one time.

Some of our recent Democratic Governors of New Jersey, notably ex-Judge Bedle and General McClellan, attempted to carry out the impossible idea of maintaining a "non-partizan judiciary" by appointing Republican Judges. We said, on several such occasions, that the opposite party never think of doing the same thing when in power. We shall have a distinguished illustration of the question as to whether we were mistaken, or not, by the time Congress meets. The death of Judge Nathan Clifford leaves but one Democrat on the Bench of the Supreme Court of the United States—Justice Field. Will the Republican Administration carry out, in this case, the practice the benefit of which was so readily accepted by their friends in this State? If there is a judicial tribunal in the country which should be free from partizan bias, it is the Supreme Court. Shall we have a concession to the principle by the appointment of a Democrat to the vacant Judgeship? We have not the least idea that it will be so.—West Hoboken News.

Pretty Jennie Cramer's tragical fate at West Haven, Conn., whether it shall prove to be a case of murder or of suicide, points a very conspicuous moral. It appears from the statements of the mother of the girl that the latter had told her that young Malley, who sought her society, had made improper proposals to her, yet the girl was permitted by her mother to visit places of amusement and partake of suppers in his company and that of his cousin and a strange girl from New York, who proves to be a woman of the town. No wonder that Jennie fell. One night she did not return at all, and it is now known that she passed the night with young Malley. When she did come home the next morning, the mother harshly chided her and threatened to turn her out of doors. She disappeared, and the next known of her her dead body was found on the shore of the harbor. Whether in remorse at her fall she sought oblivion in death, or was drugged and thrown into the water by her betrayers, the responsibility for her dreadful end comes back upon the criminal recklessness and blindness of her parents, who permitted her to fall into the trap of which they had due warning. In her giddy vanity and love of admiration the girl herself went blindfold to her doom; but those who should have guarded and saved her appear to have interposed no obstacle in her way. There are too many parents like the Cramers in America, and that is why there are so many Jennie Cramer mysteries.—Phila. Record.

LOCAL ANNEX.

A New Brooklyn Fire.

On Saturday afternoon last a barn belonging to Mr. Volney Green at New Brooklyn, alongside of the railroad track, was entirely consumed with its contents. The latter consisted of 300 bushels of wheat, 9 tons of hay, a reaper, mower, and a number of agricultural implements belonging to Mr. Wm. Van Nest, on which there was no insurance. The flames spread to adjoining sheds and from there to a small dwelling occupied by Mr. Morgan Compton, which was also uninsured and was an entire loss. The furniture and property of Mr. Compton, however, he succeeded in saving with the exception of a few trifling articles. Two pigs belonging to the latter, contained in a pen near by, were also burned. Mr. Green's barn was insured for $1,200.

It was at first thought that the fire was caused by the sparks from a passing locomotive, but as the wind was blowing in the wrong direction for such an accident, the reason was looked for elsewhere. Two young sons of neighbors who were playing around the barn at the time have since been credited with setting the place on fire. One of them says that the other struck a match and lit the hay to see it burn, and afterwards finding it blazing up out of reach, endeavored to suppress the flames by smothering them with corn-stalks. This accusation the other denies, but the two are undoubtedly to blame for the occurrence.

The reflection of the fire was seen in this city and watched from the alarm tower, but the bell was not rung.

Washington Rock.

The hop given to the guests of the hotel at the above place on Saturday evening last, was one of the most pleasant affairs of the season at that place. Though the day being a very hot one, a fine breeze sprang up during the evening and the dancing was kept up until nearly midnight; before that hour, however, a very palatable collation was served up by the proprietor of the house, which concluded the entertainment. The music was by Prof. Franze. Toasts were given and responded to by the guests Messrs. Geo. H. Krause, T. T. Brown, J. H. Staats and others. The hotel is now full and has been for some weeks. The number of daily transient visitors at the Washington Rock Mountain House is increasing every season and during the present year we understand has been greater than ever.

For The Constitutionalist.

MESSRS. EDITORS:—

As the public schools of this city are again to be supplied with coal from New Brooklyn, it seems to me only justice to the coal merchants of Plainfield to state that the Board of Education will pay for this new supply 70 cents a ton more than it was offered them from a yard in this city. This amount of excess on a hundred ton you will readily agree is an item of needless expense worth looking after.

TAXPAYER.

MESSRS. EDITORS:

GENTLEMEN:—Will you kindly permit me through your columns to return my sincere thanks to the officers and members of "Excelsior" H. & L. Co. of Scotch Plains, and "Westfield" H. & L. Co., of Westfield, and the citizens generally, for their prompt and energetic aid in subduing the fire at my Coal and Lumber yard, at Fanwood, on Sunday last, which by their unceasing efforts for several hours, with a very scanty supply of water, was checked midway, and the largest half of the property saved from what at first threatened to be total destruction. And I wish especially to say that I feel under great obligations to the Westfield firemen for their very quick response to our call for assistance, and the effective manner in which they handled their "Little Giant" chemical engine, which contributed to so great an extent to the success of the day.

Respectfully,
CHAS. A. SMITH.

Fanwood, Aug. 17th, 1881.

Dr. Vincent at Chautauqua.

The Rev. John H. Vincent delivered a lecture at Chautauqua, Tuesday morning, on "Theological Education," in which he announced the general plan and purpose of the Chautauqua School of Theology. In speaking of the needs of ministers, the Doctor said that no man but a Christian could judge art and science justly. Such a man reads between the lines. Students of theology should learn Greek and Hebrew, but they should not aim to become specialists. They should study humanity. They should study man in all his attributes, and lend all his energies to help and save him. Twenty years ago Moody spoke in rough, inelegant language. To-day he speaks graceful, pure English, as the result of earnestness and spiritual culture. There must be study after the student has left the seminary. Christ is the model teacher and preacher. Chautauqua now proposes a training for ministers, supplemental to that of the seminaries, by means of the undenominational Chautauqua School of Theology, organized under New York State law.

The following officers of the school are announced: The Rev. Dr. John H. Vincent, of New Haven, Conn., President; the Rev. Luther T. Townsend, D. D., of Boston, Dean. Trustees—F. H. Root, of Buffalo; the Rev. S. J. M. Eaton, of Franklin, Penn.; William M. Taylor, D. D., (Congregationalist,) of New York; Bishop Randolph S. Foster, D. D., (Methodist,) of Boston; the Rev. Philip Schaff, D. D., (Presbyterian,) of New York; the Rev. Joseph T. Duryea, D. D., (Congregationalist,) of Boston; the Rev. J. M. Buckley, D. D., (Methodist,) editor of the Christian Advocate, New York; the Rev. H. M. Sanders, D. D., (Baptist,) Yonkers, N. Y., and the Rev. Atticus G. Haywood, D. D., (Southern Methodist,) Oxford, Ga., author of "Our Brethren in Black." The Rev. A. E. Kitteridge is Secretary of the Archæological Department. President Vincent conducted the opening exercises of the school in the afternoon.

Don't Miss It.

WITHOUT PARALLEL IN THE AMUSEMENT WORLD.

One of the leading attractions with Batcheller & Doris' Great Inter-Ocean Largest Show on earth, which is to exhibit at Plainfield, on Tuesday, Aug. 23d, are the miraculous feats of Zazel, generally termed the Human Cannon Ball and Queen of the Air, by the press of London and Paris, where she has been the reigning sensation for the past two years. This remarkable young lady is rammed into the muzzle of an immense piece of artillery, which is loaded with powder in full view of the audience, and is shot horizontally seventy-five feet into mid-air to the dome of the canvass, where she alights upon a slender cobweb wire, which she crosses and re-crosses, performing such feats as Riding a Bicycle blindfolded, walking upon stilts, running and dancing with her feet encased in sacks, and other danger-defying acts. Zazel has already appeared in New York, Boston and Chicago. We clip the following from leading journals of those cities:

Zazel in her thrilling acts was the culmination of the performance. Her astonishing leap, her wire walking, and the cannon feat, excited the enthusiasm of the spectators to the highest pitch.—New York Herald.

The performance concluded with the sensation of the show—Zazel. The series of remarkable feats that are displayed by this young lady are truly wonderful. Her walk upon an almost invisible wire is a picture of beauty. One almost imagines she has wings. Her dive from the top of the canvass is so graceful that it relieves the mind of all its fear for the personal welfare of the brave little gymnast. Her flight from the monster gun is effected so quickly that the audience have hardly time to realize that the report of the powder and the discharge of the female cannon ball has actually taken place.—Chicago Journal.

Chief among the novelties was Zazel in her startling feats. This little lady walks a wire the size of a common knitting needle, stretched across the tent high in the air, from which she plunges head foremost into space. A frightful accident seems absolutely unavoidable, but she turns in her flight and alights with perfect safety in the net before the people who have been watching her, have fairly recovered their breath; then the lady crawls into the mouth of a monster cannon, the torch is applied, an explosion is heard, and out from amid the smoke she flies many feet into the air, only to fall as safely as before.—Boston Herald.

Heavy Damages Claimed for Assault.

Mr. John Bute Holmes has gone to law again for redress (?) and has sued Constable Weaver of North Plainfield for assault and battery upon a late occasion when that officer endeavored to prevent Mr. Holmes laying his hands on a woman. Mr. H. has also brought suit against ex-Street Commissioner John Wilson under the same plea, which offence occurred some time ago at the depot where the former called the latter a bad name and came near being thrashed for it. The damages are placed at $5,000 in each case. Mr. Craig A. Marsh will look out for the interests of both defendants in the higher courts.

SPORTSMEN'S CORNER.

Maud S., the wonderful trotting mare trotted a mile at Rochester, Thursday the 11th, in 2:10¾. Fifteen thousand people cheered her as she cut down her own record, the best in the world, by one-quarter of a second.

Resolute Truck, of Morristown, has elected the following officers: H. A. Freeman, President; E. J. Thatcher, Foreman; Frank DuBois, Asst. Foreman; Clerk, W. K. Norris; Treasurer, W. A. Halsted; Steward, E. J. Babbington.

Dr. Newton, the New Jersey State Inspector of Milk, says that there are no places in New Jersey where so much impure milk is sold as at Ocean Grove and Asbury Park, places that are commonly recommended for sick children. The Doctor believes that many children have lost their lives there simply on account of the impurity of the milk sold and guaranteed to be pure.

MISCELLANEOUS.

AN ORDINANCE

Regulating Sewage and Drainage in Peace Street, North Avenue and adjacent territory.

Whereas, on the 14th day of December, 1874, an ordinance was passed regularly laying a sewer to drain through Peace street, certain territory adjacent thereto, and

Whereas, said sewer is a public sewer under the care of the city, and

Whereas, said sewer has been used by the railroad company and, to some extent, by other parties for the disposition of sewage [illegible] in a way to create a nuisance, and to endanger the public health, and

Whereas, the Mayor reports a willingness of the railroad company to construct, at its own expense, a capacious and substantial receptacle in places as specified, for the deposit of said sewage matter, in order to the abatement of the nuisance, now, therefore,

The Inhabitants of the city of Plainfield, by their Common Council, do enact as follows:

Section 1. That the improvement [illegible] forth in the letter of the railroad company bearing date July 5, 1881, and the plans herein [illegible], upon the conditions therein set forth and [illegible] drainage system described therein, are hereby approved and authorized and accepted.

Sec. 2. That the said drainage be [illegible] the care of the street commissioner, who in all things relating thereto shall act under advice of the street committee.

Sec. 3. That the street commissioner is directed to construct at once, at an expense not to exceed $50, an additional cesspool for the reception of overflow or water drainage at some convenient point on the line of the Peace street sewer.

Sec. 4. That any private citizen may, by the payment in advance on the first day of August of each year of ten dollars to the city treasurer, make properly trapped sewage connections with the sewer, under arrangements to be approved by the street committee, and may maintain the same at the discretion of the said committee so long as the said fee is annually paid.

Sec. 5. That in cases where the terms of the last section (§4) are not complied with the street commissioner is hereby charged with the duty of severing any private sewage connection with the said sewer.

Sec. 6. That all ordinances and resolutions and parts of ordinances and resolutions inconsistent herewith are hereby repealed.

Adopted by the Common Council, Aug. 8, 1881.
Approved by the Mayor, Aug. 10, 1881.

SALE OF LANDS FOR TAXES IN WESTFIELD TOWNSHIP.

Notice is hereby given that by virtue of a warrant, issued by the Township Committee of Westfield Township, Union County, N. J., under their common seal, signed by their Chairman and attested by their Clerk, pursuant to the statute in such case made and provided for the collection of taxes laid on certain lands in said township for the year 1880, the subscriber, collector of said township, will on Wednesday, the 21st day of September, 1881, at the hour of two o'clock p. m. of said day, at the Township rooms in the Township of Westfield, Union County, N. J., by public auction, sell the lands and premises hereinafter described, taxed to the undernamed persons, to make the taxes with interest, costs, fees, charges and expenses thereon, to any person or persons who will take the same for the shortest time, not exceeding thirty years, and pay the amount due thereon. ONE night last week a blanket was taken from the stable of Mr. Eden L. Boice and a quilt from the wood-house of Mr. John H. Brown. No trace of the thief was discovered, but a watch will be kept and when he returns for the horse and the bed that belong to the articles taken, his capture is expected.

MR. NICHOLAS KELLY, of this city, is in trouble again. He had an officer up before the bar on Monday for "assaulting" him, and was the next day himself arraigned for resisting arrest on account of drunkenness. The officer accused gave bonds to await further action, but Mr. Kelly was consigned to jail on account of his inability to command the required amount of bail.

THE case of Mary Sullivan against John Bute Holmes, for $200 claimed by plaintiff for her labor as housekeeper for the defendant, was tried before Justice Mc Loughlin in North Plainfield, on Thursday morning. Craig A. Marsh, Esq., appeared for Miss Sullivan and Messrs. Ransom & Haines for the Defendant. The Court reserved its decision for one week.

ON Monday, Aug. 22d, at 2 p. m., Mr. T. J. Gillies will sell at auction the household furniture, growing crops, farming implements, etc., of Mr. O. M. Putnam, on the road from Washington Valley to Scotch Plains. Mr. Putnam having sold his residence and intending to remove elsewhere, no better opportunity to purchase many desirable articles at the buyers own price, has ever been offered.

WHILE an employee of Mr. E.C. Maltby, residing on Plainfield Avenue, was engaged in plowing on the premises Thursday morning, the two horses attached to the plow took fright and ran away. The workman, who had the lines around his body, was dragged a distance, but escaped serious injuries. The animals ran up Plainfield Avenue to Front Street, a distance of over a mile, dragging the plow after them. In front of Force's Billiard Parlors, the loose reins caught on the hub of Mr. John Tingley's truck wagon, and overturned it. The shock of the collision threw the runaways to the ground and they were captured by bystanders. Mr. Maltby shortly afterward appeared on the scene and paid all damages caused to Mr. T's wagon. It was a miraculous escape from serious damage and loss of life, when it is considered the circumstance of the animals dragging a heavy plow through crowded streets at the pace they were going.

He Still Lives.

We are surprised to discover that County Attorney Gilhooley has so little sense of shame as to visit this city after the severe reproval passed upon his conduct recently by the Plainfield Common Council. It is with regret that we also noticed upon the occasion of his appearance on our streets, that he has lost no flesh and still retains his cheerful spirits and courteous sociability in the face of the terrible censure he has received. Such failure on Mr. Gilhooley's part to appreciate the stigma branded upon him is most reprehensible, and demands our gravest condemnation.

The "Rock House."

It was our pleasure one day last week to visit that celebrated locality, Washington Rock, which is situated on top of the mountain back of Plainfield, and partake of the hospitalities of the proprietor of the "Rock House," S. O. Staats, Esq. We were somewhat agreeably surprised at the many improvements and changes made about the premises since we last visited there. The house is well filled with guests, who speak in the highest terms of Mr. Staats' proprietorship. The table is always supplied with the best the market affords, while the rates for board are reasonable. The grounds about the hotel are tastefully laid out and kept clean and neat. Fine croquet grounds, swings, etc. furnish means of pleasure to guests. Stages run twice a day to and from Plainfield and Dunellen to the "Rock House." The proprietor has recently made decided improvements in the bar-room, by enlarging the room, putting in a pool table, and painting and papering the walls. Liquors, wines, ales and segars of the choicest brands only are dispensed over the bar. To strangers, who have never visited this historic spot, the view to be obtained of the surrounding country for miles around, is always alluded to afterward as one of grandeur. This season at the "Rock House" has been one of success and pleasure. Scarcely a day passes but there is either a large picnic or pleasure party on the grounds. In the evening the spacious ball room of the hotel is utilized by the guests for impromptu dance and musical soirees.

Saengerbund Festivities.

A magnificent moon-light evening, with the temperature at a most comfortable point, were two of the many favorable circumstances that surrounded the occasion of the annual out-door festival of the Plainfield Saengerbund, on Thursday of last week. Like events in the past have universally drawn together large attendances in enjoyment of their attractions, but the affair of last week far surpassed in every particular all previous ones. The committee of arrangements was composed of Mr. E. Bachman, President, and Messrs. G. Bremer, H. Rohweder, W. Faibel and E. Laurent, whose labors were generously contributed and most satisfactorily performed. Before the day selected everything for the good of the cause had been prepared, and in consequence not a feeling of disappointment arose in the breast of even the hardest to suit. The music of eight pieces under the direction of Prof. Franze, was unusually fine, the dancing platform was commodious, the grove was brilliantly illuminated, the refreshment stands were inexhaustible, the singing by the Society's chorus was exceedingly pleasurable, the weather was perfect, the atmosphere refreshing and in fact every feature connected with the occasion and all circumstances surrounding it were exceptionally desirable. The services of the musicians had been engaged until midnight, but the dancers were at that time still unsatisfied and the orchestra continued for two hours longer. Even then the gathering had hardly commenced to disperse, and it was three o'clock of Friday morning before the lanterns had been extinguished and the last couple strolled homeward.

The Last Excursion.

The members of Gazelle Engine and Hose Companies propose to close the season with a grand excursion on Wednesday, Sept. 7th. They have selected Neshaminy Falls Grove and Rocky Glen as their destination, and will undoubtedly transport thereto one of the largest crowds of the year. The location of the Grove is one of the most romantic in the country, 18 miles this side of Philadelphia on the Bound Brook route and situated on the shores of a beautiful lake. A covered dancing pavilion 64x40 feet is erected on the grounds, and every facility for boating, fishing and other out-door sports is available. Franze's brass and string band will be in attendance throughout the day, and an attractive order of dancing will be carried out. All baskets and other baggage taken will be transported to and from the station free of charge. Besides refreshments of all kinds, a cooked dinner will be served on the grounds at fifty cents a head. The Committee of Arrangements is Messrs. Jeremiah Moore, Frank Wright, Clarkson Hope, Charles Johnson and Wm. Ryder. Tickets will be one dollar each, children under 12 years of age 50 cents—to be procured of members of the companies. The train will leave Plainfield at 8 o'clock in the morning, stopping at Dunellen, each way.

Plainfield's Water Supply.

Now that other cities and towns of the State are already provided with the many desirable conveniences available from public water works, and even Somerville is being lain with mains and pipes to convey an exhaustless supply of water wherever required, the public of Plainfield are awakening to a sense of the lack of such necessary accommodation in this city. To many of our citizens will be a surprise, the statement that the past and present Common Councils are probably alone to blame for the non-existence at this day of the great improvement and advantage to the city that would result upon the erection and service of such works. A petition was presented by Mr. John M. Whiton, to the Common Council of which he was a member, on the evening of June 21st, 1880, and thereupon referred to a Special Committee that failed to make any report concerning it up to the time of the expiration of their term. Since the existence of the Council of '81 the same culpable neglect regarding the matter has been shown, and the Plainfield Water Supply Co., which was the signer of the petition, still awaits courteously the action of the Council before proceeding to lay its pipes through the streets of the city.

A perpetual charter was granted the Plainfield Water Supply Co., by the Legislature of the State of New Jersey, in April, 1869, and a supplement added in 1874. Under this the Company was organized and incorporated, and the subscription books thrown open on June 4th, 1880, from one to five o'clock p. m., during which hours the entire amount of stock, $125,000, was taken. The present directors are: Messrs. Elias R. Pope, John W. Murray, J. Frank Hubbard and E. N. Erickson, of this city; Frank H. Collins, Townsend Cox and James F. Cox of New York; Jesse W. Starr, Peter L. Voorhees and H. P. M. Birkenbine of Philadelphia, and John O. White of Camden. The officers are: President, Townsend Cox, chairman Commissioners of Charities and Correction of New York city; Treasurer, Frank H. Collins; Secretary, Elias R. Pope, and Engineer, H. P. M. Birkenbine, who is at present the Engineer of the celebrated Fairmount Water Works at Philadelphia and the constructor of its latest additions and improvements. The Plainfield Water Supply Co, was ready to begin work on July 1st, 1880, and at that time could have erected its reservoirs and built its power and aqueducts at a figure probably $20,000 less than the same work can be done and material purchased, to-day. Section 6 of the Company's charter says: "And be it enacted, That the said Water Supply Company is hereby authorized and empowered to take water from any lake, pond, stream or spring within the county of Union or adjoining counties, except the Rahway river and its branches, provided, the rights of owners damaged thereby be legally obtained or paid for as hereinafter provided; and to store and convey such water by means of acqueducts, pipes, mains, reservoirs and other suitable works and appliances through the lands, streets and roads of the town or village of Plainfield and adjoining towns; and also to take and hold any land or other property, and to exercise any powers not inconsistent with the laws of this State for carrying into full effect the purposes of this act." Under such provision the Company's attorney considers, with seeming reason and justness, that it is fully empowered and authorized to proceed at once with its intended project. The Directors, however, as a matter of form and to prevent any complications arising out of injunctions served by parties averse to the scheme, caused a petition to be handed the Council of '80 with the result we record above. This petition if we understand its tenor correctly, merely asks the permission of the Council to carry out the authority the Legislature has already specifically granted the Company. The city is not asked to appropriate a single dollar now nor at any time, and is not bound to use the water when it becomes available or to assume the slightest obligation to employ the service at any future time. On the other hand the Company offer to supply the School, Fire Department buildings and other public places with free water, and to erect and keep running one or two public fountains. Why the petition has not been reported on we have been unable to discover, but there seems to be a power behind the throne that seems to desire that the Company should commence work under the provisions of its charter, and thereby afford an opportunity for the placing of injunctions upon it, stopping the progress of its labors, placing the matter at the pleasure of the dilatory courts and in other ways retarding the completion of the purpose and adding to the expense of its consummation. We cannot but assume that had there been a single point upon which to base a recommendation that the petition be not granted, a report to that effect would have been handed in by the Committee to the Council, months ago. Had the permission desired been granted, the works erected and the water conducted through our streets to the doors of our houses, the city in its relation to the matter would be just where it is now. While on the other hand, those wishing to be supplied with water, unlimited in quantity and of the purest quality, might be connected with the mains at once upon notification to the Company.

Any thought of damage to the city is entirely out of the question. The Company expresses its willingness to enter into any amount of bonds to re-place the streets in the condition they were before being dug up for the laying of the necessary pipes. But the advantage to the city the service would be, is apparent to any who will give the subject a moment's thought. One particular feature alone that presents itself, is sufficient to claim for the scheme the favor of our citizens. The Company stands ready to bind itself to provide for the use of the Fire Department whenever it desires them, either when the supply is ready or ten years hence, any number of hydrants at a yearly rental such as may be agreed upon. There are sections of this city wherein, if a fire became started, nothing could be done by means of the water available at present, to prevent the destruction of thousands of dollars worth of property. When such inevitable casualty overtakes us we will wish that $2,000 of the $7,000 spent for "fire purposes" had been paid the Plainfield Water Supply Co. for the use of fifty hydrants and their inexhaustible resources of water.

It is intended to get the water direct from wells driven into the ground, and to force it into an enormous "stand-pipe" of sufficient height to allow its level to be above the top stories of the largest buildings, and of sufficient size to contain an unlimited supply for any emergency. Experiments made and various tests, have established the fact that the water flows beneath this city in literal strata, with a current that sets directly from north to south. In view of this, the proposed wells will be driven in the northern limits of the city, outside of any section that is built upon. Thereby will be secured the very purest water obtainable, for it will be conducted into the reservoir before it reaches the city and receives there the surface and waste water that filters through the soil from various sources. The prices charged for the use of the supply, we are promised, will be so low (if not lower) than any other city or town of Plainfield's size in the State. The once universal belief that water works should never be erected in a place that has no system of sewerage, seems to have been proven fallacious. It is improbable that any more water will be used when taken from street mains than when taken from tanks. Residents may use it lavishly in laying the dust in front of their houses and watering their lawns, but our soil soon absorbs such independent of artificial drainage. If our cess-pools serve their purpose now, they will be all that is necessary in the event of a water supply being constructed. If our city has or will become so thickly populated as to grow unhealthy from insufficient drainage, it is as necessary to provide a system of sewerage in one case as in the other. What the outcome will be of the efforts to supply Plainfield with water by the company we have spoken of, it is impossible to foretell. Be what it will, however, a report on the petition is due, and will go far towards settling the question of "Water or No Water."

Obituary—John H. Martine.

John H. Martine, who died at his residence in Fanwood at nine o'clock on Saturday evening at the age of seventy-five, was a grandson of Captain Daniel Martine, a Revolutionary officer who served in the New York line during the whole war, and whose earliest commission as second lieutenant in Col. Samuel Drake's regiment, is carefully preserved in the State Library, Albany, as the earliest document now known bearing the arms of the State of New York. Mr. Martine after a successful business life in New York has resided for many years in this county, highly respected as a man of sound judgment, sterling integrity and capacity. He took an active interest in town and county matters, and repeatedly served as assessor in the town of Westfield. Some years ago, with his brother Daniel, he purchased the property now known as the Martine estate on Broadway, Prospect and Park avenues of this city, from Wm. E. Dodge, Esq. Subsequently he withdrew from the joint ownership and bought a large tract of land in the township of Scotch Plains. A portion of this was afterwards sold to Central Railroad Co., which changed their line of track so as to run through it and erected thereon the present Fanwood depot.

The funeral took place from Mr. Martine's late residence in Fanwood on Wednesday, and the remains were brought to this city and interred in North Plainfield. The pall-bearers were Messrs. Wm. Ayres, John Simpson, Stites Parse, Wm. Stanbery, Wm. C. Butler and James Ritchie. There were present at the ceremonies, Messrs Forsyth and Owen Sullivan of the Board of Freeholders; County Clerk Jas. Vosseller, County Attorney P. H. Gilhooley, County Collector P. Sheridan, Ex-Sheriff N. K. Thompson, County Physician Terrill, Warden Marsh and other county officials.

His wife preceded him to the grave the day before he died, and a son and daughter, both unmarried, are left to mourn their double loss.

Mr. Jake Moore of the Independent Athletic Club, has left for a visit to his brother in Arizona. The latter with Mr. Ellice Potter, Jr., of Park avenue and Seventh street, is the proprietor of an extensive cattle ranche in that section.

Ex-Councilman John Harris and wife have returned from a six weeks' trip to Island Heights, Barnegat Bay, where, with a party of friends, they have been enjoying the pleasures of "camping out." In one day's fishing the party captured 327 weak fish.

Director C. W. L. Martine of the Union County Board of Freeholders, has been called upon to bear the terrible loss of both father and mother within the past week—the former dying the day after the latter was buried. James E. Martine, Esq. of this city was a nephew of the deceased.

Mr. A. C. Baldwin, of Messrs. Schepflin, Baldwin, Tweedy & Co., having purchased the desirable lot at the north-east corner of Park and Crescent avenues, it is rumored that he will build thereon a handsome residence and take unto himself a bride from Brooklyn to dwell with him therein.

NORTH PLAINFIELD PARAGRAPHS.

Mrs. Austin's Craig Place School will open on Monday, Sept. 5th. Already numerous applications have been made for the admittance of their children by parents who appreciate the thorough and effective system of education pursued by this lady. Those desiring to enter scholars should communicate at once before the classes are filled.

WESTFIELD WISPS.

The Messrs. Welch Bros. are painting and re-decorating the Baptist church.

Rev. Mr. French occupied the pulpit of Grace Episcopal church on Sunday last.

The celebrated and well known Johnny McCarthy, departed this life on Wednesday of last week. We refer to the horse of that name.

Rev. Thomas Simms occupied the pulpit of the Presbyterian church on Sunday last and will fill the pulpit of the M. E. church next Sunday.

Rev. Mr. Hoagland of the Methodist church exchanged with the Rev. Mr. Compton (supply) of the Cranford M. E. church on Sunday morning last.

Road Overseer Pierson, Dist. No. 8, has made great improvements to both the roadway and walks of Elm street. Broad street next Mr. Overseer.

Mr. Alfred Westbrook and wife accompanied by Mr. Edmund E. Hoyle and wife, their visitors from England, visited Boynton's on Thursday of last week.

A son of Mr. J. H. Carberry had the misfortune to break his collar bone last week. Dr. Sherman Cooper set the injured member, and at last accounts the patient was doing well.

Miss Louisa Decker, our popular assistant at the Post Office, left us on Wednesday evening last to join her mother in a visit to relations at Jerseyville, Illinois. Pleasant journey, safe return.

Vesper services were held at the M. E. church on Sunday evening last at 7:30. At their conclusion the pastor delivered a very pleasing and instructive address upon the history of the church hymns and hymnal.

Mr. W. H. Elston, the popular principal of our public school, returned from his summer vacation this week with his family. They have been enjoying a pleasant visit to their friends in the vicinity of New York's capitol.

Johnny Brokmeier, well known as both an experienced and (hard to beat) horse trader, was taken seriously ill with hemorrhage of the lungs at Roulston's last week. We announce the fact of his decided improvement and probable recovery with pleasure.

Thomas J. Hyslop while at work for Mr. J. T. Doremus, (on the Johnson place) on Saturday last, struck the index finger of his left hand, with an axe, almost severing it. Dr. Sherman Cooper assisted by Dr. Wm. Gale, amputated the injured member and at last accounts the sufferer was doing well.

A horse the property of Mr. C. B. Ripley, while tied to a post supporting the wooden awning in front of Welch Bros. paint store on Broad street Friday last, becoming entangled in the lines succeeded in pulling down the post and wrecking the structure. Temporary supports were supplied and repairs are now underway.

Our worthy Post Master is in receipt of a letter from a gentleman at Quincy, Ill., desiring if possible to obtain information as to the whereabouts of the widow of A. C. Denman, supposed to have resided some where in this vicinity. If found, she has a valuable interest in 640 acres of land in the vicinity of Quincy, valued at $12,000.

We are in receipt of a copy of the Constitution and By-Laws of the Newark Bay Boat Club, and notice that two of our former residents appear to be interested parties therein. We refer to Messrs. Ernest C. and Arthur C. Webb, the former being President of the club, and the latter one of the committee on dock and other club property.

The credit of the introduction or inauguration of the latest style of excursion to Boynton's is due to Mr. Robert Fairburn of this place, who, together with twenty-five friends, made a "moonlight trip" to that pleasant resort on Thursday of last week. Messrs. Dennis and Brown furnished noise on fog horn and cornet, and the music to which the many present tripped the "light fantastic toe," was furnished by Messrs. Wilcox and Applegate. This pleasant party reached home during the wee hours of Friday morning.

OUR COURTS.

Before Squire Jacques—Thursday Aug. 11th, Wm. Clark vs Aaron Clark. Charge, abuse and violent language in public. Defendant fined $1.00 and costs. Total $4.00.

Joseph Morgenthaler vs James E. Burtis. Suit on due bill given for work. Mr. Frederick P. Heinecke acted as interpreter to the court, the plaintiff being unable to speak English. Judgment for plaintiff $63.27. Execution issued.

Wm. A. Woodruff vs. Sam'l E. Young. Suit on note. Adjourned to Aug. 24th, at 9 a. m., on account of absence of important witnesses.

Although a loss anticipated for some time by his many friends, the death of Nathan Bursmith, on Wednesday morning last, proved a severe shock to our community. So many of his legion of friends here had met him on our streets within a day or two of his demise that they could hardly realize that good citizen, refined gentleman, true and genial friend and father had passed away. The sad truth once fully realized the warmest expressions of regret and sympathy for those bereaved were heard on every hand. To the last hopeful of his own recovery (a belief not really shared by his friends) up to the evening previous to his death, he was making preparations for a visit to the seaside in search of health and rest. A resident here for the past 17 years, it is only a just tribute to say that among his fellow residents of Westfield he left no enemies. He leaves a widow and a family of 10 children, and our heartfelt sympathies as well as those of the entire community are extended to them in their great affliction. Funeral services were held at the Presbyterian church on Friday last at 4 o'clock p. m., and were largely attended. The pastor, Rev. Wm. H. Gill, delivered both a beautiful, instructive and comforting funeral sermon. The remains were interred here.

The appearance of Mr. James Baker of Excelsior H. & L., of Scotch Plains, on our streets last Sunday morning, wearing a fire hat and driving in hot haste, gave an almost immediate alarm of fire. Foreman Gale of the Hook & Ladder Co., together with foreman Webb of the Bucket and Engine Co., assisted by members of both companies, soon had the Little Giant attached to Mr. Baker's wagon and proceeded in hot haste to Fanwood. Although the alarm did not reach here until about 12:30, the engine was at work at 1 o'clock. The scene of the fire was Smith's Lumber yard, opposite Fanwood depot. Excellent service was rendered by both companies, although the excess in members present of the Bucket and Engine Co. was very apparent. Although not as yet thoroughly organized and without buckets or engine, they gave the best possible evidence of good feeling towards the other company and assisted them in every way possible. The fire was a troublesome one and only after two hours steady work was the order to pick up given. After the fire the tired workers were handsomely entertained by the Scotch Plains firemen. Hook & Ladder Co. No. 1, held an informal meeting at their house upon their return and returned thanks to Bucket and Engine Co. No. 1, for assistance rendered. The proprietor of the property destroyed, also, through Mr. S. S. Mapes, returned thanks to both companies for their timely and valued assistance. This is the first fire that the Bucket & Eng. Co. has been called to and gives a good idea of how valuable their services will be as soon as properly equipped. The meeting for permanent organization will be held at Hotel Hall on Monday evening next at 8 o'clock p. m. All desiring to enroll themselves as members are cordially invited to be present.

One of the most successful excursions both in point of attendance, financial results, and opportunities offered to the excursionists for a day's pleasurable enjoyment was that originated by the M. E. Sunday School and participated in by the Presbyterian Sunday School of this place and the M. E. Sunday School of Cranford, that occurred on Wednesday of last week. Its destination the "Highlands of the Navesink", proved to be one of the most attractive resorts for an excursion of this nature that it has ever been our privilege to visit. Everything tended to make the occasion particularly pleasant. A beautiful day, charming ride, pleasures of still as well as surf bathing, pleasant companionship, magnificent views from the summit of the highlands, a visit to the twin lights on its summit, whose sight has been the subject of such heartfelt thanks to so many of all nationalities coming to our Country's shores. A railroad excursion over most any other road than our splendidly equipped Central is hardly ever a pleasant one, but on this road with a train under charge of that always genial and ever popular Conductor, John E. Smith, driven by engine No. 162, under the careful and experience handling of Engineer B. Munn, assisted by Fireman James Powell, with Baggage Master D. Beatty, to look after the car load of provisions, and such careful and accomodating trainmen as Brakeman H. Sweet and E. Decker, to attend to the wants of and protect passengers from any danger on occasions of this nature, apparently self sought. Nothing occured in the way of accidents to mar the pleasures of the day, the most serious loss being that of a hat, the property of Mr. Lincoln Clark. Passing through Elizabeth Port handkerchief thieves were abundant, who as the train passed through endeavored to secure them as waved from the window by the passengers, by the use of sticks and other devices. The attention of the Elizabeth police should be called to this matter as its practice extends from Elizabeth Ave. at the Port to Spring street station and numerous complaints are heard from excursionists over the road. The train consisting of 13 passenger and 1 baggage car left Westfield at 7:48 a. m., and after a short stop at Cranford to take on the excursionists from that place proceeded on its way and arrived safely at its destination about 10 o'clock. The larger portion of the visitors soon succeeded in reaching the summit of the highlands and were soon arranged in happy groups in the splendid grove adjoining the light house; those who had reasonable objections to Alpine climbing contented themselves by remaining on the shore and were soon distributed among the many pleasant resorts there. As one among the many who climbed the hill and afterwards returned shore-wise we desire to call attention to the superior accommodations extended to the many at the hostelrie of mine host Thompson. To those in search of row-boat facilities certainly no more careful and considerate guide could be found than Capt. James W. Hendrickson, whose boat Flora propelled by his muscular strokes carried many to bathing grounds, or on pleasure trips. To only a few of the many visitors (740) who took part in this pleasant affair, was accorded the particular pleasure of meeting with their fellow townsman Mr. Edw. Chamberlain, who in company with his family is sojourning at Little Silver, (about six miles distant). Learning of the intended visit of his many Westfield friends to the Highlands, he was on hand with the large cat-rigged boat; the Nellie B. Wattles, under the guidance of its popular owner Capt. G. E. Borden, at whose suggestion a pleasant sail in the direction of Seabright was participated in by a few of the many Westfieldians present. Capt. Borden's reputation as a navigator is so well known and his knowledge of wind, water, tide and fish so perfect that he may really be dubbed an aquatic wonder. We understand that since the trip a party has already been formed who propose at an early day, to avail themselves of his piscatorial knowledge. The different churches participating in this very successful excursion, were under the management of the following Committees: M. E., Westfield, Wm. Morehouse, Edgar R. Pearsall (Old Hickory) and W. B. Woodruff. Presbyterian, Samuel E. Young, Gilbert Leveridge and James T. Pierson. M. E., Cranford, Wm. H. Hughes and W. W. Mendell.

CHANCE.

A lady comes on the morning mist;
Lovely and terrible she, I wist;
Bands of iron on wilful tresses,
Gold and topaz about her wrist.
Both day and dark her lips have kissed;
With prince and peasant she makes her tryst;
She soothes and stings, and breaks her jesses,
And flees, exulting, to whom she list.

There was a man who had a clock,
His name was Matthew Mears;
He wound it regularly every day
For four-and-twenty years.
At last his precious time-piece proved
An eight-day clock to be,
And a madder man than Mr. Mears
I could not wish to see.

A LITTLE OF EVERYTHING.

CARD.

The undersigned begs leave to announce to the property owners of Plainfield and surrounding country that having been practically connected with the Painting Business in all its several branches for many years past, in New York and vicinity, also Bound Brook, New Brunswick and Summit, that he will be glad to furnish estimates for any or all branches of the trade, at the lowest possible figures, and insure first-class work. Hoping for a share of your patronage, I remain,

Yours,
WILLIAM G. HAY.

An article in an agricultural paper is called "How to Eat Strawberries." A man who doesn't know how to eat strawberries should be compelled to live on dried apples and salt mackerel.

"THE DOCTOR TOLD ME to take a blue pill, but I didn't for I had already been poisoned twice by mercury. The druggist told me to try Kidney-Wort, and I did. It was just the thing for my biliousness and constipation, and now I am as well as ever." Torpid kidneys and liver is the trouble, for which Kidney-Wort always proves to be the best remedy known.—Hartford Courant.

HAY FEVER.

MESSRS. WHITE & BURDICK, Druggists, Ithaca, N. Y.—I can recommend Ely's Cream Balm to relieve all persons suffering with Rose Cold and Hay Fever. I have been a great sufferer from the same complaints; have had great relief by using the Balm. I have recommended it to many of my friends for Catarrh, and in all cases where they have used the Balm freely have been cured. T. KENNEY, Dry Goods Merchant, Ithaca, N. Y. Sept. 8, 1880.

TRENTON, N. J., Oct. 22, 1880.

I have suffered for eight years with Hay Fever, during July, August and September. In the beginning of July, this year, I resorted to Ely's Cream Balm, and have been entirely free from the Fever since the first application. I can recommend it as a cure. EDWARD C. ONE GREAT DEED IS ENOUGH.

Watts invented the steam engine; Morse the electric telegraph; Whitney the cotton gin, and Dr. David Kennedy, of Rondout, N. Y., discovered and prepared the "Favorite Remedy," which is worth more than all of them, because it saves life and cures disease. It purifies the blood, drives bile from the system, cures those delicate diseases peculiar to women, and is, in short, a sheet-anchor in every household. Don't spend your money in paying doctors when for One Dollar a bottle you can have the "Favorite Remedy" always on your shelf.

SHILOH'S CONSUMPTION CURE.

This is beyond question the most successful Cough Medicine we have ever sold, a few doses invariably cure the worst cases of Cough, Croup and Bronchitis, while its wonderful success in the cure of Consumption is without a parallel in the history of medicine. Since its first discovery it has been sold on a guarantee, a test which no other medicine can stand. If you have a Cough we earnestly ask you to try it. Price 10 cts., 50 cts. and $1. If your Lungs are sore, Chest or Back, lame, use Shiloh's Porous Plaster. Price 25 cts. Sold by R. M. Steele. tag4m

ANSWER THIS QUESTION.

Why do so many people we see around us, seem to prefer to suffer and be made miserable by Indigestion, Constipation, Dizziness, Loss of Appetite, Coming up of the Food, Yellow Skin, when for 75 cts. we will sell them Shiloh's Vitalizer, guaranteed to cure them. Sold by R. M. Steele.

SHILOH'S CATARRH REMEDY, a marvelous cure for Catarrh, Diphtheria, Canker Mouth and Headache. With each bottle there is an ingenious nasal injector for the more successful treatment of these complaints without extra charge. Price 50 cts. Sold by R. M. Steele.

The A. S. T. Co. were the first to make a specialty of protecting the toes of children's shoes from wear, by which millions are saved annually to parents; and they now offer their A. S. T. Co. Black tip in place of the metal, as they wear as well, and are not objectionable on the finest shoe.

THE new comet is yet hurrying toward the earth and the sun, but on account of the strong moonlight it has escaped the eye of the casual observer. Those unhappy persons who suffer from nervousness and dyspepsia should use Carter's Little Nerve Pills, which are made expressly for sleepless, nervous, dyspeptic sufferers. Price 25 cents, all druggists.

HOW TO SECURE HEALTH.

It seems strange that anyone will suffer from the many derangements brought on by an impure condition of the blood, when SCOVILL'S SARSAPARILLA AND STILLINGIA, or BLOOD AND LIVER SYRUP will restore perfect health to the physical organization. It is indeed a strengthening syrup, pleasant to take, and has proven itself to be the BEST BLOOD PURIFIER ever discovered, effectually curing Scrofula, Syphilitic disorders, Weakness of the Kidneys, Erysipelas, Malaria; all Nervous disorders and Debility, Bilious complaints and all Diseases indicating an Impure Condition of the Blood, Liver, Kidneys, Stomach, skin, etc. It corrects Indigestion. A single bottle will prove to you its merits as a health renewer, for it ACTS LIKE A CHARM, especially when the complaint is of an exhaustive nature, having a tendency to lessen the natural vigor of the brain and nervous system.

BAKER'S PAIN PANACEA cures pain in Man and Beast. For use externally and internally.

DR. ROGER'S VEGETABLE WORM SYRUP instantly destroys worms and removes the Secretions which cause them.

QUITE a display of meteors was witnessed shooting out and across the southwest heavens on Sunday night.

Statistics often prove unwelcome facts and none more so than that twenty per cent. of the people of this State die from consumption and kindred diseases. The great question how to reduce this terrible mortality has engaged the minds of our most eminent scholars and physicians. From the testimonials of thousands who have seen [illegible] or [illegible], nothing in the way of medicine has ever done so much toward this end. In all afflictions of the throat and lungs its remedial effect is simply wonderful. Once introduced into every household it would banish the terror of this disease from the land. Sold by A. Kilgore, druggist.

NEW WAY OF SENDING MONEY BY MAIL.

Postmaster General James has, it is said, devised a plan for sending small sums of money through the mails at a cheap rate. The device consists of a card having three columns representing dollars, tens and cents, and the amount to be drawn is designated by punching out figures. Two denominations will be issued, one for all sums within $2.50, and the other for all sums within $5. The orders will be payable to bearer, and the post office will not be responsible for their safe delivery any more than for fractional currency, for which they are a substitute. The orders will be finely printed on bank-note paper. The Postmaster will sell the $2.50 card for two or three cents premium, and the $5 card for four or five cents premium, and will himself punch out the amount paid and the buyer will simply inclose the card in his letter, and the receiver can cash it at any office. The Postmaster will enter the amount of the order on a stub, which will be the only check the department will need, as the name of the sender and payee are, not entered. In order to prevent the use of the postal orders as currency they are to be redeemable only for three months from the date of issue.

RELIABLE WEATHER PROPHECIES.

It is easy enough to be a weather prophet. An intensely blue sky indicates a temporary absence of the clouds. Under other circumstances, again, an intensely blue sky indicates a tornado. When the sun rises behind a bank of clouds, and the clouds hang low all around the horizon and all over the sky, and the air feels damp, and there is a fine drizzling mist blowing, the indications are there will be rain somewhere in the United States or Canada. When it begins to thunder look out for lightning. To see the head of the family feeling in his right hand pocket, then in the left hand pocket, then in his vest pockets, then in his hip pockets, then in his coat pockets, and then at the ceiling, indicates no change. If he suddenly stops whistling at the ceiling and expands his face into a broad grimace of delight, it means "unexpected change." If the corn husks are very thick, the winter will be colder than the summer. If the corn husks are very thin, the summer will be warmer than the winter. If the corn husks are neither too thick nor too thin, the summer will be warm and the winter will be cold. If the weather prophet predicts a rainy season and it happens to rain away out in Calavoras county, and is dry as a bone all over the rest of America, this rain must be set down to the weather breeder and all the dry time counts for nothing.

A TREMENDOUS LIGHTNING STROKE.

On Thursday last a flue in the residence of John Osborne, of Raymond township, Illinois, was struck by lightning. The charge separated and passed in at a window, killing a little son and daughter. Another daughter of Mr. Osborne's was picked up bodily and carried through a window at which she was sitting, and thrown several feet in the air, landing quite a distance from the house, and, strange to say, she was not hurt in the least. Mr. Osborne and an employee were lying on the floor asleep. Both received severe shocks. A silver watch lying on the floor was melted, and pieces of it were found in various places in the house. A barn in the vicinity was struck at the same time, and with its contents, was destroyed by fire.

LADY CAMPERS.

The shores of Lake Hopatcong are now dotted with white tents of campers from all parts of the county, and among them is a party of unusual note, consisting of seven young ladies from Harrisburg, Pa. They are under the protection of a gentleman who camps with his family a short distance from them; but otherwise they dwell alone and seem perfectly competent to take care of themselves. Their establishment, near Sharp's rock, is a complete one and includes among other conveniences a bathing house arranged by canvass being stretched upon poles in the water. They boat, fish and make excursions by themselves, and two of them explored the Hurd mine a few days ago.—Iron Era.

IMPORTANT TO LIQUOR DEALERS.

We learn from the Deputy United States Collector in Trenton that, by a special ruling of the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, any person mixing the article known as "Rock and Rye," is liable to a special tax as rectifier, of $200 per year.

It is estimated that nearly 2,000,000,000 pounds of paper is produced annually; one half of which is used for printing, a sixth for writing, and the remainder is coarse paper for packing and other purposes. The United States alone produces yearly 200,000 tons of paper, averaging 17 pounds per head for its population. The Englishman comes next, with about 12 pounds per head; the educated German takes 8 pounds, the Frenchman 7 pounds; while the Italian, Spaniard, and Russian take respectively 3 pounds, 1½ pounds, and 1 pound annually, the consumption of paper being roughly in proportion to the education and intellectual and political activity of the people.

The engineers engaged on the Hudson river tunnel have reached another very important stage in the construction on this side of the river, as it is now necessary to abandon the original air locks and bulkhead, so far as to substitute others for them, 500 feet further out toward the bed of the river; the new air locks are already in position both in the north and south tunnels, and as soon as the bulkhead in the former is finished—say in two or three weeks—the change of base will be made. The daylight opening in New York will be not far from Bleecker street and Sixth avenue. There are about 200 men now employed by the Tunnel Company in Jersey City, and 40 or 50 in New York; the engineers speak of everything as very encouraging; there are no indications of difficulty in any direction.

An exchange says: "The country weeklies ought to be the best supported newspapers of the whole land, for they contain news and gossip that can not be found in any of the city dailies. The farmer can learn from his local paper—if he prefers to take it instead of some distant city publication—how much his neighbor's six-acre farm sold for, how the schools are prospering, what improvements are in progress through the section in which he lives. He can get none of this in the city paper and he cannot be a thoroughly useful citizen without such items of light information. It is not always the best town that supports newspapers, but it is strictly a fact that no place ever gets the credit of being a thrifty or enterprising place until it can send a first class newspaper, and that always depends more upon the people than the editor."

Census Bulletin, No. 222, shows the details of the registered bonded debt of the United States, giving a vast number of interesting facts concerning the distribution of the debt, the number of holders, etc. It appears that in the State of New Jersey there are 2,715 holders, which is 3.70 per cent. of the whole number of 2.25 per cent. of the population of the State. There are six other States having more registered bondholders than New Jersey. The State ranks ninth in the list of the amounts held in the several States, holding 1.26 per cent. of the total registered bonds. There are 240 private holders of bonds to each 100,000 of population. There are, to recapitulate, 2,715 holders in New Jersey, holding $8,104,150 bonds, an average of $2,984.95 for each person; 1,477 of the holders are males, and 1,238 females. The city of Newark naturally leads the list of the cities of the State. Elizabeth ranks next to Newark, Jersey City third, Trenton fourth, Camden fifth, Paterson sixth, Hoboken seventh.

Mrs. Garfield sat quite silent for some moments, apparently preoccupied by thought, and when she broke the silence her voice was tremulous with emotion and her eyes were lustrous with tears. "If it were only possible," she said, "for my husband and me to go around and see all those dear people who have been so grateful in their remembrance for us here of late days, I would be so happy; and I know he would, too. I want to thank them—to tell them all how kindly I feel toward them for what they have said to me. I never could understand anything about politics, and if I liked a person it made no difference whether they were Republicans or Democrats; and now I have grown to think that there is not much difference between the two great parties, for one says just as kind words in our present affliction as the other. It makes me feel like forming an opinion as to what I would do were women permitted to vote as well as men. I believe I would get two tickets, fold them together so as to look like one, and drop both in the ballot box."—N. Y. Star.

An indignant head clerk in the Baltimore Post-Office wants the newspapers to convey to the public his emphatic protest against the latest popular mania—confined as yet to sentimental writers of billets doux—namely, the sticking of postage stamps upon unusual and out-of-the-way parts of envelopes. There is, it seems, a "postage-stamp code" of flirtation, and each position of a stamp expresses some particular sentiment. Now the law allows the stamp to be put anywhere on the envelope the sender may please; But its position is a matter of importance to the cancelling clerks. "As long," says the Baltimore official, "as the stamps are in the orthodox place—the upper right hand corner—they can work away like bees, and get away quickly, because the motion from the ink-pad to the stamp is a continuous one; but just as soon as they have to hunt around over the letter to find where the stamp is wafered, why they can't get along near so fast. Please hint through your papers that every letter that comes here not stamped with a single stamp in the right-hand upper corner we use to make paper chickens out of."

Proceedings of the Board of Chosen Freeholders of the County of Union; N. J.

[OFFICIAL.]

ELIZABETH, N. J., Aug. 4th, 1881.

The Board of Chosen Freeholders of the County of Union met at the Court House, on Thursday, Aug. 4th, 1881, at 2 o'clock, P. M.

Regular meeting.

Present—Director Martine and Freeholders Briant, Clark, Eller, Hubbard, Iseman, Melick, Mapes, Newbery, Randolph, Runkle, Smith, Sullivan, Thompson—14.

Absent—Freeholders Doty and Forsyth.

The minutes of the last meeting were read, [illegible] approved as read.

COMMITTEE REPORTS.

From Committee on Bridge at Paige's Mills, Summit.

To the Board of Chosen Freeholders of the County of Union:

GENTLEMEN:—

Your Committee appointed "to meet a Committee of the Freeholders of Morris county and report as to the necessity and probable cost of a new bridge over the Passaic river at Paige's Mills," would report that, by appointment, they assembled at the bridge and found the same in a dilapidated condition; it is three spans, resting on stone piers, each span about 22 feet long. After consultation, concluded that by replacing some of the beams, and renewing most of the planking, it could be made to last some few years more. All of which is respectfully submitted.

WM. H. BRIANT,
SAMUEL C. SMITH,
OWEN SULLIVAN,
WILLIAM J. THOMPSON,
Committee.

Elizabeth, Aug. 4th, 1881.

On motion the report was received and placed on file.

From Committee on Bridge at Vreeland's Mills, Cranford.

To the Board of Chosen Freeholders of the County of Union:

GENTLEMEN:—

Your Committee on Bridge over Rahway river at Vreeland's Mill, would respectfully report that they have contracted with Messrs. Post & McCord, of New York, to build an iron bridge 26 feet span in the clear, [illegible]

After a more thorough examination of the walls we find the west wall in good condition, but would recommend that the east wall be taken down to near the surface of the water and relaid, [illegible] the foundations of both walls seem to be perfect; therefore, we would recommend an appropriation for this work, that the job may be creditable and perfect when completed. A resolution in accordance [illegible] is herewith presented. All of which is respectfully submitted.

JOHN ISEMAN,
W. E. CLARK,
THOMAS FORSYTH,
WILLIAM J. THOMPSON,
PETER ELLER,
Committee.

Elizabeth, Aug. 4, 1881.

On motion received and placed on file.

RESOLUTIONS.

By Freeholder Runkle:

Resolved, That the several newspapers that published the County Physician's report be remunerated for the same to an amount not exceeding fifteen dollars to each paper.

On motion adopted by a unanimous vote.

By Freeholder Iseman:

Resolved, That the Committee on Bridge over the Rahway river at Vreeland's Mills are hereby authorized to repair abutment walls to same at a cost not to exceed [illegible]

On motion adopted by a unanimous vote.

By Freeholder Clark:

Resolved, That the thanks of this Board be extended to Patrick Sheridan, Collector, for the donation to members of this Board of the session laws of New Jersey for 1881.

On motion adopted.

By Freeholder Clark:

Resolved, That hereafter when it is necessary for this Board to appropriate money for the building of bridges or culverts, that such appropriations be not made until after the committee in charge of said work has advertised for proposals for the work, and ascertained the cost thereof.

After considerable discussion Freeholder Clark moved the resolution be laid over until the next meeting of the Board.

Which was carried by the following vote:

Affirmative—Freeholders Clark, Eller, Melick, Mapes, Newbery, Runkle, Smith, Thompson—8.

Negative—Director Martine and Freeholders Briant, Hubbard, Iseman, Randolph, Sullivan—6.

Absent—Freeholders Doty, Forsyth.

By Freeholder Thompson:

Resolved, That a committee of five be appointed to meet and examine the bridge over Robinson branch, near Rahway Cemetery, on the line between Clark township and Rahway, and report the necessity for and probable cost of the next meeting of the Board.

On motion, adopted, and the following committee appointed:

Freeholders Thompson, Clark, Melick, Sullivan, Mapes.

PAYMENT OF BILLS.

The following bills, audited and approved, were read and ordered paid, all bills on which the roll was called being unanimous:

James G. Moore, bridge, Cranford, $27.22; [illegible]

Bill of L. D. Cohn for [illegible] amounting to $10.00, and J. G. Coleman for committee expenses, amounting to $4.50, were ordered paid when signed and sworn to.

Freeholder Clark moved to adjourn.

Which was carried.

The Board adjourned to meet Thursday, September 1st, 1881, at 2 P. M.

JOHN L. CROWELL,
Clerk.

TERRIBLE ACCIDENT

Necessitating a Surgical Operation—Loving Mother Attempts to take Pair of Shears from Her Child.

PARENTS, BE CAREFUL.

Domestic accidents are common to women, and some of them are very serious. Mrs. Warner, of South Rondout, Ulster Co., N. Y., some weeks ago attempted to take from her child a pair of shears with which it was playing. A slight struggle ensued, in which the point of the shears entered Mrs. Warner's left eye, entirely destroying the sight. Her family physician did what he could, but intensely painful inflammation arose, which, by sympathy, threatened the loss of the other eye. Total blindness to a woman having the care of a household is an irretrievable calamity. In this trail Mrs. W. applied to the well-known and skillful Surgeon, Dr. David Kennedy, of Rondout, N. Y., who removed the injured eye by a very successful operation, setting aside all danger of further harm to the sight of the other eye. But, owing to pain and mental distress, her system needed a tonic and restorative medicine. To do this work the Doctor prescribed "Kennedy's Favorite Remedy," which sustained its reputation and laid a sure foundation of health.

Dr. Kennedy's "Favorite Remedy" removes all impurities from the blood, regulates the Liver and Kidneys, cures constipation, and all diseases and weaknesses peculiar to Females. It is for sale by all our druggists at ONE DOLLAR a bottle.

Kidney Wort.

Does Wonderful Cures!

WHY?

Because it acts on the LIVER, BOWELS and KIDNEYS at the same time.

Because it cleanses the system of the poisonous humors that develope in Kidney Disease, Biliousness, Jaundice, Constipation, Piles, or in Rheumatism, Neuralgia and Nervous Disorders.

SEE WHAT PEOPLE SAY:

Eugene B. Stork, of Junction City, Kansas, says, Kidney-Wort cured him after regular Physicians had been trying for four years.

Mrs. John Arnall, of Washington, Ohio, says, her boy was given up to die by four prominent physicians and that he was afterwards cured by Kidney-Wort.

M. M. B. Goodwin, an editor in Chardon, Ohio, says, he was not expected to live, being bloated beyond belief, but Kidney-Wort cured him.

Anna L. Jarrett, of South Salem, N. Y., says, that seven years suffering from kidney troubles and other complications was ended by the use of Kidney-Wort.

John B. Lawrence, of Jackson, Tenn., suffered for years from liver and kidney troubles and after taking "barrels of other medicines," Kidney-Wort made him well.

Michael Coto of Montgomery Center, Vt., suffered eight years with kidney difficulty and was unable to work. Kidney-Wort made him "well as ever."

KIDNEY-WORT

PERMANENTLY CURES
KIDNEY DISEASES,
LIVER COMPLAINTS,
CONSTIPATION AND PILES.

It is put up in Dry Vegetable Form in tin cans, one package of which makes six quarts of medicine. Also in Liquid Form, very Concentrated, for those that cannot readily prepare it.

It acts with equal efficiency in either form.

IDOL!

[Formerly Peck's IDOL,]

By the great Mambrino Chief founder of the Mambrino family; 1st dam by American Eclipse, son of Duroc (founder of the Star family) by imported Diomed. Dam of American Eclipse, Miller's Damsel, by imported Messenger; 2d dam, Kitty Muse by Shakespeare; 3d dam, Eliza Jenkins, by Sir William of Transport; 4th dam by Orphan, son of Ball's Florizel; 5th dam by imported Buzzard; 6th dam by Silvertail; 7th dam by imported Dove.

IDOL is a rich dark bay, weighs 1,200 lbs., with high hind foot white, full sixteen hands high, a horse of great substance, fine temper, elegant trotting action, record 2:41¾ as a four-year old, distancing his field, and at five years old showed 2:35, third heat, to wagon. As a six year old he made his first season in the stud, but the war prevented the development of his progeny. Few of his colts have been trained, but those few are mostly fast. Idol Girl, 16 hands high, won Beacon, Mystic, and Prospect Park stakes for four year olds during 1871, obtained a record of 2:36¾. This mare at that age could beat 2:30, and at Prospect Park trotted during her race a half mile in 1:16¼, and a quarter in 35¾ seconds—a 2:23 gait. As a five year old she met with an accident which ended her turf career. Barbara Patchen, in 1878, as a big 16¼ hand green 8 year old mare, won all her races in a jog, and the seventh heat, on a half-mile track, gained record 2:34½. Don, at Topeka, Kansas, won his race in 2:30. Waco won colt stakes at Hartford. Nannette trotted, 3 years old, in 2:46. Ideal, same age, trotted in 2:46, and John K., in 1880, gained a record of 2:38 on a half mile track at Olean, N. Y., and won first money in all his races. There are others that will drop into the 2:30 list this year without doubt.

IDOL will be limited to 35 mares, besides those engaged, at $30.00 the season, money payable (or secured) at service.

Good care and pasture furnished at $5 per month. All accidents and escapes at owners' risk. IDOL and some of his colts can be seen at the grazing farm of D. F. CARLE, Stirling, Morris Co., New Jersey.

Breeders desiring an outcross should call and see IDOL, and after seeing him, judge for themselves.

TUBULAR HOT-BLAST NON-EXPLOSIVE

Oil or Gas Stoves!

THE REASONS WHY THE TUBULAR HOT-BLAST OIL OR GAS STOVE IS SUPERIOR TO ALL OTHERS.

Its appearance is more like a stove than anything that has yet been offered.

It requires no wire gauze or water tank to make it safe.

A continual current of air passes to the burners over the Oil Pot, preventing the oil from getting warmer than the atmosphere in which it is burning. The bake oven is not in the way of the boiler.

Baking, roasting, and boiling can all be done at once, and in less time than with any other oil stove.

The No. 3 or Three-Burner Stove will make 15 inches of pure white flame at a cost of 1½ cts. per hour. The reservoir holds four quarts of oil, sufficient to burn for twelve hours.

The No. 4 or 4-Burner Stove will make 20 inches of white flame at a cost of 2 cents per hour.

The reservoir holds 5 quarts of oil sufficient to burn for twelve hours.

The No. 3 Stove will consume between three and four cents worth of gas per hour.

The No. 4 will consume between four and five cents worth of gas per hour.

LEGAL NOTICES.

IN Chancery of New Jersey.

To Washington E. Langley and Adelia Isabella Langley, his wife.

By virtue of an order of the Court of Chancery of New Jersey made on the day of the date hereof, in a cause wherein Abraham Runyon is complainant, and you and others are defendants, you are required to appear and plead, answer or demur to the bill of said complainant on or before the thirtieth day of August next, or the said bill will be taken as confessed against you.

The said bill is filed to foreclose a mortgage given by Washington E. Langley and Adelia Isabella Langley his wife, to said complainant on lands in the city of Plainfield, in Union County, New Jersey, dated April 10, 1868, And also to foreclose a certain mortgage given by Adelia Isabella Langley, and Washington E. Langley her husband, to said complainant, on the same lands, in the city, county and State aforesaid, dated September 9, 1874.

And you Washington E. Langley are made defendant because you own said lands, or some part thereof, or may claim an interest therein. And you Adelia Isabella Langley are made defendant because you are the wife of said Washington E. Langley, and may thereby claim an inchoate right of dower, or other interest in said mortgaged premises, and also because you may claim to own said premises by virtue of a quit claim deed made to you by one Bushrod F. Rice, dated March 12, 1868.

Dated June 29, 1881.

POETRY.

WHAT IS THE GAIN?

What is the gain?
If one should run a noble race,
And at the last, with weary pace,
Win to the goal, and find his years
A harvest field of waste and tears,
Of turmoil and of buried trust,
Rich with dead hopes and bitter dust,
And strife and sneer and ceaseless pain,
What is the gain?

What is the gain?
When, having reached a summit height,
Through barren sweeps of gloomful night,
Hoping to see beyond the crest
Fair lands of beauty and of rest,
There lies before, stretched far away
Unto the confines of the day
A desolate and shadeless plain,
What is the gain?

What is the gain?
To sail for months of cold and toil
Across wide seas, where winds recoil,
Only to gather strength and roar
A louder challenge than before,
And find, when through fogs thick and dun
The rocky coast at last is won,
No heaven from the storm-vexed main,
What is the gain?

What is the gain?
The race is won, we see the light,
We conquer where the storm-winds fight;
We show the way to those who wait
With faint hearts by the walls of fate;
Our banners flutter in the van
Of battles fought for thought and man,
And ignorance and darkness wane,
This is the gain.

MISCELLANEOUS READING.

THE LACE PARASOL.

"There! I think that's pretty enough for anybody?"

And Lettie McCaslin stepped back from the bed and took a look at her work, having just looped the last bow on the bewitching dress of black silk and grenadine, with its rose colored vest and loops and bows, which she intended to wear at the Soldier's Reunion, a few days later.

Lettie was "pretty enough for anybody" herself, if she had only known it, as she stood with her fluffy hair tossed back, her bright dark eyes sparkling, and the color burning as crimson as her ribbons in her clear dark cheek and sweet lips. But Lettie was not a particle vain, and she was only thinking of the new dress, which was a triumph of her own skill.

"I do believe it is just as well made as the dressmaker could have done, and full seven dollars saved by it, too!" she said, delighted with her work. "Now if pa can only give me the money I'd have had to pay, and I can get a lace parasol, lined with rose-colored, to match my dress and hat, why—I'll be pretty tasty, that's all! They've got some lovely lace parasols at Glenn's—I'll go down there at noon, if papa comes home to dinner—and see what I can do."

She heard her father's step in the hall, and went down, three steps at a time, to see that dinner was just as he liked it. For Lettie was her father's housekeeper, and had learned, even at nineteen years old, that the road to masculine favor very often lies through a good dinner!

Mr. McCaslin was not a rich man, and it was often owing more to Lettie's good taste and deft fingers than to the things she bought, that she always looked so nicely and stylishly dressed. But she was always sure of means when he was able to afford it, and so when she told him she would need a little more money, he took out his pocket-book, and handed her a ten-dollar bill.

"Will that do?" said he.

"Oh yes, papa! Ever so many thanks! That will get a parasol, and leave enough for gloves and fan, too."

"Well, make much of it, pet, for besides the housekeeping money, it is really all I can spare you this month."

"I'll make it do, papa, and I'm much obliged, too."

"Then put an extra lump of sugar in my coffee, will you? It isn't quite sweet enough."

"Oh, didn't I fix it right? Here is the sugar-bowl, just help yourself, papa."

The coffee was soon right, and as Lettie had a trusty girl in the kitchen, she did not wait after dinner, but ran upstairs immediately to put on her neat walking suit. She was soon tripping down the street, as bright and sweet a little maid as ever went after a lace parasol with a ten-dollar bill in her pocket.

On the way she passed a tall fine-looking gentleman, who raised his hat, and seemed, from the expression of his face, much pleased to meet such a fair vision. And the pink in Lettie's cheeks deepened, and the girlish heart in her bosom fluttered faster as she walked on, for Dr. Richings was—well, a very good friend!—and might be more some day!

If it wasn't for the rich, haughty Bell Tracy, with her sweeping robes and costly jewels, Lettie almost knew he would like her. She was aware that his taste was almost faultless, and she hoped much from the pretty costume she meant to wear on Reunion Day.

She met Bell Tracy just coming out of Glenn's, and answered with a great deal of self-possession the somewhat haughty stare and bow with which the young lady greeted her.

She spoke, herself, as she passed up the counter, to a young lady simply dressed in mourning, who was standing at the counter looking at some goods.

"Poor Ida Martin!" thought Lettie. "The Reunion won't be a very happy day for her, for she will remember the father and brother who were killed in the army. I wonder if she and her mother manage to keep soul and body together with their needles? Lace parasols, please!" This last to the smiling clerk who came to wait upon her, for Lettie was very well known in the village, and might have been quite popular among the beaux.

The pretty parasols of silk, satin and lace, with handles of every form and material were scattered upon the counter beside her, and Lettie became so interested in choosing one that she did not see that Doctor Richings had entered the store, and stood at the glove counter just below her.

"Oh, this one is lovely! And a perfect match for my suit!" she said, taking up one of the most delicate lace, its rose-satin lining the very shade of he ribbons, and the handle of coral curiously carved. "What is the price?"

"Six dollars, Miss McCaslin. The very cheapest article in the house. I don't suppose you could buy any thing like it, for that price, in the whole town. Will you have this one?"

The clerk wore his most inviting smile, and spoke in the blandest of tones, and Lettie was about to say, "Yes, I will have this one," when she chanced to hear a few words from Ida Martin, who was examining a piece of black goods, and speaking to the proprietor of the store, close beside her.

"I should like very much to take twelve yards of this, said Ida, "but I could not pay for it until after the celebration. Could you wait on me a week?"

The proprietor's tone and countenance both changed.

"Against our rules," he said, shaking his head. "Cash sales and small profits is our motto. Couldn't do it, miss."

"Then I cannot take the dress," said Miss Martin, in a disappointed tone.

She turned away, and Lettie saw that her eyes were full of tears.

Indignant at Mr. Glenn's want of courtesy and kindness—for he was wealthy and could well afford it—Lettie flashed a glance at him, and laid down the parasol she held.

Being acquainted with him, she spoke at once:

"Did Miss Martin wish a dress for herself, Mr. Glenn?"

"Yes, Miss Lettie."

"Then why didn't you let her have it?" cried Lettie, Indignantly.

Mr. Glenn smiled.

"No pay in such sales, Lettie. Those parasols please you, do they?"

"Yes, but I shall not purchase here," said Miss Lettie, coolly. And as Mr. Glenn flushed with vexation, she walked out, followed by Dr. Richings, who was a little curious to see what she would do.

What she did do was to enter Crowley's store and when he dropped in, a moment after, she was purchasing a piece of black cashmere, and did not appear to notice the tempting stand of parasols displayed close beside here.

Dr. Richings stepped up and spoke to her, this time, and presently managed to call her attention to the parasols.

"These are beauties, aren't they?" said he.

"Yes," answered Lettie, and the doctor detected a little sign in her tone, and noticed that she did not look at them.

"I saw you looking at some pretty ones at Glenn's a little while ago," he said: "are you going to purchase a new one?"

"I was," said Lettie, with a smile, "but I've changed my notion, now. Some fringe, for trimming, please," she added to the clerk who was putting up an order.

While the fringe was being selected, Doctor Richings said: "Would you like to take a short ride this afternoon, Miss Lettie?"

"Very much," said Lettie.

"Then, if you will soon be through here, my carriage is in front of Glenn's and I will drive it down in a moment."

"I shall be ready in three minutes," said Lettie. The doctor left her, and when he returned for her, a moment later, she was writing a name upon the parcel wrapped up for her, and the doctor's quick eye caught the name, "Ida Martin."

"The kind little soul!" he thought; but he said nothing.

"Send these goods to the address I have written," was Lettie's direction, after she had paid her bill. "Now, doctor, I am ready."

They had a nice little ride, and were at home in time for supper. Doctor Richings declined her invitation to come in, but asked if he might send her, that evening, a slight token of his respect. Lettie consented, wondering what it would be, but not having the least idea.

But in the evening there came to her a long, narrow box, and opening it she found an exquisite lace parasol, with ruby lining and coral handle, and within the box a note in Doctors Richings' hand which said:

"I was near you this morning, and I know whose kind, tender heart sent Miss Martin her dress, giving up her own wishes to do the kind act. I don't feel afraid to trust my future happiness in the keeping of the dear girl who could do that. If you will accept, dear Lettie, not only the pretty toy, but the heart and hand of the giver, send me the word 'Come' by the bearer of this, and in half an hour I will be with you and await your own

R. RICHINGS."

Do we need to say, Lettie sent the magic word? And do we need to add that when the Reunion Day came, it was a happy girl who leaned upon Doctor Richings' arm, with the pretty lace parasol in her hand, and looked at Ida Martin, so neat and trim in the new dress which had won a true heart.

SCENERY AND BUMPS.

In Nevada, recently, two rival coaches started out on parallel roads, each four-teams on the gallop. A New Yorker being the only passenger in one coach, took a seat with the driver. He endured the first five miles very well, as the road was pretty smooth, he finally carelessly observed:

"This pace is rather hard on the horses, isn't it?"

"Oh, no! They are used to it. I haven't begun to swing 'em yet," was the reply.

"If we were going a little slower I could enjoy the scenery much better."

"Yes, I s'pose so; but this line isn't run on scenery principle."

That ended the conversation until the horses turned a corner, and the stage rode around it on two wheels. Then the New Yorker remarked:

"I suppose you sometimes meet with accidents?"

"Almost every day," was the brief reply.

"Isn't there danger of something giving way?"

"Of course! but we've got to take our chances. G'lang, there."

At the end of another mile the passenger controlled his voice sufficiently to inquire:

"What if we shouldn't reach Red Hill at exactly two o'clock? I am in no hurry."

"No, I s'pose not; but I've got to do it, or lose ten dollars."

"How?"

"I've got an even 'ten' bet that I can beat the other stage into Red Hill by fifteen minutes, and I'm going to win that money if it kills a horse!"

"Say! hold on!" exclaimed the other, as he felt for his wallet, "I like to ride fast, and I'm not a bit nervous, but I do hate to see horses get worried. Here's twenty dollars for you! Now let's sort of jog along the rest of the way, and get a chance to smoke and talk about the Indians."

"Whoa, there! Come down with you—gentle, now!—take it easy, and don't fret!" called the driver, as he pulled in and reached for the greenbacks with one hand and for his pipe with the other. Thereafter the New Yorker had more scenery and less bumps.

CERTAINLY, SIR!

They have their Stock Exchange and Mining Board in the magic cities of the far West, and their own peculiar way of doing business. Buyers and stockholders have their own peculiar ways, and these ways sometimes clash. A New Yorker was seated in an office in Gunnison city one day not long ago, when a grizzly-looking old chap entered, and asked if that was the place where they sold shares of the White Horse Silver mine. Being assured he was in the office of the company, he observed.

"I've heard the White Horse spoken of as being a likely mine."

"It certainly is. We took ten thousand dollars' worth of ore out in one day."

"Phew! She must be just old richness!" How many men have you got to work?"

"Oh! about three hundred."

"Have ye, though? Are the sheers going off pretty lively?"

"Shares are selling like hot cakes, and we have only a few left. Everybody says the White Horse is a big investment."

"I will sell you at ninety-five, though I know they will be worth face value to-morrow."

"No! You really don't mean 95?"

"I do."

"Well, that's better; there's a hundred shares which you sold to my 'pard' yesterday for twenty dollars. I went over to the mine, found nothing but a hole and a dead mule, and I told him I'd come up and get his money back, or do some shooting! I'm tarnal glad to find them sheers has risen from twenty to ninety-five. That will give my 'pard' his money back, and buy me a winter outfit besides. Here's the sheers, and now let me see the color of your money."

"But, sir, we——"

"Pass out the cash!" said the old man, as he rested the end of his shooter on the edge of the counter.

The company had left his revolver in his overcoat, outside and he didn't believe the New Yorker would wait for him. After a look around he began counting out the money with a bland smile, and as he made the exchange, he said:

"Certainly, sir; greatest of pleasure, sir! Sorry you didn't hold them one day and get the full face value!"

MA'S ONLY METHOD OF SATISFACTION.

The other day a boy about ten years of age entered an up-town station and informed the sergeant in charge that his little brother was lost.

"How old is he?" asked the officer as he prepared to write out a description.

"How old? Why, I never asked him how old he was," was the astonished reply.

"Well, what do you think?"

"I guess he's more'n half as big as I am, and ma, says she'll tan his jacket good and stout for getting lost."

"What's the color of his hair?"

"Hair? Less see? I don't believe I ever took notice, but I've heard the boys call him 'red hed, go to bed.'"

"I'll put it down red, then. How are his eyes?"

"One of 'em squints, but t'other one is all right."

"Are they blue?"

"I don't know. He generally goes around bare-headed, and says he'll get sunstruck yet."

"How was he dressed?"

"I know he had on some clothes," was the hesitating reply.

"Does he wear coats?"

"Sometimes."

"And pants?"

"Yes."

"Was he barefooted?"

"I guess so."

"And what is his name?"

"He's got lots of names, but I guess ma calls him Jimmy most of anything."

"Well, I guess we'll know him," said the sergeant, as he laid down his pen.

"Oh, you'll have to know him if he gets in here. He calls names and howls and makes up faces and—you'll know him fast enough. I'd let him get lost all he wanted to if I owned him, but ma seems to kinder want him back; and so I came to tell you. If you have to lick him while he's here you must bend him over a chair and whack him with a horse radish grater. Ma has tried ever other way, and this is the only one that gives satisfaction."

ABOLISH THE USE OF LIQUORS.

They deprive men of their reason for the time being.

They destroy men of the greatest intellectual strength.

They foster and encourage every species of immortality.

They bar the progress of civilization and religion.

They destroy the peace and happiness of thousands of families.

They reduce many virtuous wives and children to poverty.

They cause many thousands of murders.

They prevent all reformation of character.

They render abortive the strongest resolutions.

The millions of property expended are lost.

They cause the majority of the cases of insanity.

They destroy not only the body but the soul.

They burden sober people with millions for the support of paupers.

They cause immense expenditures to prevent crime.

They cost sober people immense sums in charity.

They burden the country with immense taxes.

Because moderate drinkers want the temptation removed.

Drunkards want the opportunities removed.

Sober people want the nuisance removed.

Taxpayers want the burden removed.

The prohibition would save thousands now falling.

The sale exposes our families to destruction.

The sale exposes our persons to insult.

The sale upholds the vicious and idle at the expense of the industrious and virtuous.

The sale subjects the sober to great oppression.

It takes the sober man's earnings to support the drunkard.

It subjects numberless wives to untold suffering.

It is contrary to the Bible.

It is contrary to common sense.

We have a right to rid ourselves of the burden.

AN EDITOR'S TROUBLES.

The editor of the Rockville (Ind.) Tribune gives vent to his feelings concerning delinquent subscribers in an editorial which will be indorsed by most country publishers. The Tribune says:

The present proprietor took charge of the paper March 1, 1879, and a few days after did $7 worth of work for a well-to-do farmer and stockbreeder. That charge is still on our books unreceipted. We have sent two letters and one postal card to the delinquent, and got him so far interested that two years ago he said to one of our employees: "Tell Beadle not to worry about that bill; I'll step in some day and hand it to him."

In another section of the county lives a preacher who subscribed in these words: "Send me your paper awhile; I will stop in and pay for it." A year and a half afterward we sent him the bill, which he indignantly repudiated on the ground that he never subscribed!

Within three miles of us are three well-to-do farmers who owe us for three years' subscription each. We send them a bill about once in six months, and it don't worry them a particle. By-and-by they will move to Kansas or somewhere West, and will never think of this bill; but each of them will expect a regretful complimentary recommending him to the people where he settles.

On the old subscription books, continued from the time Mr. Beadle began the Tribune, are charges amounting to $1,100, of which at least $800 are on men who could be made to pay by law. But they know that newspaper debts are never collected that way, and not one dollar in ten of it will ever be paid.

Nobody ever pays the slightest attention to a newspaper dun. A circular letter, specifying each man dues, will bring a response from about one man in twenty. It seems to be taken by common consent that a publisher is not to be paid till all other bills are out of the way and a cash surplus is on hand—not even then unless it is perfectly convenient.

All this raises a painful question in our minds, whether that which is called popular honesty is not really a sort of policy. Many of these delinquents are ardent advocates of prohibition and other "moral reforms"—any of them can pray in church till the rafters tremble. But they really must excuse us if we are tormented with doubts. We would as soon they took a drink occasionally—yes, that they even got drunk once, if they got drunk enough to come up and pay these bills. We even would that they were altogether such as we are, except these bonds.

If you ask the average man plumply, "Is it wrong to defraud a doctor, a lawyer or an editor?" he would doubtless say yes; but it would be a feeble, perfunctory yes—one that merely trembled on the epiglottis, and did not lift up the liver and ramify the soul. The popular mind is debauched on this subject and needs educating. We could publish cases in our own experience that would draw tears to the eye of a Nihilist. It seems fair to add that these remarks are more in sorrow than in anger; and that we stand ready to recant, if our delinquents will prove to us practically that we are wrong.

THE MODERN ANECDOTE RELATOR.

"You remember that fellow who wrote, what's it's name? You know, he made some money on one of the Western railroads. I forgot what they call it."

"Well, what of him?"

"Why, not long ago he was in, what's that town in Wisconsin? You know."

"Don't mind the name of the town; what did he do?"

"What the deuce is the name of that town? A big politician came from there. You know him. Well, this fellow"—

"Which fellow?"

"I can't think of his name. It's a good joke, and I nearly died when I heard it. He'd come up from that big plantation in Louisiana kept by—by— Who's that big banker in St. Louis? The man who built a line of steamboats from Keokuk to—to—I'll think of the name in a minute—the mouth of—you know that river in Arkansas. Anyway he'd come up on the—that road that runs at the west bank of the Mississippi from that place opposite Cairo—consolidated with the Cairo and Fulton Road. What's the name of that line?"

"Don't know; never was in that country. What did your man do that was so funny?"

"Why, he'd come up from that plantation on this line to the town in Wisconsin and struck for the—the—that hotel on the corner of Jefferson and that other street—named after a Frenchman. Strange I can't remember it. Don't you know the house?"

"Never heard of it. Don't know anything about it. Go on with your story."

"Well, he got there, and he perpetrated the best pun you ever heard on the landlord's name. The landlord got off a pretty good thing on this man's name, but I can't remember what it was. Anyhow, this man asked the landlord, 'Why are you like an insurance company'—he named the company, but I've forgotten what it was, 'Why are you like this insurance company? Give it up?'"

"Yes, I give it up."

"Well, sir, the answer is the funniest thing you ever heard. It broke me all up when I heard it."

"What is it?"

"Why, if I could remember the name of the landlord I'd know in a moment. Who's that fellow that invented the—pshaw! that machine for making—what're they called? You understand, something about stairrods."

"Never heard of him."

"It's the same name, except the last syllable. Funny I didn't catch it."

"Is that all of your story?"

"Why, yes. You see if I could remember my man's name and the insurance company and the landlord's name, I'd bust you right open with the best thing you ever listened to."—Brooklyn Eagle.

Why does asparagus resemble long sermons? Because the ends are most sought after.

Never run up small debts. Creditors are like children—the smaller they are the more they cry.

"My Darling's Shoes," is the name of a new ballad, but the old man's boot is generally considered more touching.

A BATTLE CRY.

There are large and important States in the American Union whose Legislatures are ruled by the monied power of giant corporations.

That is not an idle assertion; but a well founded fact, and it bespeaks a growing and dangerous evil.

Year after year the Legislatures of those States assemble for the supposed purpose of enacting laws to benefit the people.

It is a delusion.

They may do so to a certain limited extent, provided the selfish greed of unprincipled monopolists is first and fully satisfied.

And not only does the corrupting influence of associated monopoly govern at State Capitols, but even within and around the Congress of the Republic it aims to establish despotic supremacy.

There is nothing that forebodes greater peril to the rights and liberties of the American people than the present and rapidly augmenting power of monopoly. It is thoroughly mercenary, caring only for self interest, and ever ready to sacrifice the public good in order to gain ascendency.

A spirit of determined resistance to the fell monster is arising among the people, their mutterings can be distinctly heard, and that opposition cannot take formidable political shape too soon.

The coming battle cry will be DEATH TO ALL MONOPOLIES!

May it be speedily and permanently victorious?

It must be, if the people of this country, valuing the boon of freedom, properly rebel against becoming money bought serfs.

It is impossible to enslave the American people either by invasion from without or armed treason from within, but they can, and unless timely awake to danger, will be by the artfully guised and venal hearted form of Monopoly.

Crush it to the earth or by it be crushed.

INDEBTEDNESS.

In 1848 the aggregated debt of Europe was $8,506,000,000. In 1878, $20,295,750,000. This is a remarkable increase, but the last census shows a far greater increase in the bonded indebtedness of cities and towns of the United States, containing a population of 7,500 and upward. That indebtedness was in 1860, $51,222,558, in 1880 it was $682,086,400.

This advance has been due to our official extravagance, and was greatest during the reckless speculation of 1872. A limit at last seems to have been reached; the amount of bonded indebtedness issued in 1880 was less than issued in any prior year since 1863, and $39,000,000 less than the amount issued in 1879.

As regards the net debt per capita the District of Columbia leads the list with her one city, and has $141.84; Maine, $98.78; South Carolina, $83.04; Louisiana, $81.22; Georgia, $78.39; New Jersey, $73.34 and New York $68.67 per capita of their respective populations.

The average debt per capita of Southern cities is $55.40; of the New England and Middle cities $54.06, and of Western cities, $18.45.

Communities, like men, are reckless; they run up debts until the limit is reached and then economize. It is safe to say that in the East and South the limit has been reached, and that in the next twenty years we shall see a more economical government of cities, and purer municipal politics.

WE HOPE SO, TOO.

The venerable mother of ex-Governor Andrews is reported to have said at a recent prayer-meeting in Connecticut: "I hear the young men praying for the recovery of the President. I hope he will recover. I believe he will. But I hope those young men will learn the lesson, and vote so that such a sad crime will never be attempted again. I hear that the President has been worried almost to death by office-seekers. God ordained that man should earn his bread by the sweat of his brow. I believe that many of these office-seekers want office because they are unwilling to submit to God's law."—Exchange.

With this noble woman we cordially unite in hoping that the young men, likewise the old men, will learn the true lesson of the attempted assassination and will vote so that a recurrence of the infamous crime will be impossible. It would never have occurred but for the evil influence of the spoils system. The way to make a repetition impossible is to abolish the spoils system, as it has grown up under the fostering care of the Republican party, and the shortest and most effectual way to abolish this disgraceful and dangerous system is to sweep the Republican party from the control of the Government. So long as the Republican party remains in power so long will the spoils system flourish. Even now, at a time when the public conscience is quickened and sensitive on the subject, the ugly head of the system is seen rearing itself with as much brazen effrontery as ever. For instance, in the San Francisco Mint investigation a few days ago, Superintendent Dodge testified that, in making removals of some of Page's appointees, he had been actuated by the fact that they were either unnecessary, inattentive or incompetent. He continued: "The simple truth is that I could not get along with Mr. Page without surrendering to him the entire control of the mint. As I refused to do that he treated me as his enemy, and in my own protection I was forced to retaliate. It was under that idea that I did my best to defeat his nomination for Congress." He further stated that Mr. Page's friends in the mint were disposed to set at naught the authority of the Superintendent, and consequently were dismissed. As for securing even a partial dethronement of the spoils system from the Republican party, such an idea is absurd. The spoils system is its life and sustenance. But for it it would die. It gives us a government of the spoils for the spoils and by the spoils. The only way to get rid of such a Government is to abolish it and substitute a genuine republican Government, such as the Democratic party is pledged to give the country.—Newark Journal.

The papers last week contained the record of a case of a villian who, by advertising and by personal address, has succeeded within a few weeks in marrying two respectable young ladies, one of them the daughter of a Presbyterian clergyman, and who deserted them after destroying their happiness for life and swindling them and their friends by forgery and false statements. And yet other young ladies will go and marry strangers of prepossessing appearance; their parents and friends will encourage them in doing so; and all parties will soon after open their eyes to the consequences, when it is too late to avert them.

THE KENTUCKY VOTE.

FRANKFORT, Ky., Aug. 22.

The official returns from 99 out of 117 counties show the total vote for the Democratic State Treasurer to be 94,332, with 689 scattering. The final returns will, it is estimated, give Tate a majority of 110,000.

THE NEW HAVEN HORROR.

Jennie E. Cramer's death at New Haven, Conn., followed one of the vilest outrages possible for men to commit. One James Malley, Jr., wanted to ruin a pretty young girl who resisted his advances. His profligate cousin, Walter Malley, a fast young man with money to spend, had a prostitute of his acquaintance come up from New York and make the acquaintance of Jennie Cramer. This woman from New York played the lady very effectually, and in her company Miss Cramer was induced to go driving and on various pleasure excursions with the Malley boys. Then the conspiracy culminated. The Malley mansion was unoccupied, Walter's father having gone away summering. One evening Jennie Cramer was induced to accompany the New York woman and the Malley boys to look over the house, from which Walter Malley had discharged the housekeeper. In order to keep Miss Cramer in the house until it was too late for her to return home, the New York woman pretended to be taken suddenly ill and to be unable to leave. Out of kindness to her new-made friend Jennie Cramer stayed, was made drunk and the shame accomplished. Two days later her lifeless body was found floating along the beach.

It may be that the Malley boys and the New York woman did not take her life. But they committed a crime more despicable than murder and more cowardly when they enticed her to her ruin in pursuance of a conspiracy. They placed themselves beyond the pale of all sympathy and made themselves as bad as murderers before the girl died. They are all in custody, and if circumstantial evidence shall place a noose about their necks in the absence of direct proof of murder, that result attained in that way may be regretted as a matter of legal administration, but there will be none to say that they did not richly deserve their fate. A more deliberate and cold-blooded crime against the purity of a young girl is not recorded.

[The above, from the Easton Free Press, fully expresses our sentiments. Hunterdon Co. Democrat.] And ours, too.

It was less than a year ago that the Republican papers represented General Hancock as a traitor, a disorganizer, a swindler, a brute, a dandy, and a Democrat. And now Mr. Secretary Lincoln has invited him to command the military display at the Yorktown celebration. And the Republicans will expect the public to believe their next batch of lies precisely as though they had always told the truth.

The New Haven Post thinks it must be admitted that the conduct of General Hancock since his defeat has been admirable. His presence at the inauguration of General Garfield was an event which was exceedingly gratifying to his countrymen of all parties, and his refusal to attend public ovations of late because of the condition of the commander-in-chief shows a side of the man which wins respect.

The miserable dog who attempted to murder the President made an attack on one of his keepers on Wednesday of last week. He had secured a knife by some means, known as a "chesser," made from a steel shoe shank, and made a sudden attack on the keeper, who drew a revolver, but unfortunately did not use it, although the weapon was accidentally discharged during a struggle which ensued as the guard demanded the knife. The pretended lunatic was soon overpowered.

THE DEMOCRATIC CANDIDATES.

It strikes us that the Republican press of this county concerns itself greatly regarding whom the Democratic party shall nominate as its candidates for Senator and Sheriff. Our brothers of the opposite faith seem to recognize the fact that they will be beaten unless they are allowed to select the men to be run. This we cannot allow them to do, and would advise our Republican contemporaries to turn their attention towards the discovery—if possible—of men in their own party that will make a respectable run in spite of their defeat. When they get ready and the time arrives, the Democrats will nominate their own candidates and elect them, too. Don't you forget it!

OUR PRESIDENT'S CONDITION.

Since our last, the uncertainty regarding the President's chances of recovery remains unchanged. It was not possible that he should speedily gain strength enough to put him out of danger, but the progress he has made the past two days must be regarded as encouraging. His stomach has partially resumed its functions and has assimilated more food than was needed to keep him from losing ground. A little gain, in this way, continued for a few days, would considerably brighten the outlook. Meanwhile it is not unlikely that Vice President Arthur may be very soon summoned to assume the powers and duties of acting President.

The office of Sheriff, says the State Gazette, will not be much of a prize hereafter to the incumbent, and in but few of the counties will it be worth the trouble and expense of gaining, owing to the reduction of fees which will be made when the present incumbents retire. The Sheriffs whose terms are soon to expire received twenty-five per cent. less than their predecessors, and the incoming Sheriff's fees will be three and one-third per cent. less than the present officials received. The Sheriffs of New Jersey can thank the last Republican Legislature for the above stated facts, it being one of their "reform ideas." While reducing the fees of the Sheriffs' offices in the twenty-one counties of the State, the act passed affected materially about nineteen of the counties, the balance still have a bonanza in fees.

If we are to believe the President of the American Bar Association, New Jersey, or, for that matter, any other Eastern State, cannot hold a candle to Minnesota in the way of educational progress. In a recent address delivered before the association, at Saratoga, this year, it was stated that a law requires that in all the schools in Minnesota instruction in "social and moral science" be given, including "industry, order, economy, punctuality, patience, self-denial, health, purity, temperance, cleanliness, honesty, truth, politeness, peace, fidelity, philanthropy, patriotism, self-respect, hope, perseverance, cheerfulness, courage, self-reliance, gratitude, pity, mercy, kindness, conscience, reflection and the will." The details of the agreement between the New Jersey Central and Reading Railroads and the Alliance Coal Company are now made public. The lands of the original company, costing originally $300,000 have been, it is said, sold for $1,000,000 to a party of New York capitalists, who will begin their development at once. The purchasers retain the title of the Alliance Coal Co., with Rossiter W. Raymond as President; Frederick A. Potts, of New Jersey, Vice President; ex-Judge Lowe, of New York, as Secretary, and Abraham S. Hewitt, of New York, as Treasurer. Joseph S. Harris, of Pottsville, represents the New Jersey Central in the Board of Directors. Hewitt & Co., of the original Reliance Coal Company, retain $800,000 of stock, while the Central Railroad gets $100,000. The capital stock is placed at $900,000. The Reading company will get only a nominal price for carrying the coal to Tamaqua, whence it will be run to New York over the Jersey Central, but will have its compensation in keeping out a competing railroad.

The price of prepared lithographed sermons in Chicago has gone down to thirty cents a sermon. The temptation is great to lazy ministers. When for this inconsequential sum a pastor can save himself several days work, and can at the same time feed his people on better material than he could himself prepare, it is hardly human to resist such a chance of doing good at small expense. Thus far the enterprising Chicago concern which furnishes the sermonic lithographs has several hundred discourses on miscellaneous topics, avoiding controversy and sectarianism. As the list increases, the brethren who purchase will have to look with care into the doctrines of the discourse they select. This kind of business may do in England where ministers are expected to be more perfunctory in the performance of their duty, and hearers less on the alert. If it goes on to any great extent in this country there will be some awful developments by quick-witted hearers, followed by exposures, and church trials, and heart-rending alienations, and all that sort of thing. A clergyman who has any life in him will make clumsy business of reading from his pulpit a thirty-cent lithographed sermon, and passing it off for his own.—Exchange.

Crime Cycles.

What looks like an epidemic of suicidal mania seems to have lately broken out in the United States. In all parts of the Republic "men and women," it is stated, "are blowing out the little brains they possess and cutting their worthless throats in the most reckless manner." Their fate does not appear to cause general commiseration. The compensating circumstances about the rage of self-destruction is, observes one of the American papers, that it rids the world of a number of people who, if they did not kill themselves, would probably kill somebody else, and that they make business lively for the undertakers and coroners. It is almost impossible to account for the destructive tendency that occurs every once in a while. The speculative writers and philosophers endeavor to account for it in various ways, and they talk learnedly and eloquently about "crime cycles" and more or less other sentimental rubbish, all of which is very good as a theory. The fact of the matter is that there are a great many more crazy people in the world than the world imagines. When a great popular excitement, such as the attempted assassination of the President occurs, these weak-minded creatures jump off the first wharf, tie themselves to the first rope they see, or point their head at the first old rusty pistol they come across.—London St. James Gazette.

New Depot at Communipaw.

It will be remembered that the Centennial Exhibition building was sold at auction on the 9th inst. and was bought by William C. Bullitt, a lawyer of Philadelphia, for $97,000. In signing the contract of purchase Mr. Bullitt affixed the word "attorney" after his name, and curiosity has since been rife to know for whom the building was bought. Mr. Bullitt has steadily refused to disclose his principal and has so befogged the matter that the Bi-Centennial Association continues more or less vigorous efforts to raise enough money to buy back the building from the purchaser, under the belief that he would resell. His determination to hold the great prize he has thus secured for a mere trifle will be explained when it is announced that he is merely the agent for the Jersey Central Railroad. It is now asserted that the building will be removed to Jersey City before the middle of winter, and re-erected as a grand passenger and freight depot for that railroad. Its purchase for the price agreed on was a great surprise, as it asserted that the railroad company regarded it as a good bargain at $200,000. As is well known, the structure of iron, wood and glass cost $1,700,000. When re-erected on the intended site it will form one of the largest and handsomest depots in the world, and will be a credit to New York. The entire cost, including removal, will be only a fraction of what the erection of a structure large enough to accommodate the present and future business of the Jersey Central, with its Bound Brook and prospective Wabash connections, would have entailed. It was even intimated to the writer this evening that the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad had not by any means abandoned the hope of getting through or around Philadelphia to New York and that the very moment such a result was attained the line from Baltimore to this city will be built with a rush. The terminus of the Baltimore and Ohio would in that event be fixed at the Communipaw ferry, and the apparently extravagant amount of space which the Exhibition-building gives would all be utilized. The structure passes into the possession of the new owners on November 1 next.—Herald.

SPORTSMEN'S CORNER.

Reed birds cannot be killed until after August 25, and they must be let alone after December 1. Woodcock shooting is forbidden by law in this State during the months of August and September. From September 30th to December 16th the season is again opened. It is also against the law to shoot squirrels until the 1st day of September.

One day last week two bald eagles engaged in combat in mid-air, just above the heads of some young men who were camping out in Bayhundred, Talbot county, Md. The birds fought fiercely aloft for several minutes, the feathers flying and drops of blood pattering down upon the leaves. When at last both combatants fell to the ground August Krauser and Mr. Molyneaux tried to capture them. The eagles turned upon the men and in the struggle Mr. Molyneaux's coat was torn by the claws of the birds. One was captured and the other escaped.

THE close season for fishing in New Jersey, between Trenton Falls, closed on Wednesday last, and fishing with nets of any size mesh in any waters except Timber creek and other waters stocked with black bass is now allowed in the Delaware river. The close season above Trenton Falls expired on Thursday. The law prohibiting fishing from sunset Saturday evening to twelve o'clock, Sunday night, is, however, in force the whole year, and Jos. W. Ore, Fish Warden of Camden county, states that it will be as strictly enforced as during the close season. Numerous exchanges throughout the State insist on publishing that Black Bass may be caught by hook and line in this State, from June to November 1st. This is incorrect. Black Bass are not allowed to be taken by nets at any season in New Jersey or Pennsylvania waters, but hook and line fishing is lawful in New Jersey from July 1st to November 1st, and in Pennsylvania from June 1st to January 1st.

Florida Oranges in Summer.

Arrangements have been made by which the Florida oranges are to be received in New York in Summer as well as in Winter. Up to this time no Florida oranges have been marketed there in summer, and no choice oranges have been received there this season. Florida has two crops of the choicest fruits, and the proprietors of the celebrated Dummett Grove, on the Indian river have now arranged to send the Summer as well as the Winter fruit to that city. The flavor of the oranges is delicate and sweet; the fruit is thin skinned, solid and very juicy, and bon vivants will find a new luxury in the Summer crop of the orange groves of Florida. The oranges can be placed in cold storage and kept until wanted.

The Biggest One Yet.

About the time the cry was raised last Winter that there was not going to be any peaches this season, the buds being all frozen by the excessively cold weather, a large peach grower of Delaware Township came up to Flemington and offered to sell his orchard, or all the fruit it would bear this Summer, for ten dollars. The man actually coaxed ex-Sheriff Rittenhouse to buy the orchard at that price, so well convinced was he that it would not bear any fruit. "Johnny P." is usually looking alive for bargains, but so universal was the cry that everybody's buds were frozen out that he declined the offer. He is sorry now that he did so. That peach orchard to-day bears upon its trees between six and seven thousand baskets of peaches, worth from eight to ten thousand dollars! Another man, a Readington peach grower, offered to sell out his chance for a dollar, but nobody wanted to take the risk. He will pick about fifteen hundred baskets of fine peaches.—Hunterdon Democrat.

Mr. Stryker, who lives some distance from the store, about daybreak saw a light in the window of the feed room, and hurrying to the store found the interior wrapped in flames. He at once aroused the family of a man living over the store, and an effort was made to save his family. His wife and several children were brought out, but one child, aged about four years, could not be reached and was burned to death. All the goods in the store were burned, with the exception of a few of the dry goods, and all the books were lost excepting the ledger. The contents of the Post Office, which was located in the store, were also wholly consumed.

IDOL!
[Formerly Peck's IDOL,]

By the great Mambrino Chief founder of the Mambrino family; 1st dam by American Eclipse, son of Duroc (founder of the Star family) by imported Diomed. Dam of American Eclipse, Miller's Damsel, by imported Messenger; 2d dam, Kitty Muse by Shakespeare; 3d dam, Sites Jenkins, by Sir William of Transport; 4th dam by Orphan, son of Ball's Florizel; 5th dam by imported Bozzard; 6th dam by Silvertail; 7th dam by imported Dove.

IDOL is a rich dark bay, weighs 1,200 lbs., with nigh hind foot white, full sixteen hands high; a horse of great substance, fine temper, elegant trotting action, record 2:41¾ as a four-year old, distancing his field, and at five years old showed 2:38, third heat, to wagon. As a six year old he made his first season in the stud, but the war prevented the development of his progeny. Few of his colts have been trained, but those few are mostly fast. Idol Girl, 16 hands high, won Beacon, Mystic, and Prospect Park stakes for four year olds during 1871, obtaining a record of 2:36¾. The mare at that age could beat 2:30, and at Prospect Park trotted during her race a half mile in 1:15½, and a quarter in 36½ seconds—a 2:25 gait. As a five year old she met with an accident which ended her turf career. Barbara Patchen, in 1879, as a big 16½ hand green 8 year old mare, won all her races in a jog, and the seventh heat, on a half-mile track, gained record 2:34½. Idol, at Topeka, Kansas, won his race in 2:32. Wayco won colt stakes at Hartford. Nannette trotted, 3 years old, in 2:44. Ideal, same age, trotted in 2:46, and John R., in 1880, gained a record of 2:28 on a half mile track at Olean, N. Y., and won first money in all his races. There are others that will drop into the 2:30 list this year without doubt.

IDOL will be limited to 10 mares, besides those engaged, at $20.00 the season, money payable (or secured) at service.

Good care and pasture furnished at $5 per month. All accidents and escapes at owners' risk. IDOL and some of his colts can be seen at the grazing farm of D. F. CARLE, STIRLING, Morris Co., New Jersey.

Breeders desiring an outcross should call and see IDOL, and after seeing him, judge for themselves.

A WOMAN whose rugged beauty and unassuming style were too overpowering for idle words, was arrested for drunkenness on our streets one evening last week, but subsequently released with judicial censure.

THE law exempting firemen from taxation to the extent of $5, applies only to "members of any organized volunteer fire department of any town, city, borough or township of this State under control of any town committee, common council or municipal corporation, which are now or may hereafter be established."

FIFTY new passenger coaches have been added to the rolling stock of the New Jersey Central. They are mounted on papier mache wheels and have the latest improved trucks and run as easily as Pullman cars. They were built at Springfield, Mass., and are the handsomest coaches on the road.—Elizabeth Journal.

THOUGH gone from our midst, Refugee Bariex has not been forgotten, and he was recognized at the Elizabeth station by some of our citizens, one day recently. His presence here, however, is not desired, and in consequence no warrant for his arrest has been applied for. He is allowed to go his own way unmolested, as the future life his character and conduct marks out, will undoubtedly be punishment enough.

THE school laws of the State require the District Clerks of the various public school districts to take a census, between August 1st and 20th, of the children in their respective districts who are between the ages of five and eighteen, as it is according to the number of children of this age that the State school moneys are apportioned each year, being made in accordance with the census of the preceding year.

THE new comet is visible to the naked eye in many places. It now rises a little before the sun, and just dips below or grazes the horizon at its lower culmination. Its north declination is now about 51 degrees, which, according to its ephemeris, is about its most northerly limit. It is moving west rapidly, its right ascension increasing, and can be seen in the evening sky in the neighborhood of the "big dipper."

PLAINFIELD was filled with strangers on Tuesday last from morning to night, but our merchants experienced little benefit from the influx. The features that attracted them were the morning parade and the subsequent performances of Batcheller & Doris' Circus, which organization, it is estimated, left our city with an increase in its treasury of about $5,000. As the Orange Chronicle puts it, "its promises doubled its fulfillment."

ON Thursday the 8th of September, the Ancient Order of Hibernians of this city will hold a picnic in Steile's Grove, which that organization intends shall be the last and best of the season. The moon will be full on the evening selected and arrangements will be made to insure pleasant weather and a glorious time. Fine music will be engaged, a large dancing platform erected and every comfort and convenience furnished for the benefit of those who attend. A large gathering will undoubtedly take advantage of this last chance to enjoy out-door festivities.

THE case of McLanahan vs. Messerschmidt was tried before Justice Nodyne on Thursday afternoon of last week. The plaintiff claimed $200 damages for injuries said to be received from the bite of the defendant's dog, but failed to substantiate her statement. The jury composed of some of our best citizens, in consequence of lack of evidence sustaining the plaintiff's position, brought in a verdict of no cause for action after a consultation of about ten minute's duration. Mr. Craig A. Marsh appeared for the defendant and Geo. P. Suydam, Esq., for the plaintiff.

THE hot summer is gradually passing over. The present month, August, will soon be gone, but not necessarily so all the hot weather. September has in seasons passed, frequently furnished us with some of the most oppressively warm weather. Just now then, is the time to observe all the laws of health. Strained, aged and naturally weak physical constitutions can do something for themselves, but not in the same degree with the young, hardy and robust, and it is these latter that at this season receive the severest blows when attacked by reason of indiscretion.

THE New Jersey Agricultural Station has issued a circular containing information about the value of fertilizers per ton, which is of much interest to farmers, as follows:

Allentown Bone $18.54; Commonwealth Bone Meal, $47.57; Smith's Bone Phosphate, $5.64; Stockbridge's Grain Manure, $9.20; Stockbridge's Potato Manure, $15.76; Star Bone Phosphate, $10.23; Star Guano, $13.51; Soluble Guano, $6.67. Two brands are estimated to be worth more per ton than the selling price as follows: Mapes' A Brand, $1.94; Mapes' Corn Manure, $2.67.

THE annual excursion of the Crescent avenue Sabbath School, accompanied by the Warren Mission and 1st Presbyterian Sabbath Schools, will take place next Tuesday, Aug. 30, leaving Plainfield at 7:30 a. m., arriving at Asbury Park at 9:30, leaving there at 5:15 p. m., stopping at Long Branch each way. Baskets properly marked will be taken charge of and delivered at the grove corner of Asbury avenue and Heck street. Good bathing all day. Train from Dunellen at 7:24, will connect. If necessary, to accommodate all that may want to go, the train will be run in two sections. Tickets, $1. For sale at the stores of S. H. Whitney, P. Swain, Pope Bros., Parsons & Co., Gerome Pack, and H. P. Reynolds' and W. H. Voorhees' Pharmacies, or at the Telegraph office on the morning of the excursion.

ONLY five more days of summer, and then "The melancholy days," &c.

IF the katy-dids are right, frost will come about the middle of September.

ONE can never guess the population of a place until a circus comes to town.

THERE is one good thing about a circus in town—you know where to look for your boy when you want him.

THE organ that was in the church building at the corner of Second street and Central avenue (now Sharpe's carriage factory) has been sold and removed.

ONE of the handsomest and most attractive bills ever posted in our city, is that put out by the U. & M. C. M. A. A., announcing its Third Annual Fair.

A. BERRY, Esq., has in contemplation more improvement in the way of handsome dwellings. Further particulars when we get a chance to interview him.

WHILE Telegraph Operator Schermerhorn is away, the office is being run in the same efficient manner as has always been noticeable, by Mr. Warren Follweiler.

A COMMUNICATION will be found elsewhere, from one of the committee on supplies of the public schools, in answer to "Taxpayer's" assertions published last week.

THE Home Journal, a recognized authority of good taste and sound judgment, recently contained a very flattering notice of the Hotel Netherwood and its management.

ON Tuesday next, the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian Sunday School goes to Long Branch and Ocean Grove. Tickets will be sold others desiring to accompany the excursion.

THE closing exercises at Chautauqua were held on Monday morning last at 8 o'clock. The Assembly then adjourned until the Saturday preceding the first day of August, 1882.

NO wise housekeeper will be without Kingsford's starch in the laundry, as it finishes and stiffens the work it is used upon, with an evenness both desirable and satisfactory.

THE contract for painting the outside of the High School Building has been awarded to W. F. Adams, he being the lowest bidder. The work will be commenced immediately.

OUR remarks on the irregularity of our town-clock's striking apparatus, seems to have offended that piece of mechanism. It has kept its hands before its face ever since and declines to utter a sound.

IN our advertising columns the State Comptroller notifies the county and local authorities to make the report required by them by a law of the present year, regarding the financial condition of their respective sections of the State.

IN the case of Sullivan vs Holmes recorded in our last issue, Justice McLoughlin rendered his decision yesterday in favor of the plaintiff for $150 and costs. Mr. Craig A. Marsh appeared for the winning side as seems to be the general order of things.

AN evidence of increasing business is the new delivery wagon and horse recently seen on our streets, the property of Mr. D. C. Smalley, the Butcher of Somerset street, North Plainfield. The vehicle is the joint production of Messrs. Uhrbahn and Stewart.

THE inventor of elevated railways, Dr. Gilbert, a former resident of Plainfield, constructed his first model of the system in the machine shop of Kenyon & Schenck, this city, in 1869. It is a shame that Dr. Gilbert has been defrauded out of the honor of calling his invention after his own name.

OFFICER Randolph arrested a drunken resident of Third street on Wednesday last, and in the absence of the City Judge, brought the culprit before his honor, the Mayor. "Three dollars or ten days" was the verdict, and the money was handed over. "Here endeth the first lesson" taught by the Mayor.

THE agency of some of the best fire insurance companies in the country is held by Mr. E. C. Mulford, who may be found at his office in the east room of the Central R. R. depot. The same also offers many bargains in real estate, and has a large list of property from which those desiring to rent or buy, may select.

ALTHOUGH the rooster that so long and faithfully proclaimed in our advertising columns the purity of Demarest's groceries and the lowness of his prices, has been away to the sea-shore for the past three weeks, yet the business is conducted in the same satisfactory manner at No. 34 West Front street during his absence.

THE many friends of Mr. Stephen C. Ryder are sorry to learn of an accident happening to him while engaged in his duties as boss of a gang of workmen constructing a railroad in Warren County. A large stone rolled down an embankment and striking Mr. Ryder on the fleshy part of his leg, inflicted severe bruises and wounds. It was a narrow escape from serious injuries.

BOYNTON Beach, near Woodbridge, N. J., has again become a popular resort for family picnic and pleasure parties, since the owner, Mr. Boynton, has taken the premises out of the hands of former lessees. Splendid bathing grounds and good fishing are attractions of this place. Charges are also reasonable. We advise all who desire a day of enjoyment to go with their families to Boynton Beach.

ON the tenth anniversary of the establishment of Peck at his well-known corner, (which date occurs next month) that enterprising merchant will remove to the former City National Bank building, opposite the post office. Extensive alterations are at present being made in the premises to allow of the greater accommodation of his large number of patrons and the more favorable display of his enormous stock of goods.

THE biter is sometimes bitten, and the Circus company had one of its horses with harness stolen on Tuesday night last. The thief, however, either became disgusted with his new possession or else was fearful of being caught, as the animal was traced to Paff's stable in Scotch Plains and found there in a condition that evidenced hard driving. It was brought back to this city on Wednesday and shipped to Elizabeth.

MME. Rentz's Minstrels under the management of M. B. Leavitt, gave an enjoyable entertainment at VanDeventer Hall on Wednesday evening of last week. The males of the troupe were all good—especially Johnson and Powers—but with the exception of one or two, the lady artists were about the average in voice and acting. The show seems to have lost something by the absence of Kit Clarke, who was at least courteous to ladies and gentlemen, if stern to the gallery gods.

THE "Sewaren" House, at Woodbridge Landing, in Middlesex county, has become a very popular resort for summer guests under the management of Mr. Turner, the present proprietor. The house is filled to overflowing with guests, who are loud in their praises of the manner in which the house is conducted. Lovers of the piscatorial art will find there good boats at low figures to take them on the fishing grounds in the bay, where weak fishing is now at its heighth.

PLANS have been completed for two brick stores with lofts that Mr. P. M. French contemplates erecting on Somerset street on the premises now occupied by Mr. Warren Stewart the wheelwright. When the building is commenced the removal of the latter will become necessary, and new quarters have been arranged for him in part of the building wherein is Mr. Frank Hand's blacksmith-shop. An addition having recently been made to the extent of Mr. Hand's premises, the two businesses can be comfortably accommodated. Mr. Isaac Melbourne will have the contract for the proposed building. The architect is Mr. E. B. Davis.

AS winter approaches and means of heating are being discussed, no one should neglect to consider the advantages and convenience of steam for the purpose. Mr. John N. Schenck, who may be addressed through the post-office, is a practical builder of boilers and apparatus for heating private houses and public buildings by steam, and he will be found ready to estimate upon such work in a manner sure to be satisfactory. By a system of automatic attachments the required pressure is kept regulated, and absolutely no more danger arises from the presence in the house of steam heating apparatus built by Mr. Schenck, than from a common grate.

A Card.

The employees of Weaver Bros. had a fine time at Coney Island last Wednesday, and herewith return thanks to their employers for the kindness extended to them. The large fish presented to the Messrs. Weaver can be seen at H. S. Barnes' paint store.

A Prize Picnic.

A novelty in its way will be the coming picnic during the afternoon and evening of Thursday, Sept. 1st, at Wooden's Grove, under the auspices of Warren Eng. Co. No. 2. Besides the several attractions, including dancing to Franze's music, two valuable prizes suitable for a lady and gentleman are now on exhibition at Clare's Jewelry store, and will be drawn for in the evening. Every purchaser of a ticket will be entitled to a chance, provided the ticket is presented to the gate keeper.

"Pitch Right In."

The editor of the Mercer County News was induced by one of his subscribers to make his paper "lively." "Pitch right in, and make the paper spicy," said the critical subscriber. The editor took his advice, and after awhile a piece of the "spice" hit the man who thought he knew better than the editor how the paper ought to be conducted. The result is thus announced by the editor of the News: "When the first piece of 'spice' struck him he howled like a scalded cat and cried and whined like a whipped puppy." 'Twas always thus.

Agricultural Fairs.

Time has been appointed as named below for holding the following fairs: Union & Middlesex Counties' Mutual Agricultural Association, at Plainfield, Sept. 26th, 27th, 28th, 29th, 30th; Monmouth county, at Freehold, September 13th to 15th; West Jersey Agricultural Society, at Woodstown, September 14th and 15th; State Fair, at Waverly, September 19th to 24th; Cumberland county Agricultural Society, at Bridgeton, September 21st; Somerset county Agricultural Society, October 4th to 6th; Burlington county Agricultural Society, at Mount Holly, October 11th to 14th.

A Fatal Accident.

Mrs. Powelson of Fourth street, while making preparations to visit relatives near Millstone, slipped from a chair on which she was standing to reach some article from a closet shelf, on Thursday of last week. In falling she struck herself so severely as to render her unconscious, but subsequently recovered sufficiently to be taken in a carriage to the station from whence she departed to her destination. On Friday her friends in this city were shocked to hear of her death from the injuries received. The funeral of the deceased took place at Millstone on Monday.

The Last Excursion.

The firemen of Gazelle Eng. Co., and the boys of the Hose Carriage, intend giving the last and the "grandest" excursion of the season. The train will leave Plainfield at 8 o'clock a. m., on Wednesday, Sept. 7th, and with the Gazellers, their friends and Franze's Brass and String Band, will proceed directly to Neshaminy Falls Grove, where a day of continuous enjoyment is insured. Facilities for boating, fishing and other recreations will be furnished, and a commodious dancing platform available. Tickets at one dollar each may be obtained of members of the Companies and at the principal stores in the city.

One Year Ago.

A few of the events happening during the past week of one year ago, may be noticed as follows: The steam pump at the Field Gold (?) mines was working day and night. Mrs. Florence Rice-Knox gave a concert at the Hotel Netherwood. The burglars who entered Mr. H. P. Tallmadge's house at Netherwood, were captured. L. A. Rheaume's Kindling wood factory was burned. Mr. John Hughes' saloon on Somerset street was robbed. A Democratic pole was raised at Dog Corner. The thermometer on Wednesday was 96, and on Thursday, 69. Mr. John Mooney of Scotch Plains died in the 63d year of his age.

An Unjust Decision.

A singular case of the law's injustice is reported from Ohio. A burglar who was sentenced in 1861 to twenty years' imprisonment became insane in 1877 and has since been an inmate of a lunatic asylum. Now, however, he is restored to sanity, and it is decided that unless pardoned he must go back to the Penitentiary and serve the four years which he has already served, in another way, in the insane asylum. If he had remained sane, he would have been a free man now; but for the crime of allowing his mind to give way he must suffer four years' additional imprisonment. This is a terrible warning to prisoners to keep their wits. Probably Governor Foster will see the propriety of interposing a pardon.

One Effect of the Circus.

An eight-year old son of L. M. Shoot of Kingston, N. Y., saw Mme. Zazel shot from a mortar in Batcheller & Doris' circus a week ago. On last Friday he attempted a burlesque on the feat with his four-year-old brother, which nearly terminated fatally. The younger brother was placed on a second story window sill against the closed blinds. The older brother then pointed a chair at him and exploded a firecracker. The boy in the window, according to a previous command, threw himself backward at the explosion, and the shutters opening he fell to the ground, a distance of twenty feet. His injuries are very severe, and may prove fatal.

Another Railroad to Long Branch.

The Pennsylvania Railroad Company in order to take passengers from New York to Long Branch is now compelled to carry them around by way of Monmouth Junction, Farmingdale and Squan, making a long, inconvenient route. They now have surveyors engaged running a line for a branch of the railroad, which is to start from the Bonhamtown gravel pits in this county and make an air line to Long Branch. The distance from Long Branch to Metuchen by the proposed route is forty-three miles. After the survey is made to the Raritan River, which the railroad will strike near Crab Island, a route will be surveyed from this city to Woodbridge, and then the original survey will be furnished from Crab Island to Long Branch.—New Brunswick Fredonian.

Pay Your Taxes.

Those delinquents who have been cherishing the hope that the courts would perhaps hold that Plainfield's back taxes could not be collected, should—in our opinion—proceed to settle their accounts with the Collector without further delay, as such hope seems destined to be blasted. In the case of Plainfield vs Laing, which has just been decided, it was held that the city can maintain suits to recover personal taxes assessed prior to 1869—as to those of that year, there has never been any question. Consequently, we trust this talk about evading payment of the city taxes will now cease, and that each delinquent will, by prompt settlement, contribute his share towards defraying the cost of the conveniences he has been enjoying for nothing, and assist in lifting from the city the burden of debt that is lying upon it.

Firemen's Excursion.

Gazelle Engine and Hose Co., No. 1, of Plainfield, N. J., will give an excursion on Wednesday, Sept. 7th, to Neshaminy Falls Grove and Rocky Glen, Pa. The train will leave Plainfield at 8 o'clock, A. M., stopping for excursionists at Dunellen and Bound Brook. The fare for the round trip is only $1.00. We have no doubt but that Somerville will be well represented, especially by our fire laddies, as they couldn't well find a better class of men to spend a day of recreation with than those of Gazelle Steam Engine Co. No. 1. Tickets may be had at R. L. Day's drug store, under Somerset Hall. Passengers from Somerville will take the 7:39 train to Bound Brook, where one of our former townsmen, Stephen A. Davis, Assistant Chief of the Plainfield Fire Department, will show them which train to take to have a pleasant time. The music will be furnished by Franze's brass and string band.—Somerset Messenger.

Somerset Courts.

The next (September) term of the Somerset County Courts will commence on Tuesday, September 13th. Sheriff Thompson, on Tuesday, in the presence of Justices Vosseller, Garretson and Thompson, drew the following panel of petit jurors:

Bedminster.—John Dolliver, Thomas W. Simms, Robert G. Lane, Isaac Goodheart.

Bernards.—Peter R. Randolph, Wm. A. Van Ness, Charles Dunster, Isaac V. Sturges, Charles P. Cruse, Jacob Van Arsdale.

Bridgewater.—A. Dunn, John R. Garretson, George A. Vosseller, David Nevius, Aug. A. Boyle, Hiram Rockafellow, John W. Van Horn, Wm. Hardgrove.

Branchburg.—Tunis Ten Eyck, John H. Beekman, Minne V. Saums, Wm. J. Dilts, William Biles.

Franklin.—Wm. A. Voorhees, John B. Van Doren, John B. Smith, Dennis Wyckoff, Lawrence J Suydam.

Hillsborough.—John Woodruff, Abraham Sullivan, Stephen A. Weaver, Albert V. Everett, Joseph Bartron, Martin V. Van Camp.

Montgomery.—Henry Sheppard, Martin N. Stants, Henry Covert, Garret Darling, Joseph Scudder, Abram B. Conover.

North Plainfield.—Joseph Randolph, Albert B. Darby, John Bodine, Alfred B. Conway, Jacob Long, Lewis Bird.

Warren.—George Klein, Peter Bower,

At the Hotel Netherwood.

A grand concert for the benefit of the Netherwood Chapel Furnishing Fund, will be given at the Hotel on Monday evening next. Members of the N. Y. Stock Exchange Glee Club and other prominent vocalists, will take part.

The New Jersey Masons.

The twenty-fifth annual convocation of the M. E. Grand Chapter of Royal Arch Masons of the State of New Jersey will be held in Trenton on Wednesday, September 14, at 10 a. m. The annual convention of the Grand Council of High Priesthood of the State and the twenty-third annual conclave of the Grand Commandery of Knights Templar will be held at Trenton on Tuesday, September 13.

The T. A. B. Excursion.

In spite of the unpleasant weather that was the condition of things out-doors on Thursday morning of last week, quite a large gathering left this city on an excursion up the Hudson under the management of the Plainfield T. A. B. Society. The train of seven well-filled cars deposited its load at Elizabethport, from which the commodious Steamer General Sedgewick continued the journey until the destination (Excelsior Park) was reached by the merry party at about noon. After the "inner man" (and woman) had been satisfied, Cahill's orchestra led the dancing in a pleasant pavilion, and the mazy waltz and other light fantastic attraction occupied the attention of the young ladies and their gentlemen until the afternoon passed as though on wings. The trip to and from was made without a mishap, and universal good order and happiness prevailed to such an extent that the Committee is to be credited with carrying out one of the pleasantest excursions of the year.

Salt Water Day.

Last Saturday was what was called the great Salt Water Day, and as such was duly enjoyed by thousands of people who thronged every resort by the shore, this city alone contributing a large number who were carried mainly to Florida Grove by the steamboat New Brunswick and the little steamer John Taylor. In all the history of Florida Grove a larger crowd was never known to be present than on Saturday. The rush of people by carriages and steamboats was unprecedented, and by twelve o'clock progress through the grove was almost impossible. During the afternoon the steamboat Gen. Sedgwick, with two barges, arrived with nearly 3,000 excursionists from Paterson, and for two or three hours the scene to one sitting on the bluff was almost bewildering. Strange to say, among all the people, estimated at 5,000, there was no disturbance of any moment. Perth Amboy, South Amboy, Boynton Beach and other well-known places were equally well patronized and the proprietors were made happy by overflowing receipts.—New Brunswick Times.

World's Conference of Young Men's Christian Association.

The ninth triennial conference of the Young Men's Christian Associations of all lands, was held this month at Exeter Hall, London. About 500 delegates were present from America, Great Britain, Belgium, Denmark, France, Germany, Holland, Italy, Switzerland, Spain, New Zealand, India and other countries. The first of these gatherings was held in Paris in 1855. At that time the Associations were very weak, and there were fewer in all the world than there are now in any one of a dozen of our States. The present conference in London represents 3,000 Associations in all lands. It was held at Exeter Hall, the new Association building, in the centre of this city. The sessions were presided over by Mr. George Williams, founder, in 1844, of the parent organization (at London); the Lord Mayor, who, with the Lady Mayoress, gave a grand reception, at which himself and Earl Shaftesbury and others made addresses; Samuel Morley, M. P.; Earl Aberdeen; Russell Sturgis, Esq., of Boston; and Earl Shaftesbury. The papers read were terse and practical, the best being from American delegates. About 80 representatives were present from this country, led by several Secretaries and members of the International committee, and a large number of local Secretaries. After sight seeing in London, the American delegates enjoyed some time in Europe; several different tours having been pre-arranged to suit the tastes and purses of the tourists.

Miss Matilda Grace Tingley was united in marriage with Mr. Wm. H. Stryker, on Tuesday evening at the residence of the bride's father on Fourth street. The Rev. A. H. Lewis performed the ceremony in the presence of a large number of the couple's friends, among which were many of the prominent families of the Seventh Day church. A reception and pleasant dance followed, and the occasion was an entire night spent in uninterrupted gaiety.

NORTH PLAINFIELD PARAGRAPHS.

Mr. Cornelius Compton of Duer street has laid a new board walk in front of his premises. A few others would do well to follow his example.

Mr. and Mrs. George Demeza of Somerset street were made particularly happy recently by the advent of another heir weighing 11½ pounds and to be named Harry Garfield Demeza.

COMMUNICATED.

For The Constitutionalist.

MESSRS EDITORS:—

In your issue of last week I notice a communication signed "Taxpayer" calling attention to the fact that the Trustees of the Public Schools were about to pay or were paying 70 cents per ton more for their coal this year than "one yard" in this city offered to furnish it for.

That the citizens of this city may not be led to believe that the Trustees are squandering the monies of the school, as "Taxpayer" would have them believe, I have consented to answer the communication and for that reason only.

The Committee of the Board of Trustees to whom was referred the purchasing of the coal, desirous of obtaining it at the lowest figure and to give no preference to any yard, inquired of several and asked for bids and were uniformly named the same price, $5.25 per short ton.

The Committee also learned that the coal dealers of Plainfield had entered into a combination at fixed prices not to undersell each other under a heavy money penalty for each offence.

With this fact before them the committee at once put themselves in communication with dealers outside of Plainfield and sought for bids and closed a contract with a dealer in New Brooklyn for the coal, at $5.25 per long ton, making a difference in favor of the schools of nine and a quarter tons long weight.

The fact that the Committee were inquiring outside coming to the ears of the coal dealers, a meeting of the combination was held, and the result was the bid of Mr. Guion.

If Mr. Guion desired to bid for furnishing the coal for the schools, why did he enter the combination not to undersell under a heavy money penalty those whom he combined with?

If he desired his bid to be opened in time for the Committee of the Board to act on it, why did he direct it to the only member of the Board, Mr. Kirkner, who was absent from the city and who it was known would be absent for weeks, and not give it to any of the other four members who were in the city every day.

If Mr. Guion's price for coal and that of the other dealers was $5.25 per ton, before the Committee of the Board put themselves in communication with outside dealers, what was it that caused the great reduction in price?

Was it a sudden charitable desire on his part to save money for the taxpayers of Plainfield, or was it a determination of the dealers, in meeting, to break down any attempt of outside dealers to interfere with the grand coal combination of this city?

It is my humble opinion that charity for the taxpayers had not so much to do with it as the frantic attempt to compel the Committee to submit to the fixed prices of the dealers of Plainfield.

The undersigned thinks and feels that the less Mr. Guion says of this matter the better, for their utter failure to compel the Board to pay more for an article than it can be bought for will bring them no more sympathy or respect than generally attaches to all classes of dealers who combine together to force the poor laborer, the widow and the honest taxpayer more for an article of household consumption than the same can be had for in an honest, fair and open market. I will also state that Mr. Guion's bid was not received by the Trustees until the Monday following the appearance of "Taxpayers" communication in your paper.

Very respectfully,
JNO. W. MURRAY,
One of Committee.

WESTFIELD WISPS.

Caution. Don't stop to pick up black and white cats, when out riding.

That unrivaled driver of wells, John Kane, has just completed a well on the Miggitt property at Fanwood, depth 141 feet.

With sincere regret we announce the death of Mr. John Deal, father of Mrs. David Frazee, which sad event occurred on Sunday last.

Dr. J. B. Harrison was unfortunate enough to have his horse run away during the past week. Result, a demolished wagon. Order for new one already given.

Overseer Pierson still keeps busy on road district No. 8. His latest improvement is the repair of the roadway on Prospect between Broad street and North avenue.

The sign of our local (artist, Jerome Neil) tacked on his office door, attracts the attention of the many passers. Call in gentlemen. Local Items, Job printing, Advertisements, always in order.

We announce with regret the intended departure from our community of Mr. Henry Shafer. We learn that he intends to locate at Pamrapo. He carries with him the best wishes of his many friends here.

The attention of our readers is called to the advertisement of Mr. C. A. Smith, of Fanwood, under the head of "Westfield Advertisers." Those in want of goods in his line will serve themselves by patronizing him.

Our justly popular light weight champion, "Pop" J. H. Edwards, visited us on Wednesday last and brought with him, to your local's great delight, the finest apples that we have seen this season. Average weight 11 ounces. Come again "Pop."

Mr. Z. Arthur Lapierre of Montreal, Canada, has been visiting our friend Mr. John Dorvall, the popular assistant at Bayard's. Mr. Lapierre proves a particularly pleasant person and leaves us after a short sojourn with the title of a "masher."

Our popular mason John R. Barcalow, we mean a mason who works at his trade, has been busy during the past week rebuilding the culvert corner of Prospect and Broad streets, as well as repairing the pavement adjoining the engine house on Broad street.

*Nothing that has occured in our town*ship during the last year, has occasioned greater surprise and regret than the death of Mr. Wm. Henry Dennis. The funeral which was largely attended, was held at the late residence of the deceased on Sunday last.

The attention of those desiring a day of enjoyment is called to the Excursion of Gazelle Engine and Hose Co. No. 1, of Plainfield, that occurs on September 7th. Its destination is Neshaminy Falls and Rocky Glen, Pa. Those desiring tickets can procure them of our local or at "Bayard's" drug store.

OUR COURTS.

Before Squire Jacques, Friday Aug. 19th, Joel Moffett vs Wm. F. Brown. Bill for work furnished $2.25. Judgment in favor of plaintiff $1.75 and costs. Total $4.94. Settled.

Wm. A. Woodruff vs Samuel E. Young, Wednesday Aug. 24. Suit on note $60.00. Judgment for plaintiff. Defendant failed to appear.

The Camp Meeting of Zion's Mission that has been in operation at Woodruff's Grove during the past week, closed on Sunday night last during the storm. It proved we believe highly successful as a religious revival. Criticisms that have been hitherto published regarding it, could as justly be applied to all camp meetings.

Our celebrated veterinary surgeon, Dr. W. P. Humphreys, visited us during the last week and endeavored to benefit our *citizens generally by his efforts, to in*duce them to purchase his truly celebrated healing powders, for all wounds or sores on horses or cattle. Also by his endeavors to convince the public that samaritan liniment would cure everything.

A birthday of one of the daughters of Mr. Chas. Leveridge was pleasantly celebrated at his residence on Thursday of last week. Among those present were Messrs. John Streitzman, James O. Clark, Samuel Clark, Edward Brown, Will Alpers, Mrs. G. W. Tice, the Misses Ganzels and Clarks and Miss Annie Miller. Messrs. Wilcox and Davis furnished music for the occasion.

We announce with pleasure that our friend Mr. C. A. Smith of Fanwood has secured a prompt settlement of his loss by fire. His claim for damages presented to the company on Friday of last week, was immediately settled. The Company interested, the Jersey City Fire, deserve credit in this respect: Mr. J. M. C. Marsh is their local agent here. Particular attention should be called to the fact that their policies cover loss by lightning where fire does not occur.

Westfield contributed a large delegation to the Circus exhibition at Plainfield on Tuesday last. All returned apparently satisfied except a couple of young gentlemen who preferring the roadway to the railroad, hired a buggy and drove to the entertainment. Judge of their surprise when they found that some of their Westfield friends had been struck with their own idea, and prefered returning by road instead of rail and borrowed the equipage and returned home. We understand that war has been declared.

MR. Wm. B. Dunn, who declined a recent election as constable, received a postal the other day requesting his services in finding a lost, strayed or stolen mule, for whose recovery $25 reward was offered. As the height, age and sores of the animal were explicitly described, the "Wouldn't-Be-Constable" will undoubtedly have no trouble in securing the missing property.

BABY'S VISITOR.

My baby boy sat on the floor,
His big blue eyes were full of wonder,
For he had never seen before
That baby in the mirror door—
What kept the two, so near, asunder?
He leaned toward the golden head
The mirror border framed within,
Until twin cheeks, like roses red,
Lay side by side, then softly said:
"I can't get out; can you come in?"

Wonderful successes like those of Stewart, the Vanderbilts, or the Astors are seldom reached by luck or accident. It is the result of something within that commands success; and it is only time that proves them so much. While new discoveries are daily brought forward how few remain as monuments of their worth. It is the merit that lasts—ARTHUR'S ELIXIR OF SULPHUR for Coughs, *Colds, Consumption, etc., first discovered or orig*inated after long years of study by a patient Massachusetts chemist, has gradually proved itself a success from Maine to Oregon, and to-day no more successful preparation for the cure of Throat and Lung complaints can be found in the world. A bridegroom slapped his bride's face two hours after marriage, as they were about to take a train at Whiteside, Ill., for a honeymoon tour. She stood still in surprise, but only for a moment. Then she seized his cane, belabored him well, and went back home with her parents.

SIX TO FIFTEEN.

"Having been an invalid for a number of years, I have received more benefit during the last six months from the use of your 'Favorite Remedy' than from the preceding 15 years of treatment from the best physicians of New York and surrounding country." Thus writes Mrs. Mariam Reeve, in a letter dated at Cornwall, N. Y., to Dr. David Kennedy, Rondout, N. Y. Is any extended comment needed on this? One Dollar a bottle. All Druggists sell it.

This is the latest slang: "Can you swim?" "No, I don't swim, but my brother Jim can swim; but he's too thin; mother won't let him go in."

PLEASANT LETTERS.

They are sheets of sunshine. A Methodist clergyman of Hartford, Conn., writes Dr. David Kennedy, of Rondout, N. Y., that "Favorite Remedy" cured him of Chronic Liver Disease and Indigestion, from which he had suffered for a long time. This was splendid, but nothing more than anyone may expect who uses this medicine. One Dollar a bottle is a small consideration when health is in question. The clergyman says he is going to introduce Dr. Kennedy's "Favorite Remedy" among his people. He can't do better.

"MY TORMENTED BACK,"

is the exclamation of more that one poor hard-working man and woman. Do you know why it aches? It is because your kidneys are overtasked and need strengthening, and your system needs to be cleansed of bad humors. Kidney-Wort is the medicine you need. "It acts like a charm," says a well known physician. "I never knew it to fail." Liquid or dry sold by Druggists. —Boston Post.

RHEUMATIC DISEASES.

These ailments follow from torpid liver and costive bowels; the skin, bowels and kidneys failing in their proper work, an acrid poison is formed in the blood, which is the occasion of these acute diseases. Kidney-Wort produces healthy action of all secretive organs, and throws off the rheumatic poison. Equally efficient in Liquid or Dry form.—Inter-Ocean.

HAY FEVER.

FOR HAY FEVER I recommend Ely's Cream Balm. It entirely relieved me from the first application; have been a sufferer for ten years. Going from home and neglecting to take the remedy, I had an attack; after returning I immediately resorted to it, and found instant relief. I believe, had I begun its use earlier, I should not have been troubled. Have stood heat, dust and draughts as well as during other months. J. COLLYER, Clerk, 118 Broad street, Elizabeth, N. J.

FOR YEARS I have been afflicted with Hay Fever from early in August until frost. I was induced to give Ely's Cream Balm a trial. The relief was immediate. I regard myself cured. G. SCHEIDKER, Supt., of Cordage Co., Elizabeth, N. J. Sept. 28, 1880. Price 50 cents.

RESCUED FROM DEATH.

The following statement of William J. Coughlin, of Somerville, Mass., is so remarkable that we beg to ask for it the attention of our readers. He says: "In the fall of 1876 I was taken with a violent BLEEDING OF THE LUNGS followed by a severe cough. I soon began to lose my appetite and flesh. I was so weak at one time that I could not leave my bed. In the summer of 1877 I was admitted to the City Hospital. While there the doctors said I had a hole in my left lung as big as a half dollar. I expended over a hundred dollars in doctors and medicines. I was so far gone at one time a report went around that I was dead. I gave up hope, but a friend told me of DR. WM. HALL'S BALSAM FOR THE LUNGS. I laughed at my friends, thinking that my case was incurable, but I got a bottle to satisfy them, when to my surprise and gratification, I commenced to feel better. My hope, once dead, began to revive, and to-day I feel in better spirits than I have the past three years.

"I write this hoping you will publish it, so that every one afflicted with Diseased Lungs will be induced to take DR. WM. HALL'S BALSAM FOR THE LUNGS, and be convinced that CONSUMPTION CAN BE CURED. I have taken two bottles and can positively say that it has done more good than all the other medicines I have taken since my sickness. My cough has almost entirely disappeared and I shall soon be able to go to work." Sold by druggists.

"OLD HICKORY'S" NOSE.

LIEUTENANT RANDOLPH'S ATTACK ON PRESIDENT JACKSON.

A Washington letter gives the following account of an affair which created a great stir at the time it occurred, Lieutenant Randolph's attack on President Jackson in 1833:

Lieutenant Robert B. Randolph, of the navy, on board the frigate Constitution, was appointed by Captain Patterson, in the year 1828, to assume the duties of acting purser, in the place of John B. Timberlake, the purser, who, in a fit of drunken delirium, had committed suicide. Timberlake was the first husband of the future Mrs. General John H. Eaton, nee Peggy O'Neal, who enjoys the dubious honor of having caused the dissolution of General Jackson's first Cabinet. Randolph took charge of the office or duties of purser, and, in his statement of the case, he complains that the survey and inventory required by the regulations of the law were not made, and that he was held accountable for an amount of stores which were not on hand. After some years he was found to be a defaulter, on what he insisted was an assumed state of facts, when he took charge of the pursership. A court of inquiry was appointed to investigate his accounts. Their report exonerated him from an intentional misuse of the public property, but not from the default. They reported him to be careless or neglectful, though not dishonorable. Otherwise he was an efficient officer, who had rendered the country valuable service. On this report Gen. Jackson dismissed him from the service, in spite of the strenuous efforts of influential friends in his behalf. It was to avenge himself for this injustice, as he regarded it, that he made the violent assault upon the President. The friends of General Jackson were never willing to admit the fact, but his opponents insisted that Randolph pulled the old hero's nose. That seems to have been the purpose of the ruffian, at any rate; and the blood upon the general's face would seem to prove that the attempt was successful.

The opportunity for this outrage was furnished by a trip of the President, a portion of his Cabinet, his private secretary, and other friends, down the Potomac to Fredericksburg, in Virginia, to witness the ceremony of laying the corner-stone of the monument to the memory of the mother of Washington. The boat stopped at Alexandria for a few moments, and while there a number of persons came on board, and among them Mr. Randolph, the late lieutenant in the navy, who had recently been dismissed from the service. He entered the cabin where the President was seated and engaged in reading a newspaper. He advanced toward the President as if to address him, and seemed to be in the act of drawing his glove. "The President," says the account in the Globe, "not knowing him, and supposing it was some person about to salute him, and seeing him at some difficulty in getting off his glove, stretched out his hand toward him saying, 'Never mind your glove, sir.' Randolph having then disengaged himself from his gloves, thrust one hand violently into the President's face, and before he could make use of the other received a blow from a gentleman standing near by him with an umbrella. Almost at the same time two other gentlemen in the cabin sprang upon him, and he was dragged back and thrown down."

"The moment he was assaulted the President seized his cane, which was lying near him on the table, and was forcing his way through the gentlemen who had crowded round Randolph, insisting that no man should stand between him and the villain who had insulted him; that he would chastise him himself. Randolph by this time had been borne toward the door of the cabin, and pushed through it to the deck. He made his way through the crowd on the deck and the wharf, being assisted, he is believed, by some ruffian confederates, and made his escape. He stopped for a few moments at a tavern in Alexandria, and passed on beyond the district line. The grand jury, then in session, in a few minutes found a presentment against him, and the court issued a bench warrant. A magistrate had just previously issued a warrant, but before that officer could arrest him he was gone."

An eye-witness, writing to the Richmond Enquirer, gives some additional particulars, as follows: "When the President said, 'Never mind your glove, sir,' Randolph said in a low tone that he came to 'take his revenge by pulling his nose,' suiting the action to the word. The President exclaimed in astonishment, 'What, sir! What, sir?' Randolph on the instant was struck by Mr. Potter with an umbrella a very severe blow, which knocked him against the berth. Captain Brown seized him and dragged him with violence from the President, and Major Donaldson rushed toward the table in his anxiety to protect the President. It was the work of an instant. The President exclaimed, seizing his stick, 'Let no man interfere between me and this personal assault; I am an old man, but perfectly capable of defending myself against, and punishing a dozen cowardly assassins.' It is said that a person named Thomas approached the President, and, tendering his hand, observed that if he would promise to pardon him he would murder the dastard. The President put by his hand, saying: 'No, sir; I do not wish the majesty of the laws insulted for me. I am capable of defending myself against insult.'"

"LOUD" BATHING-SUITS.

There are every season, at Cape May and Long Branch, women so attired for the water that if, in France, they ventured forth, they would receive the stern attention of the police. A correspondent of an Eastern paper recalls the appearance of a young married lady—a lady admitted to society in Philadelphia—as she came from her bath-room one noon, at Cape May. She had on the regulation stage tights, from her waist down, and the body of her dress fitted her as closely as the legs, while her head was adorned with a skull-cap of loud color and trimmings making her altogether an object to startle the most experienced roue. She left nothing whatever to the imagination. She was less clothed than was ever the Menken as Mazeppa; yet there was no blush upon her cheeks as she gave her naked arm to the man (not her husband), who went with her into the intimacy of the surf. This lady would have shuddered at the mere thought of raising her dress above her knees to cross Chestnut street, but she had no shame in going almost nude into the presence of hundreds of men, women and children, and doing her utmost by her manner and the arrangement of the little she did have on to advertise her boldness.

Five years ago the feminine arms, legs and busts, were as carefully kept from view at the seaside as they were in the cities, for we have not yet reached the strange conclusion that there is one standard of modesty for summer and another for winter. Indeed, ladies were more modest at the resorts. The city ball dress was always lavish in its revelation, while the bathing costume concealed everything and suggested nothing, and even at night for the hop there was not the recklessness of the town ball-dress. To-day nine women out of ten discard the old style bathing costume and don the new-fangled one, their legs in stockings or tights, and, occasionally, even without either of these, with no more concern than when, as babes on their mother's lap, they kicked about their plump limbs in infantile glee. Whatever of bashfulness still remains to them they leave on the shore, and in the water are ready for anything. They mount on men's shoulders and dive therefrom; they are ducked, and floated, and hugged by fellows of whom, not unfrequently, they know nothing at all, and to whom they are often introduced but ten minutes before.

ADVICE TO A YOUNG MAN.

The following quaint advice from the Burlington Hawkeye man has the "pith of truth" in it:

Remember, son, that the world is older than you are, by several years; that for thousands of years it has been so full of smarter and better young men than yourself that their feet stuck out of the dormer windows; that when they died, the old globe went whirling on, and not one man in ten million went to the funeral, or even heard of the death.

Be as smart as you can, of course. Know as much as you can, without blowing the packing out of your cylinder-heads; shed the light of your wisdom abroad in the world, but don't dazzle people with it, and imagine a thing is so simple because you say it is. Don't be too sorry for your father because he knows so much less than you do; remember the reply of Dr. Wayland to the student of Brown University who said it was an easy enough thing to make proverbs such as Solomon wrote. "Make a few," tersely said the old man. And we never heard that the young man made any. Not more than two or three, anyhow. The world has great need of young men, but no greater need than young men have for it. Your clothes fit you better than your father's fit him; they cost more money, they are more stylish, your moustache is neater, the cut of your hair is better, and you are prettier, O, far prettier than "pa." But, young man, the old gentleman gets the biggest salary, and his homely scrambling signature on the business end of a check will drain more money out of the bank in five minutes than you could get out with a ream of paper and a copper-plate signature in six months.

Young men are useful, and they are ornamental, and we all love them, and we couldn't engineer a picnic successfully without them. But they are no novelties, son. O, no, nothing of the kind. They have been here before. Do not be so modest as to shut yourself clear out; don't be so fresh or you will have to be put away to keep from spoiling. Don't be afraid that your merit will not be discovered. People all over the world are hunting for you, and if you're worth finding, they will find you. A diamond isn't so easily found as a quartz pebble, but some people search for it all the more intently.

HOW TO SMOKE A CIGAR.

An aged smoker asks us to set before our readers a few plain directions for cigar smoking which he says he learned in a quarter of a century of practice, and does believe the public generally are aware of. They are:—

First—Buy none but new cigars, the newer the better. Old cigars that are dry and brittle are avoided in those countries and among those people where smoking is second nature.

Second—Leave the ashes on your cigar until they fall off. A cigar not only burns straighter while the ashes remain but it lasts longer and tastes better. To keep knocking the ashes off is a misdemeanor.

Third—If your cigar goes out be sure to blow through it as soon as possible. You will see some dead smoke leave it. That would become stale and make your cigar stink if left in. A cigar that has been cleaned will taste good when relighted, otherwise you will stink up a place as big as the Grand Central Depot if you carry it in your clothes.

Fourth—You cannot tell whether a cigar is good or bad unless you light it properly, that is to say thoroughly. After you think you have lit it all around, do it again to make sure. There is no perceptible difference between a tenement house stinker and a dollar cigar if both are badly lighted.

WORDS OF WISDOM.

He that knows himself knows others.

The night is long that never finds a day.

A shot that hits is better than a broadside that misses.

Under our greatest troubles often lie our greatest treasures.

To live without a purpose is to lead a restless, unhappy life.

Should we condemn ourselves to ignorance to preserve hope?

We are ruined, not by what we really want, but by what we think we do.

Truth only smells sweet forever, and illusions, however innocent, are deadly as the canker worm.

He that will believe only what he can fully comprehend must have a very long head or a very short creed.

Chimneys are not swept until the fire is out. When the passions are extinguished man purifies his heart.

Much as we dislike to admit our defects, we find it better to know and guard against than have to ignore them.

Those who value themselves merely on their ancestry have been compared to potatoes, all that is good of them is under the ground.

Health, beauty, vigor, riches, and all the other things called goods, operate equally as evils to the vicious and unjust, as they do as benefits to the just.

Look not mournfully in the past; it comes not back again. Wisely improve the present; it is thine. Go forth to meet the shadowy future without fear and with a manly heart.

Captain John K. Brooker, of Second and Federal streets, Camden, has on exhibition at his saloon a curiosity that appears to be a veritable mermaid. It was caught on Friday off Brigantine Beach by Mr. J. F. Garrison, while trolling for blue fish. The features of the animal are horribly human, while the skin is like that of a baby. Its side fins terminate in fingers, while its body, although tapering to a fish's tail, seems to have the ribs and general form of humanity. It will be presented to the Camden Microscopical Society.

BEEN AWAY.

"Hello! Is that you?"
"Yes."
"Been away?"
"Yes."
"Been off on a vacation?"
"Yes."
"Feel better?"
"No."
"Gain any flesh?"
"No."
"Tent out?"
"No."
"Go fishing?"
"No."
"Did you sail or row?"
"No."
"Nice at the hotel?"
"No."
"Go in swimming?"
"No."
"What did you do?"
"Nothing."
"What did you go for?"
"I dunno."
"Were you out much?"
"Yes, out at night, out of sorts, out of pocket, out of my head, and at the 'outs' with everybody, until I dug out."

The sea-shore is a nice place when you are not there.

A liveryman thinks the great want of the day is young men with three arms. He vaguely says it would lessen the number of driving accidents.

A St. Louis man won't give up his seat in a horse car to a lady, but he's perfectly willing to hoist out the man next to him, to make room for the lady, if she's good looking.

Some of the girls of the period are parting their hair on one side. They do this because they do not wish to look like the soft young men who part their hair in the middle.

An old man-of-war sailor, who had lost a leg in the service of his country, became a retailer of peanuts. He said he was obliged to be a retailer because, having lost a leg, he could not be a whole sailor.

An Oil City man purchased a small hand bellows, took it home and told his wife he had concluded to blow his brains out, whereupon she replied that a smaller sized bellows would have answered the purpose better.

When a six dollars a week city clerk straddles his nose with a pair of eye glasses, spends a week's salary for a diamond pin, and goes out into the country to astonish the natives, he is doubtless surprised to find that he is not so much of a curiosity as a hand organ monkey in a calico overcoat.

A Philadelphia policeman has resigned because a Democratic Mayor was fair-minded enough to place four black officers on the force. The Chronicle-Herald, referring to the lone officer, says if he ever finds out blackberries are black, he'll probably suicide.

As was suspected from the start, the investigation to ascertain who slit the colored cadet's ears, has resulted in the verdict that Whittaker, the cadet, cut them himself. The farce of a trial has cost the U. S. Government a round sum, however. We doubt if $100,000 would cover expenses.

Mr. Stanley Muschamp, of Fourth and Linden streets, Camden, has just received from Green River, Wyoming Territory, a fossil fish about four inches long upon a white stone, which was found 8,000 feet above the level of the sea. Several scientists have examined it with great interest.

An exchange truthfully says: The "toy" pistol should be tabooed by parents, if not by the civil authorities; and, if its use cannot be abolished, the name should be. The fatal accident which occurred in Newark on Friday evening, when a little girl was accidentally shot by a boy with this instrument, is only one of many unfortunate results from the use of this terrible plaything.

A RELIC.

We were shown this morning by Sheriff Campbell, at his office, a very unique and interesting relic of by-gone days in the shape of a pair of home-made, iron-bound spectacles, made one hundred and eighty-six years ago, together with an iron box to receive them. A label pasted in this box states that they are the property of Mary Runyon, of Piscataway, and made by her grandfather (who was a blacksmith) in the year 1695. The glasses, if not the workmanship of the frame, which is large and cumbersome, will compare very favorably with those sold in these days. The spectacles were loaned to Sheriff Campbell by Mr. Robert Pierce, of Piscataway, and exhibited, in connection with other relics, at a fair and museum held in Metuchen some time ago for the benefit of the Mission Band connected with the Reformed Church of Metuchen.—New Brunswick Times.

A convention of the delegates from the State Organization of the Volunteer Relief Fund of the several Fire Departments of the State will be held in Burlington on the 4th Wednesday in September. The object of the organization is to look after and secure the two per cent. premium due from the Insurance Companies who do business in this State, which makes up, as the name indicates, a relief fund for disabled firemen. Mayor Bird W. Spencer, of Passaic, is the President of the Organization. It is the intention of the department in Burlington to entertain the delegates with a dinner at the City Hall, and to otherwise look after their comfort. The committee having in charge the programme of the day, is composed of Hon. John T. Dunn, of Union, Hon. John Kennell, of Passaic, and Chief Engineer Jeffries of Burlington.

The Philadelphia Times speaking of the enterprise started by capitalists in that city last spring for the preservation of fresh shad, estimates that 90,000 shad were preserved and stored away in the ware-rooms of the company on Delaware avenue. The shad were caught at Gloucester, brought alive to that city, and after being carefully washed, were packed in crushed ice, which by a patent process, was frozen around them. Each cake is forty-six inches long, sixteen inches wide and four inches thick and contains ten shad. The cakes were then packed in patent refrigerators with an average temperature of twenty degrees above zero, and there they remain until sold. The fresh shad season closed here on July 1, and it is only since then that the preserved shad have been offered for sale at the rate of $60 per hundred. Although the majority of these fish have been packed away over three months their scales are as bright, their eyes as full, their gills as full colored and their body as firm as the day they were taken from their native element. Prominent restaurant and hotel keepers who have introduced these preserved shad to their guests say the freezing process has no effect upon the delicious natural flavor of this popular fish.

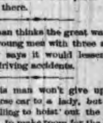
TERRIBLE ACCIDENT

Necessitating a Surgical Operation—Loving Mother Attempts to take Pair of Shears from Her Child.

PARENTS, BE CAREFUL.

Domestic accidents are common to women, and some of them are very serious. Mrs. Warner, of South Rondout, Ulster Co., N. Y., some weeks ago attempted to take from her child a pair of shears with which it was playing. A slight struggle ensued, in which the point of the shears entered Mrs. Warner's left eye, entirely destroying the sight. Her family physician did what he could, but intensely painful inflammation arose, which, by sympathy, threatened the loss of the other eye. Total blindness to a woman having the care of a household is an irretrievable calamity. In this trait Mrs. W. applied to the well-known and skillful Surgeon, Dr. David Kennedy, of Rondout, N. Y., who removed the injured eye by a very successful operation, setting aside all danger of further harm to the sight of the other eye. But, owing to pain and mental distress, her system needed a tonic and restorative medicine. To do this work the Doctor prescribed "Kennedy's Favorite Remedy," which sustained its reputation and laid a sure foundation of health.

Dr. Kennedy's "Favorite Remedy" removes all impurities from the blood, regulates the Liver and Kidneys, cures constipation, and all diseases and weaknesses peculiar to Females. It is for sale by all our druggists at ONE DOLLAR a bottle. ag5wd



DIRECTIONS.
For Catarrh, Hay Fever, Cold in the Head, &c., insert with little finger, a particle of the Balm into the nostrils; draw strong breaths through the nose. It will be absorbed, cleansing, and healing the diseased membrane.
For Deafness, apply a particle into the ear.

ELY'S CREAM BALM

Effectually cleanses the nasal passages of Catarrhal virus, causing healthy secretions, allays inflammation and irritation, protects the membranal linings of the head from additional colds, completely heals the sores and restores the sense of taste and smell. Beneficial results are realized by a few applications. A thorough treatment as directed will cure Catarrh. As a household remedy for cold in the head it is unequaled. The Balm is easy to use and agreeable. Sold by druggists at 50 cents. On receipt of 50 cents will mail a package. Send for circular with full information.
ELY'S CREAM BALM CO., Owego, N. Y.

"MERIT MUST REAP ITS JUST REWARD."
Of the many Catarrh and Hay Fever remedies we keep in stock there is none of which our customers speak more highly than of Ely's Cream Balm. A comparatively new discovery, but one which, from the many reports and evidences of cures produced, is destined to be a leading article. We have never handled a remedy which has increased as rapidly in sales or that has given such universal satisfaction. Price, 50 cents.

TUBULAR HOT-BLAST NON-EXPLOSIVE

Oil or Gas Stoves!

THE REASONS WHY THE TUBULAR HOT-BLAST OIL OR GAS STOVE IS SUPERIOR TO ALL OTHERS:

Its appearance is more like a stove than anything that has yet been offered.

It requires no wire gauze or water tank to make it safe.

A continual current of air passes to the burners over the Oil Pot, preventing the oil from getting warmer than the atmosphere in which it is burning. The bake oven is not in the way of the kettle or boiler.

Baking, roasting, and boiling can all be done at once, and in less time than with any other oil stove.

The No. 3 or Three-Burner Stove will make 12 inches of pure white flame at a cost of 1½ cts per hour. The reservoir holds four quarts of oil, sufficient to burn for twelve hours.

The No. 4 or 4-Burner Stove will make 16 inches of white flame at a cost of 2 cents per hour. The reservoir holds 5 quarts of oil sufficient to burn for twelve hours.

The No. 3 Stove will consume between three and four cents worth of gas per hour.

The No. 4 will consume between four and five cents worth of gas per hour.

No. 4, with four 4 inch burners, including oven, $10

LEGAL NOTICES.

IN Chancery of New Jersey.

To Washington E. Langley and Adelia Isabella Langley, his wife.

By virtue of an order of the Court of Chancery of New Jersey made on the day of the date hereof, in a cause wherein Abraham Runyon is complainant, and you and others are defendants, you are required to appear and plead, answer or demur to the bill of said complainant on or before the thirtieth day of August next, or the said bill will be taken as confessed against you.

The said bill is filed to foreclose a mortgage given by Washington E. Langley and Adelia Isabella Langley his wife, to said complainant on lands in the city of Plainfield, in Union County, New Jersey, dated April 16, 1866. And also to foreclose a certain mortgage given by Adelia Isabella Langley, and Washington E. Langley her husband, to said complainant, on the same lands, in the city, county and State aforesaid, dated September 8, 1874.

And you Washington E. Langley are made defendant because you own said lands, or some part thereof, or may claim an interest therein. And you Adelia Isabella Langley are made defendant because you are the wife of said Washington E. Langley, and may thereby claim an inchoate right of dower, or other interest in said mortgaged premises, and also because you may claim to own said premises by virtue of a quit claim deed made to you by one Bushrod F. Reed, dated March 12, 1880.

Dated June 28, 1881.

ADJOURNMENT OF SALE.

In the matter of the sale of lands and premises of Alexander Dunham, deceased, by William H. Shotwell, administrator, by virtue of an order of the Orphan's Court of the County of Union.

The above sale as to the first tract of land described in said order, stands adjourned to Monday the Fifth day of September, A. D. 1881, at two o'clock in the afternoon, on the premises.
Dated August 8, 1881.
WILLIAM H. SHOTWELL,
12au6w Administrator.

Surrogate's Order to Limit Creditors.

Union County, Surrogate's Office, August 1st, 1881.

John H. Van Winkle, Administrator of Jacob F. Randolph, deceased.

On application of the above-named Administrator it is ordered that said Administrator give Public Notice to the Creditors of the estate of the said decedent, to bring in their debts, demands or claims against the same, under oath, within nine months from this date, by setting up a copy of this order, within twenty days hereafter, in five of the most public places in the County of Union, for two months, and also within the said twenty days, by advertising the same in the CONSTITUTIONALIST for the same space of time; and if any Creditor shall neglect to exhibit his or her debt, demand or claim, within the said period of nine months, public notice being given as aforesaid, such Creditor shall be forever barred of his or her action therefor against the said Administrator.

NATURAL HISTORY.

THE OLD-WORLD SPARROW—1869.

BY WILLIAM C. BRYANT.

We hear the note of a stranger bird,
That ne'er till now in our land was heard;
A winged settler has taken his place
With Teutons and men of the Celtic race.
He has followed their path to our hemisphere—
The Old-World sparrow at last is here.

He meets not here, as beyond the main,
The fowler's snare and the poisoned grain;
But snug-built homes on the friendly tree;
And crumbs for his chirping family
Are strewn when the winter fields are drear;
For the Old-World sparrow is welcome here.

The insect legions that sting our fruit,
And strip the leaves from the growing shoot—
A swarming, skulking, ravenous tribe,
Which Harris and Flint so well describe,
But cannot destroy,—may quail with fear;
For the Old-World sparrow, their foe, is here.

The apricot, in the summer ray,
May ripen now on the loaded spray;
And the nectarine on the garden-walk,
Keep firm its hold on the parent stalk;
And the plum its fragrant fruitage rear;
For the Old-World sparrow, their friend, is here.

The pest of gardens—the little Turk
Who signs with the crescent his wicked work,
And causes the half-grown fruit to fall—
Shall be seized and swallowed, in spite of all
His sly devices of cunning and fear;
For the Old-World sparrow, his foe, is here.

And the army-worm and the Hessian fly
And the dreaded canker-worm shall die;
And the thrip and slug and fruit-moth seek
In vain to escape that busy beak;
And fairer harvests shall crown the year;
For the Old-World sparrow at last is here.

THE OLD WORLD NUISANCE.—1881.

AFTER BRYANT—TWENTY YEARS AFTER.

We've listened long to this stranger's note
And watched it spreading to places remote,
Till the turbulent vagabond has taken the place
Of our valuable song-birds, and driven the race
From our cities and towns by eating the food
Provided by Nature for nobler brood.
He has come to our shores with the murderous gang
Of Nihilists, who emigrated sooner than hang;
Paupers and regicides, red in the hand,
Which Europe continually sends to our land.
Vagabonds feathered, clothed, white and black,
Good Dame Europe please beckon them back.
The insect army keeps stinging our fruit,
We have still to fight them and the sparrows to boot;
The quarrelsome, noisy, too sociable thugs,
They eat up our fruit and never touch bugs.
A glance at their bill shows ever so plain
That their food is not insects but fruits and good grain.
The Poet may sing in the sparrow's praise,
But our great ornithologist, Dr. Coues, says,
In language of truth and in very plain prose,
That the sparrow's a nuisance, and the sooner he goes
The better we're off, so to me it's quite clear
That the Old-World sparrow is not needed here.
He defiles our porches, there's no denying that;
He has ruined my wife's dress and spoiled my best hat,
He hangs round the bird cage to pilfer the seed,
And gives the canary a foul insect breed.
He never eats worms, let us tell it abroad,
This Old World sparrow is a terrible fraud.
American freedom has been much abused;
A home for the homeless we've never refused,
And the poor honest man can here cast his lot,
Bring his wife and his babes, and build him a cot;
But our long suffering people some morning will see,
Communists and sparrows thrown into the sea.

FRED MATHER.

MISCELLANEOUS READING.

A RIBBON.

It was a simple thing to do so much harm—a strip of rose-pink silk—and certainly harmless in itself. But it caused Launce Lisle the worst heart-ache of his life. I will tell you about it.

Virginia Payne, of Granby, never flirted. That was a fact patent among her admirers. Handsome she was, witty and charming, beyond compare; but never had folly enough to think that the warmest smile that ever parted her red lips meant more than would read in an open book. If Virginia would write between the lines, she had never done so, though she was one-and-twenty.

For three months she had been mistress of Granby, a magnificent old family inheritance. The great mansion of pale gray-stone, set among lawns and gardens, beautiful beyond compare, was her very own, and her home, and it had been the home and possession of all her line for over 100 years. From father to son, and finally from father to daughter, Granby had come to her. And there she dwelt with her guardian, Mr. Israel, her Aunt Content and a goodly train of servants. The heiress of Granby, being who she was and what she was, was toasted far and near, and naturally would become a prey to fortune-hunters, but for one clause of her father's will. It had been the one prayer of his life, and it was his dying request, carefully worded upon prayer, that Virginia, then a child of nine years, should marry Launcelot Lisle. He was his stepson, already a young man of character and weight. But he had never lived at Granby, and when Virginia, at sixteen, met him, she could remember to have seen him before.

It was on the day of her father's funeral. Her stepsister had been dead several years, and but for the sister of her own mother, Aunt Content, she was quite alone. Launce had almost immediately gone back to London, but he had come to her, shivering in her black robes, under all the excitement, and said gently, that he feared she would be very lonesome—that he wished he could remain in Granby—that he might be of some service to her, etc.; but briefly he was gone, and she had returned to school.

At eighteen she was at Granby again, and, with her guardian's approval and personal oversight, saw much company. It was better she should see something of the world before choosing a husband, he said; and so, people argued she was not engaged to Launce Lisle, though Virginia said freely that she was so, unless Mr. Lisle preferred otherwise since her father had wished it. Whatever the truth might be, the fact seemed to make fortune-hunters at least frequent. But one fact, as I have said, was patent—Miss Payne never flirted. Many argued the proof of her engagement from this; others instinctively read another cause in a certain vestal purity of the girl's countenance when in utter repose.

In the play of conversation it was charmingly vivacious and fascinating. Her crimson lips and soft black eyes, the white temples and radiant color, helped make up a face which, when fully seen, could never be forgotten. Certainly Launce Lisle thought so, coming upon it suddenly for another brief week of his life, on a hurried business trip to New York.

It was just after Virginia became legally mistress of Granby. She was spending the winter in the City.

"I say, Launce," said Peyton Lesley, "you will see your betrothed to-night. She is to be at Madam Hyacinth's."

Launce made no reply, but when he was alone with his sister, a very sweet woman, whom he dearly loved, he asked:

"Do you know Virginia Payne, Prue?" Mrs. Roberts replied that she did.

"Do you like her?"

"Yes," said Mrs. Roberts, with decision.

That was enough. Launce said no more. But at supper Virginia's name was again mentioned. He heard then that she never flirted.

He was conscious of dressing with unusual care for the evening's entertainment. Before he left the house he took from a trunk a photograph sent him by Virginia's father, some twelve years previously. It represented a slight child of eight, with soft, dark eyes, and a wealth of dark, curling hair. He had the pale child's image dimly in his mind, confused by the memory of the same at sixteen—a timid girl, trembling in her black dress—when, an hour later, he came face to face with Virginia, in her flush of youthful loveliness.

Mr. Israel, upon whose arm she leaned, welcomed him warmly.

"We are going back to Granby to-morrow. Come soon and visit us," he said.

Launce did not know what words he used in accepting this invitation—the petite figure in white and gold confused him so; but he had arrived late, and Virginia and guardian were already going, and that was the end of the conversation. He mused over it, thinking that the lady was simply polite, and seemed indifferent simply because she was not so. At sight of the frank, steel-blue eyes, the firm, white brows shadowed by rings of fair hair, the finely chiseled mouth—all of which she remembered perfectly—her heart gave a traitorous leap and threatened so alarmingly to go over to the stranger that she swiftly summoned all her native caution. He did not love her, probably—perhaps never would; and she was very proud. Even her father's wish must be set aside before her rights as a woman to be preferred solely for herself.

But Launce went to Granby. I hardly know of anything on earth that would have kept him from going. Virginia had reigned mistress there only since the previous autumn, but her taste for what was artistic and beautiful had given the interior of the great mansion a striking charm. Lovely pictures leaned from the walls; graceful figures in bronze and marble graced shelves and niches; floors had been relaid in polished wood, and covered with rich skins and foreign rugs. And over this beautiful home reigned a presence the most beautiful he had ever seen, Launce thought. He talked and rode and drove with Virginia, and she was sweet and gentle. But others talked and rode, and drove with her—sons and brothers of her neighbors whom she had known all her life—and she was sweet and gentle with them. There was Allen Stuart, Godfrey Grey and the Rase brothers—Launce could not see a bit of difference between her treatment of them and of himself. He pondered the matter at night, on a sleepless pillow, the moon looking at him through the silken curtains of the windows, that week at Granby. But Launce was a thoroughly manly fellow, and had courage to dare his fate. He did not admire Virginia Payne one whit the less because of the reserve which so baffled him.

One day when they were out riding with a party of four others, he proposed making a cross cut through the woods to find a whip which he had lost there the day previous, and asked Virginia to accompany him.

"We will meet the others at the turnpike crossing," he said.

Virginia turned her horse's head readily, all unsuspicious; but, when they were hid among the balsamic fire she suddenly became aware of her companion's manner. A sudden bloom showed in her cheeks; she began herself the search for the whip.

"I do not care a picayune for the whip. I came this way, Virginia, that I might be alone with you for a moment."

This did not tend to make the soft cheeks any less vivid, but Launce did not notice.

"I want to tell you something," he went on, steadily, "which you have heard from other men, I dare say, but it is nevertheless true from me. I have never in my life seen a woman who suits me as you do, Virginia; and it is not because of what your father wished and planned for us, but because of yourself. But while you are beautiful and attractive, there is nothing wonderful about me; and though I don't know why you should marry me I wish you would. Not because of your father's wish, either."

He had taken her hand, stopped the horses, and was looking into her face, with its downcast eyes and tremulous lips.

"Could you love me, Virginia?"

A dimple stirred the soft cheek.

"Perhaps."

She never knew what startled her horse at that moment, but he shied at some object in the wood, nearly unseating her, and then flew like the wind down the path. Launce followed anxiously, but she had met the others of the party before he overtook her. There was no chance to see her alone again that day, and the next he had set for his departure. But she had confessed nothing, promised nothing, and he was, perhaps, less at ease than before his declaration.

There was company to entertain that day—among the number Tom Arlington. Launce had often heard him spoken of and did not wonder. He was a singularly handsome man, with a brilliant complexion, disheveled hair, curling silken beard, a blase air, and the tout ensemble of an artist. Launce looked critically at the rose-and-gold of Tom Arlington's make-up, and did not like him. This before he observed that his attentions to Virginia during the evening were very marked. She talked to him, played for him, sang with him. Poor Virginia! So near to being perfectly happy that she dared not contemplate it, she seized upon the first pretext for concealing her emotion. And that pretext, unfortunately was Tom Arlington.

"Alas! how easy the world goes wrong!
A kiss too much for a sigh too long,
And there follows a mist and a weeping rain,
And life is never the same again."

Launce remembered that Virginia "did not flirt," and though he struggled manfully against it, his heart sank like lead before the evening was through. So young, so sensitive, so susceptible to beauty and grace in others, was it likely that he would win her? No, no! he told himself, bitterly. He knew how, alone and unaided, he had battled with the stern realities of life, how he had conquered the temptations of early youth, and worked, out of the hardest and most adverse circumstances, a pure and noble life; but what did that go for with this charming and petted girl, who had ever laid among the roses and fed on the lilies of life? She was as likely—aye, far more likely—to be pleased with the artist, Tom Arlington!

He rose early from the night's troubled sleep, and went down into the garden of Granby. The great golden day lilies were in bloom, and the trees veiled with young green. Suddenly, on a rustic seat upon the terrace, he saw Tom Arlington. He was directly in his path, he could not avoid him without turning directly back, and so he walked on and saw what Tom had in his hand—a ribbon of pink silk with a rose worked in silver thread upon one end. Now it chanced that Launce knew the ribbon very well. He had marked it knotted among the lace at Virginia's throat, and at sight of it his heart seemed suddenly to stop beating in his bosom. Desperation made him quick-witted and unsparing of himself.

"You have found a ribbon of Miss Payne's?" he asserted, with fine carelessness.

"No," said Tom, laying it gently between the leaves of a book upon his knee. "She gave it to me."

Launce recollected again that Virginia "never flirted." He made no further effort to see her alone, but the next day departed from Granby.

Virginia never guessed all this, but before Launce's very wretched summer had passed she began to wonder that she did not hear from or see him again. He had gone back to England, but she knew that he was to return to America in September at least. She could not but think it natural that he should write to her all this time. But Launce was far from dreaming of such a thing. He was trying with all his might to forget her; he succeeded so ill, that at last he determined to visit Granby once more, and behold her betrothed, if not married, to Tom Arlington. He left his horse at the gate with a servant, and came quietly on foot up the avenue. The red leaves of the maples covering the ground made his step soundless. Suddenly, among the trees, he saw a gray dress, and a man's elegant lounging figure. The latter leaned with a down cast and sullen face, against the trunk of a tree, his countenance and attitude in strong contrast to his costly dress and air of a pleasure-seeker. The man was Tom Arlington, and the lady Virginia in the act of turning toward the house.

"No," she said, clearly, "you cannot accompany me any farther, I have taken advantage of this meeting to ask you to be relieved henceforth of your company, Mr. Arlington. In displaying the ribbon I simply and unsuspiciously gave you as a book-mark—displaying it as a token from me—you have acted a falsehood which will never profit you."

He muttered something.

"Forgive you? No! But I will certainly do my best to forget you." she answered and hurried away.

There were tears upon her cheek when Launce overtook her, but her blush of delight burned them away, and she gave him her hand.

"Virginia," he said, "I am here to repeat what I told you once. Will you say 'perhaps' again?"

"No," she answered, with a deeper dimple and a brighter flush; "Now I will say 'certain.'"

THE DARK SIDE.

Life has a dark side and a bright side. Happy is the man who can and does make choice of the latter. Men generally have more or less to do with the dark side before their mortal career terminates. Darkness is never so black as when contrasted with light, or light so bright as when contrasted with darkness. We wish now to notice some dark pictures, and then the corresponding bright ones. We will yield to fancy and let her paint the pictures as she may. A vast army is marshaling its forces in our land. The soldiers have donned their regimentals. They are ready for the gutter and the mire. Their faces wear the red and fiery glare of demons. They are waging a war against their own persons. Lunatics could not surpass them in this respect. But they extend the war still farther, cruelly carrying it on against poor helpless women and children. Even devils could not surpass them in their diabolical schemes. A fiery liquid is the only visible weapon, which is fast burning out their vitality. The slain amount to seventy thousand persons every year. But the trouble ends not here; in the veins of the children blood courses on its way that is highly impregnated with the pernicious seeds that were sown by its parents.

Taking a boat at the head waters of almost any one of our many navigable rivers and passing down it, we soon see what appears to be a large and extensive grain depot. It has a wonderful tendency to draw the farmers of the neighboring districts. Over hill and dale and from far and near they come, deep freighted with the bounty of Heaven. It is not a mill where men are wont to bring their grain. Neither is it a shipping house. Perhaps they are storing it here to feed the hungry, or it may be for sale to clothe the naked. Happy thought—but oh, dread reality! It is distilled into a liquid which is spreading terror and desolation over the land—a substance which is but fuel for the flame that is devouring the nation. This fountain from which issue bitter waters is the feeders of two other institutions. They are the penitentiary and the asylum.

It is midnight's lonely hour. In a wretched hovel a poor, careworn woman has not yet finished the labors of the day. He who promised to love, cherish and protect her has not yet returned from the drunken revels of the bar-room. The storm is raging without. The blood begins to chill. The children cry with cold. No fire! no clothes! But finally morning dawns; the sun comes out to warm the chilly earth. Silence reigns in the hovel. The drunkard enters. Tread lightly, villain! You are in the death chamber. The death angel has passed along, and left as trophies three cold and lifeless forms.

A youth of brilliant intellect goes forth from college with the highest honors college can confer. He is ambitious and lusts for public honors. He applies his talents to master the intricacies of law. He is admitted to practice at the bar. He makes a shining mark. His first efforts cause men to say that he will one day stand at the head of the legal profession. He is selected on an important case, the issue of which is life or death to a fellow being. To fortify himself for the contest, he takes the fatal draught. It flies to his brain, clouds and stupefies his mind. He is confounded and utterly fails. To cover up his grief he drinks, and becomes a constant participant of the bowl. Thus one who might have added another star to glitter in the constellation of genius goes down to fill a drunkard's grave.

"Parting is such sweet sorrow," remarked a bald old bachelor to a pretty girl as he told her good-night. "I should smile," she replied, glancing up towards his hairlessness and wondering how he ever did it.

When a man knows that a certain fence is the favorite roost of a number of men in the evening, he may be justified in sailing out and putting a fresh coat of paint on it. But we could never reconcile our conscience to such an act. There's too much work in it.

A Leadville man in one week, was attacked and scratched by a catamount, hurt by an explosion, had a boulder roll down on him and stave in two ribs, and was kicked by a mule. And a local editor remarked that he had "been somewhat annoyed by circumstances lately."

THE STUDY OF HUSBANDS.

A LESSON FOR WIVES TO LEARN IN REGARD TO THE STERN SEX.

We hear much about the art of winning a husband. Let us take a step further, says an exchange, and make a study out of keeping a husband. If he is worth winning he is worth keeping.

This is a wicked world, and man is dreadfully mortal. Let us take him just as he is, not as he ought to be. In the first place, he is very weak. The wife must spend the first two years in discovering all these weaknesses, count them on her fingers, and learn them by heart. The fingers of both hands will not be too many. Then let her study up these weaknesses, with a mesh for every one, and the secret is there. Is he fond of a good dinner? Let her tighten the mesh around him with fragrant coffee, light bread and good things generally, and reach is heart through his stomach. Is he fond of flattery about his looks? Let her study the dictionary for sweet words if her supply gives out. Does he like to hear her talk about his brilliant intellect? Let her pore over the encyclopedia to give variety to the depths of her admiration.

Flattery is a good thing to study up at all hazards in its delicate shades, but it must be skillfully done. The harpy who may try to coax him away will not do it absurdly. Is he fond of beauty? Here's the rub—let her be bright and tidy; that is half the victory. Next, let her bang her hair metaphorically and keep up with the times. A husband who sees his wife look like other people is not going to consider her "broken down." Though it is a common sneer that a woman has admitted that her sex consider more, in marrying, the tastes of her friends than her own, yet it must be considered ludicrous that a man looks at his wife with the same eyes that other people do. Is he fond of literary matters? Listen to him with wide open eyes when he talks of them. A man doesn't so much care for a literary wife if only she will be literary enough to appreciate him. If she have literary inclinations let her keep them to herself. Men love to be big and great to their wives. That's the reason why a helpless little woman can marry three times to a sensible, self-reliant little woman's none. Cultivate helplessness. Is he curious? Oh, then you have a treasure; you can always keep him if you have a secret, and only keep it carefully. Is he jealous? Then, woman, this is not for you; cease reading; cease torturing that fretted heart which wants you for his own, and teach him confidence. Is he ugly in his temper, and fault-finding? Give him a dose of his own medicine, skillfully done. Is he deceitful? Pity him for his weakness, treat him as one who is born with a physical defect, but put your wits to work. It is a bad case.

WIT AND WISDOM

Generosity is a good trait; but no man is justified in "giving himself away."

He who can plant courage in a human soul is the best physician.

Said the general to the major, "What is your rank sir?" and the major replied, "I am a major, General."

Advice to owners of cats. This is the proper season of the year to plant kittens at the roots of grape vines.

It is the fellow who lends his umbrella to a couple of girls while he walks behind them in the rain that gets a ducking.

The reason that an undertaker is rarely a melancholy man is because he can always bury himself in his business.

Flowers sweeten the air, rejoice the eye, link us with nature and innocence, and are something to love.

We have often seen the article in our old text books about musical mice, but our neighbor surprises us by announcing that he has a mew-sical cat.

"I'm mashed on you," remarked the mosquito to the young lady, as she slapped it.—Omaha Bee. Then why did it stinger?

Good nature is of daily use; but courage is at best but a kind of holiday virtue, to be seldom exercised, and never but in cases of necessity.

The young man whose girl is a clerk in a perfumery store was somewhat indignant when she dunned him because he oder a few scents for cologne.

A Bible and a newspaper in every house, a good school in every district—all studied and appreciated as they merit—are the principal support of virtue, moral and civil liberty.

"Are you going to the ocean?" "No, I am not going to the ocean; I detest the motion; but my sister has a notion of going to the ocean, by way of Goshen."

We saw in an exchange the statement that Dr. Mallett was a manufacturer of screw-drivers. If this is a lie will some one please nail it.

"Such an infernal set of cheats I never saw before!" That's what the ward politician said of the opposition. "We voted twice apiece all around, but they voted as many as five times each, and such confounded corruption as that was too much for me. I bolted the caucus."

HOPE FOR THE PRESIDENT.

Since our issue of last week, the President has approached the valley of the shadow of death, and on Saturday his life was despaired of by the attending physicians and consulting surgeons. A welcome rally, however, succeeded the low state of the patient's case, and to-day Mr. Garfield is thought to be improving inasmuch as he is "holding his own." It is to be hoped that Saturday will not bring its usual relapse, for if that period is passed with no additional drawback, some foundation for expected recovery will be furnished. Meanwhile the harrowing uncertainty regarding the fate of the Nation's head, continues, and many will feel that the President's recovery cannot be assured so long as incision after incision is necessarily made to relieve arising disorders.

SENSIBLE.

Governor Bagley, of Michigan, recently deceased, in caring by will for his minor children made this provision—"That they shall be educated in this country and not abroad, as it is my desire that they may grow up to be sincere Americans and lovers of their native land and her institutions."

We like that, as it manifests the spirit of true patriotism.

Educate the children of America to be thorough Americans.

That is what our country needs. Robust Americanism. No foreign flunkyism.

Educate them to know what Freedom is, what it cost, and its priceless value, both present and prospective.

DOUBLE EVIL.

The present degraded system of conferring official appointments upon low-toned politicians, solely because of their extreme partisanship, and utterly neglectful of moral character and practical ability, is unquestionably the source of great public injury and discredit.

Reform is certainly needed in that direction and it cannot be applied too vigorously.

But there exists another political evil, quite as disreputable, and that is the corrupt use of money in nominating and electing to office. Such iniquitous practice has been permitted to grow and expand, until now the question is unblushingly asked by political traders regarding almost every proposed candidate for important position—"Has he money to spend and will he disburse it freely for electioneering purposes?"

It is a lamentable and dangerous fact that money has become to a vast extent, the corrupting and controlling power over suffrage.

Lamentable, for the reason that free representation is thereby made a farce, and dangerous, because, if not checked, the day speedily approaches when profligate wealth will rule the land to the entire exclusion of personal worth.

It is an abomination, and the people, against whose best interests venality of every kind is ever at war, should, ere it be too late, exert their might and trample it out of existence.

THE FALL ELECTIONS.

The approaching Fall election is a most important one to both political parties of the State. On its results will depend the selection of a United States Senator, a most important affair in the present stage of affairs at Washington. The State of New Jersey is rightfully Democratic, and yet the Republicans at present hold possession of the Legislature which chooses the U. S. Senator. For the Democrats to again send a representative to Washington, they must make several gains in Senators, of which there are eight to elect, one in Camden, Essex, Gloucester, Monmouth, Salem, Somerset, Union and Warren. Of the Senators whose places are to be filled, seven are Republican and one Democrat. The Senators holding over are—Republicans eight, Democrats five. All the counties in which Senators are to be elected are now represented by Republicans excepting Monmouth, and that by an Independent Democrat. Somerset, Warren, and Monmouth are reasonably sure to return Democrats. Union county, as a rule, gives a Democratic majority for State and Congressional officers. Why not for a Senator? The main thing necessary is select a good man for the candidacy. There is plenty of good, sound timber in the party to pick from. A number of names are already spoken of in connection with the nomination, any of whom would ably represent their constituents and people of the county in the official capacity of Senator.

A member of Assembly is also to be elected, but the Republicans last winter so gerrymandered the Third District that there is not a bare possibility of capturing it, which would be a gain.

Another important office to be filled is that of Sheriff, now held by a Republican. It is reasonable to suppose that the next Sheriff of the county will be a Democrat. Whom it will be depends upon the selection made in the Convention. Of one thing it is well for the Democrats to beware of. To carry their Senator the opposition will offer to barter and exchange votes to gain that point. In this particular the Republicans are very wily, and no Democrat should allow himself to be approached on such a subject. The stake is too great to allow of a vote being lost for State Senator.

We can elect our Senator and Sheriff this Fall, if the nominating Convention will but do its duty to the Democracy by placing in the field good candidates. There is no discord in the ranks of the Democratic party of Union. Pull together then, and the prize is ours.

An Arkansas woman has given birth to a brainless child and there is some talk of running it for Congress on the Greenback ticket.—Jersey City Herald.

We mentioned last week the discovery of a $50,000 defalcation at Washington. It appears that our figures were far below the real amount stolen. How many more operators of the same stripe remain in office?

The last Republican Legislature of Ohio promised the Temperance people everything and gave them nothing. Now the chickens are coming home to roost and the fluttering of their wings frightens Governor Foster badly.

The authorities of Paris have named the thoroughfare on which the American Minister resides the Place des Etats Unis, or United States street. A very pretty compliment. Long live the Republic of France.

LAW OR NO LAW.

Under the above heading, the Trenton True American contains the following editorial remarks on an extract from an exchange, which certainly applies to this city. The remarks are pertinent and to the point:

"It has heretofore been supposed that New Jersey was a State in which laws amount to something; but it would appear from the following article from the Newark Daily Advertiser, that it is to become, if it has not already, 'a land where the laws are trampled upon.' It says:

'We may legislate as we will against the pollution of the streams by manufactories along its banks, but such nuisances are a part of an increasing population and an advancing civilization. There will be failures along all the tributary streams and an occasional indictment for nuisance never brings a permanent betterment. It is scarcely in the power of the State to put a stop to all manufactures which drain off uncleanly into the water of the Passaic valley, but all the legislation in the world cannot stop the rate that the Passaic will be muddy in Spring freshets, loaded at all times with the sewage of a large population, which unhappily finds its way to the river bed, subject always to the vegetable growth of the great swamp, and full of the jungle plant and animal growths in the season of germination.'

If this is to be the outcome of the laws passed by our legislature against the pollution of rivers and streams in our State, the sooner the laws are repealed the better. There is nothing more demoralizing to a people, as well as more deluding, than laws that are defied openly and with impunity.

If the pollution of rivers and streams whose waters whole communities drink and whose exhalations they breathe, is 'a part of advancing civilization,' then the laws forbidding it are obstructions to civilization, there is an antagonism between civilization and the public health, and the people must choose between health and an advancing civilization.' If they think the latter more important than the former, then let all laws against water pollution be repealed, and let the filth pour into the rivers and streams everywhere to the advancement and glory of civilization!

And don't let there be any unjust discrimination in the matter. Don't have some little manufacturing concern, with little money and small influence, or some poor man who happens to create a nuisance, be indicted and punished, while great and wealthy concerns are overlooked. Put it all down as 'a part of advancing civilization,' and let Grand Juries, sworn to present all violations of law, come into Court, and in the place of indictments, make presentment that they have disregarded their oaths and indicted nobody for polluting rivers and streams because they owed a higher duty to 'advancing civilization,' than to the law and their oaths. It's a grand idea for a law abiding community!"

GUITEAU, THE ASSASSIN.

The rumors of an organized design to lynch the assassin Guiteau appear to have led to extraordinary precautions by the authorities to prevent it. A Washington despatch says:

GUARDING THE ASSASSIN.

If there are any persons foolish enough to believe that they can capture Guiteau from the United States authorities, they had better abandon such nonsense. The most thorough arrangements have been made by the authorities to defeat all attempts of this kind, no matter what may be the numerical strength of those who may engage in them. The defence of the jail where Guiteau is confined has been assigned to the military, and a sufficient force is now here to defeat any unlawful movement. Two companies of United States troops are stationed at the jail, one of which is inside, while the other is performing duty on the outside, with pickets thrown out some distance from the buildings, so as to give timely notice of the approach of any considerable number of persons. All the approaches to the jail are under the strictest surveillance, and the regular jail guard have been armed with sixteen shooting rifles. The garrison of Washington was further strengthened to-day by the arrival of four batteries of artillery from Fortress Monroe. Any attack on the jail would result in certain disaster to the attacking party. The authorities are fully determined that the National Capital shall not be disgraced by the action of a mob.

In New Hampshire all church property valued at over $10,000 is taxed.

General Hancock has won golden opinions from all quarters by his considerate, high-minded delicacy and patriotism.

The question in New York is no longer—"Will saltpetre explode," but, "is glucose a healthy component of lager beer."

Dr. Tanner has been outdone by Maggie Campbell, a girl of fifteen, at Oakland, Cal., who lived fifty days without food. She had ulceration of the stomach, which made it impossible to take food.

In the British House of Lords there are about thirty peers who number in age eighty years or more. The "Father" of the House is the Irish Earl of Mount-Cashel, aged eighty-nine.

The Somerset Board of Freeholders has resolved to levy this year a tax of $60,000, which is an increase of $15,000 over last year—$10,000 to be set aside to pay principal on county debt.

Should Mr. Garfield die, people will not think any the less of Dr. Hammond for having said he could not live six six weeks ago. In fact, the doctor would be the Vennor of his profession.

M. Edmond de Lafayette, the only surviving son of the great General, will be unable to attend the Yorktown celebration. He is a pronounced French Republican and an ardent admirer of the United States.

Some fifty editors in Nebraska have announced simultaneously their intention of suspending the issue of their papers for two weeks "owing to the intense heat." The heat was that of a fire which burned the office in Omaha where their insides were printed.

The most practicable measure for securing reform in the civil service is a bill framed and presented by Senator Pendleton, of Ohio. It is in every way calculated to advance the public welfare, but will probably be defeated, for the untenable reason that its author is a Democratic statesman.

The Mrs. Garfield Fund has reached $156,737.65, and all except $5,000 has been paid in to the United States Trust Co., which has purchased with the fund $125,000 of United States four per cent. registered bonds, on which the interest is $5,000 per annum. There is still a cash balance with the company of $6,476.40.

A man may be poor as to worldly possessions, yet rich in mental and moral acquirements. To thrust such aside from political position and preferment in order to gratify the mercenary demands of money, is at variance with the vital principles of our system of government, to preserve which in original strength and purity remains a foremost duty of good citizenship.

The New Brunswick Times, in speaking of the probable Democratic candidates for Sheriff of Middlesex county in the approaching political contest this Fall, mentions favorably the name of Mr. Manning Freeman, ex-member of Assembly from Raritan township. If Mr. M. should consent to allow his name to be used in connection with, the above office we doubt if a stronger candidate could be found. He will, of course, receive the re-nomination for Assembly, otherwise. His record, last winter, was a clear one.

COMPLETE CENSUS RETURNS.

We have, from time to time, published reports from the Census Bureau, giving the amount of population of cities and towns in Union and other Counties. We are this week enabled to give the official figures in full of each city and town in Union and Somerset Counties, as sent to us from the census office, and numbered Bulletins, No. 233 and 234.

GLEANINGS.

Dr. Boynton says it's no such thing about Mrs. Garfield.

Fourteen thousand men are at work on the Michigan Central Railroad.

The city of Aurora, Ill., has $140,000 in its treasury, which it does not know what to do with.

Whittaker, the colored cadet, wants to exhibit his ears on the lecture platform for $3,000 a season.

Ex-Congressman Martin F. Conway, of Kansas, who shot Senator Pomeroy, has been released from an asylum for the insane.

President Garfield's sons, Harry and James, have completed their preparatory course and will enter Williams College next month.

Herr Krupp, the great German gun-maker, is so much pressed with orders that he has engaged 8,000 more workmen, making the total force of workmen 13,000.

A peculiarity of the lynching of Chas' Stewart, a Mississippi wife murderer, was that his father-in-law prayed for him and helped to adjust the noose.

A St. Louis belle is said to have won $1,100 recently at the Saratoga races. She will probably buy a pair of shoes with the money.—Item in wicked Chicago paper.

Johnny Skae, of San Francisco, was once worth $10,000,000. One night last week he was committed to jail in San Francisco in default of the payment of $5 fine for drunkenness.

There is a weekly sale in Paris of toads, which are brought in casks filled with damp moss. One hundred good toads are worth from $15 to $17. These are bought for gardens.

It is reported that Jay Gould controls 52,000 miles of railroad, or over half the mileage of the United States. Whether this be true or not, he undoubtedly owns more miles than any other man in the world.

The colored citizens are unfortunate in their representatives. Lieutenant Flipper, a colored graduate of West Point, being charged with the embezzlement of Government funds. Black stealing, however, is not a mite worse than white.

To be a Member of Parliament in England necessitates the ownership of large wealth. It will be a fatal event for freedom in America should such a legislative qualification here become established. It behooves the people to watch and repulse every insidious foe.

Rail Road Companies were incorporated for the purpose of doing a legitimate business and earning fair profits from the transportation of passengers and freight between certain designated points. That was and is the only lawful object of their organization, and kept within its bounds, both stockholders and the public may be benefited, but not otherwise.

A lady died at Long Branch the other day from blood-poisoning, caused by the excessive use of a patent medicine taken for the purpose of reducing corpulence. The doctor certified the cause of death to be erysipelas, which looks less honest than the recent verdict of a coroner's jury in Georgia, which declared that a case of sudden death there was the result of "an overdose of bacon and greens."

Government officers are finding much fault about the large number of mutilated and defaced coins that are continually coming under their observation, and the public generally is warned against receiving coins made light in that manner. This punching and "sweating" of coins is pursued by some swindlers as a business, and to insure themselves against loss, the people should reject all coins thus mutilated.

Whenever you hear a Republican politician say "I hope you Democrats will not nominate so-and-so, because he is the strongest man you can put up," you may set that Republican down as a snake in the grass. His hope is that the honeyed words he speaks will carry weight and be taken as his real sentiments. It is a safe maxim in war and politics to go just contrary to the advice and wishes of your opponents.

General Hancock had some curious callers at Portland when several hundred citizens paid him their respects. An old gentleman, probably 70 years of age, one of the old Jackson Democrats, worked his way through the crowd, and grasped the General tremblingly by the hand, and shook it vigorously for a long time. Then he pulled off his hat, drew Hancock down to a level with himself, and whispered something in his ear. The General, meanwhile, took off his hat and bowed gravely. After repeating the whisperings three times the old veteran shook hands again, and moved away with a smile of satisfaction.

LOCAL ANNEL.

Who will be so foolish as to miss going on the Gazelle excursion.

What caused the fire last Saturday morning.

When the "new County" will be formed including North Plainfield and making this city the "County Seat."

Which is the bigger liar, a liver-pad peddler or a circus bill.

Whether Stelle's Grove will hold the A. O. H. "picknickers."

Why ministers can leave their pulpits and take long vacations without objection, while editors are blamed if they leave town for a day and omit to "puff" a subscriber's fence that is being repainted.

When the Franklin square residents are to have the protection a fire well grants.

When all the fools will die, as some of them have again predicted the destruction of this mundane sphere in a month or so.

Who will be the next Senator, Assemblyman and Sheriff of Union county.

How many Democrats will sit in the next Council as members of that body.

If you are making necessary arrangements to attend the approaching Fair in Plainfield, which commences Sept. 26th.

Why some people fail to sign their names to articles sent to the editor to be published.

If they know that all anonymous communications are deposited into the waste basket.

Why a boy will go five miles to "hook" a watermelon from a mean man, when he can buy one for a few cents.

Whether you are a subscriber to THE CONSTITUTIONALIST or have borrowed it from your neighbor.

When the Muhlenberg Hospital will be thrown open to the public.

Whether the firemen of Plainfield will "parade" this Fall.

When the Somerset Gazette will strike another hornet's nest.

When the sale of toy pistols will be prohibited.

When the girls will commence wearing "tilter" hoop skirts.

If the teachers and children are glad that vacation is near over.

Who that serenade was intended for one night last week.

Why it is that no mad dogs bother Plainfield. (No Pound or muzzle?)

When our City Fathers will "give us light"—from the Street lamps.

When papers copying these queries will give the proper credit.

Whether we shall have frost within two weeks as the Katy-dids said we should.

Whether everyone whose building is connected with sewers by pipe in this city, will cease to thus violate the law as laid down by our Common Council and the State authorities.

Why Peck did not make a change of base 'ere this.

Why some people go out of our city to get their printing done, when it can be procured in so neat a style and cheap rates at this office.

Whether the Salvation Army are to inflict our citizens with their sanctimonious doings. They are coming this way.

Whether that man's wife knew he was at the camp meeting Sunday night.

Why no excursion went from this city to the Switchback this year.

Whether any city the size of Plainfield sent a greater number of excursionists out of its limits in the year 1881 than it did.

Who has a corner in the peach market in this city.

What has become of the Plainfield Cornet Band.

What has become of Joe.

Whether it will rain during Fair time.

Whether those who have returned from their vacation, don't wish they had waited until this month.

Whether Vanderbeck has forgotten to send us a sample of those new segars he speaks so proudly of.

Firemen's Meetings.

The State Firemen's Relief Fund Association will meet this year at Burlington, some time in September next. The Engineers' Convention, comprising the Chiefs of every department in the United States, will be held in the city of Richmond, Va., on Sep. 21. The fare from New York by boat, for the round trip, including board, will be $14.

Cattle Pens Erected in New Jersey.

WASHINGTON, N. J., Aug. 30.—The Delaware, Lackawanna and Western Railroad Company has begun the erection in its yards here of large cattle pens. Here the Western cattle en route to New York will be taken from the cars and turned loose in the commodious pens. They will be watered and properly fed and given a day's rest, and thus reach New York in good condition.

False Economy.

The public—and especially that portion of it which takes an active and personal part in our County Fair—cannot but agree with the Central Times in its remarks concerning the unsatisfactory plan of informing the interested regarding the premiums offered, by means of pamphlets. It might have cost a little more to publish the list in a few of the most extensively circulated papers, but an additional income would have resulted from an increased number of entries and a greater and more widely spread interest developed. The present publication only reaches those whom it is sent to, or those who hear there is such a list and ask for it. Whereas, on the other hand, we feel safe in asserting that everyone would have been informed thoroughly as to the generous list, upon its publication in the newspapers.

Fires in New Jersey Forests.

MANCHESTER, N. J., Aug. 30.—For five days forest fires have been sweeping through the pines south of this place. Several thousand acres of valuable timber-land and hundreds of acres of Cranberry bogs have been destroyed. The prolonged drought has left every thing as dry as tinder. It is supposed the fire originated from a spark from a locomotive. Strong westerly winds have driven the fire into Atlantic County. About Hammonton Mills the loss has been great. The people have fought the flames for days without success, and a repetition of the terrible experience of the Summer of 1880 is feared. At that time over 800 square miles of property were burned over. The only hope of staying the flames is a drenching rain. The method of "back-firing," as practiced so successfully at the last great forest fire, proves of no avail.

The State Fair.

Great improvements and alterations are being made about the State Fair grounds at Waverly, N. J., in anticipation of the approaching Annual Fair which commences on Monday, Sept. 19th. The Society have a large force of workmen engaged in improving the grounds. The unsightly pond hole in the centre of the race track is being filled in, a large and handsome poultry house erected, and the various other buildings are being put in good shape. The Pennsylvania Railroad Company have erected a neat and commodious new station at Waverly, which will be a desired accommodation to the public visiting the Fair. A fine bicycle track has been laid out and graded along side the trotting course, over which there will be some exciting contests during the Fair. Grounds are also to be provided for archery contests. On Wednesday there will be a fine game of Lacrosse. There will be fine trotting the entire week, and on Friday a running race for a purse of $200. Altogether the State Fair this year promises to eclipse predecessors. The books of entries will be opened at the Board of Trade rooms in Newark, about two weeks before the Fair. The cattle entries close Sept. 10th.

County Fairs.

The season of fairs is approaching. In hundreds, yes, thousands of places all over the United States, will soon be brought together the best of the farmer's products, including fruits and vegetables. They will be seen, examined, admired and criticised by the great multitude of people that yearly visit the fairs. It is a matter for congratulation that there is such a rapid growth in the number of these exhibitions, accompanied as they are, by an advance in their quality. It is to be hoped that the good work may go on until every owner of choice cattle, every grower of good corn or fine roots, will vie with the proprietors of orchards and gardens, and that all may be so much interested as to be not only in attendance upon these fairs, but take to the fair their best products, and have a personal interest in the success of the exhibition. There is no better way of gaining and imparting information. The knowledge to be acquired in the competition is far above the money value of any prize that is awarded. If every farmer, mechanic, manufacturer, merchant, housewife, artist and inventor will take hold of their own county exhibition, and aid not only by their presence, but by contributing well-selected specimens of their farm products, their hand-work, taste, skill and genius, they will be repaid a thousand fold. Go to your county fair, and take with you the best product of your labor and skill.

The Closing Excursion of the Season.

The excursion of Gazelle Engine and Hose Companies to Neshaming Falls Grove and Rocky Glen, Pa., advertised for Wednesday the 7th inst., seems destined to be one of the largest and most successful ever consummated in this city. The tickets are selling rapidly and a large crowd will undoubtedly accompany the fire laddies during their day of assured enjoyment. The destination selected is easily and speedily reached, in consequence of which many hours of pleasure on the grounds and every opportunity to avail yourself of the innumerable attractions, are afforded. Tickets may be procured of the members, and at the principal stores in the city. The train will leave Plainfield at 8 o'clock a. m. of Wednesday next, and stop at Dunellen and Bound Brook, both ways.

SCOTCH PLAINS SCRATCHINGS.

Rev. Wm. Humpstone will preach in the Baptist church, Scotch Plains, next Sunday morning at half-past ten o'clock.

NORTH PLAINFIELD PARAGRAPHS.

Mr. Alex. Willetts, of Craig Place, has had his board walk taken up and a substantial one of brick laid in its place, by Mr. Bernhard Gray.

Mr. John V. Whitlock, the Road Overseer, has been doing some very satisfactory work upon the Johnston Drive so efficiently as to greatly improve the road bed of that thoroughfare. The gutters and sluice-ways have been opened and additional and greatly needed water breaks made.

FIRE MATTERS.

On Saturday morning at about 3:30 o'clock, a coal-train engine from New York whistled so loudly and continuously as it approached the Plainfield station as to wake up almost the entire population and give warning that a fire was burning at some point between Netherwood and this city. A fierce ringing of the alarm bell (not done by the revised edition of lever and hammer) was responded to by the entire Department, with the exception of Gazelle Engine Co. No. 1, whose steamer was off duty. The fire was found to consist of the burning of a long stretch of unused coal sheds alongside of the R. R. and adjacent to the late match factory near Richmond street. They were the property of the C. R. R. Co., and the total loss that resulted was of no account—as apart from the lumber contained in the structure it was valueless. The origin of the conflagration is unknown—possibly a spark from a passing locomotive easily ignited the material into which had soaked the drippings from the oil-boxes of cars that had in past days stood on the dumps. By some it is thought that tramps, who sometimes sought shelter and rest under the sheds, might have started the flames purposely or accidentally. Of the Department's apparatus that came to the rescue, only Zephyr's hooks and ladders achieved any desirable result. The members of the truck company by tearing down connecting fences, prevented a spread of the flames to the brick factory and a frame building near it. No. 2's engine endeavored to get a stream of water from the Richmond street well, but in consequence of the dryness of that receptacle, was unsuccessful. No. 3 was then stationed at Green Brook, and pumped water from there to No. 2, but the breaking of a small bolt in the machinery of the former, caused a stoppage of such an arrangement. The fire was then allowed to die a natural death.

SPORTSMEN'S CORNER.

The Third Annual meeting of the "New Jersey Game & Fish Protective Society" will be held at the Mansion House, Plainfield, N. J., at 3 o'clock on Saturday, Sept. 21st next.

It is now legal to shoot black, grey and fox squirrels in this State until Jan. 1st 1882.

Woodcock cannot legally be shot in this State during the month of September.

Summer duck may now be shot until Jan. 1st, 1882.

The season for shooting reed and rail birds, is now "open" until Dec. 1st.

Weak fish are biting splendidly in the bay about Amboy and Woodbridge.

The excitement over the catching of menhaden, or moss-bunkers, by the crews of steam fishing-boats is increasing throughout Monmouth County. The crews net the fish in schools, and have almost entirely destroyed the fishing for table fish. It is asserted that the loss to the fishermen of that county alone is over $1,000,000 annually. Petitions asking the State Legislature to pass laws prohibiting the wholesale catching of menhaden along the New Jersey coast are being circulated among the residents of the county, and thousands of signatures have been secured already. The question will be a prominent one in the Fall campaign in some of the counties of the State.

A writer in an exchange predicts that the black bass in the Delaware are attacked by the rock fish (striped bass) and there is fear of the total extermination of the former delectable fish. Bless you, the writer of that statement knows nothing about Mr. Blackey, yet. The black bass can whip his weight in rock fish or pickerel, and amuse himself after he has dined on them by chasing the voracious gar-fish out of his native element. No danger of the black bass being exterminated after they are once fairly located in a good stream. As for their appetites they like nothing better than to get hold of a big sinker amateurs fish with, and after swallowing it, complacently smile to think how their weight has increased.

SEASON 1881.
IDOL!
[Formerly Peck's IDOL,]

By the great Mambrino Chief founder of the Mambrino family; 1st dam by American Eclipse, son of Duroc (founder of the Star family) by imported Diomed. Dam of American Eclipse, Miller's Damsel, by imported Messenger; 2d dam, Kitty More by Shakespeare; 3d dam, Eliza Jenkins, by Sir William of Transport; 4th dam by Orphan, son of Ball's Florizel; 5th dam by imported Buzzard; 6th dam by Silverail; 7th dam by imported Dove.

IDOL is a rich dark bay, weighs 1,200 lbs., with nigh hind foot white, full sixteen hands high, a horse of great substance, fine temper, elegant trotting action, record 2:41¼ as a four-year old, distancing his field, and at five years old showed 2:33, third heat, to wagon. As a six year old he made his first season in the stud, but the war prevented the development of his progeny. Few of his colts have been trained, but those few are mostly fast. Idol Girl, 16 hands high, won Beacon, Mystic, and Prospect Park stakes for four year olds during 1871, obtained a record of 2:36¾. This mare at that age could beat 2:30, and at Prospect Park trotted during her race a half mile in 1:13¼, and a quarter in 35¾ seconds—a 2:23 gait. As a five year old she met with an accident which ended her turf career. Barbara Fritchen, in 1879, as a big 16¼ hand green 5 year old mare, won all her races in a jog, and the seventh heat, on a half-mile track, gained record 2:34¼. Don, at Topeka, Kansas, won his race in 2:35. Wayne won colt stakes at Hartford. Nemesis trotted, 3 years old, in 2:44. Ideal, same age, trotted in 2:46, and John R., in 1880, gained a record of 2:39 on a half mile track at Olean, N. Y., and won first money in all his races. There are others that will drop into the 2:30 list this year without doubt.

IDOL will be limited to 10 mares, besides those engaged, at $30.00 the season, money payable (or secured) at service.

Good care and pasture furnished at $5 per month. All accidents and escapes at owners' risk. IDOL and some of his colts can be seen at the grazing farm of D. F. CARLE, STIRLING, Morris Co., New Jersey.

Breeders desiring an outcross should call and see IDOL, and after seeing him, judge for themselves.

WILL it ever rain?

THE Board of Chosen Freeholders met yesterday.

NOW we enter upon the pleasantest season of the year.

THE September term of the Middlesex County Courts will commence Sept. 6th.

THE rush homeward from watering places and summer resorts has commenced.

COMMON Council meets next Monday night—if they have a quorum of members present.

THE Board of Fire Commissioners hold their regular monthly meeting next Wednesday evening.

MONDAY, Tuesday and Wednesday were terrible hot days, the thermometer being far up in the nineties.

ENTRIES for the trotting matches during the approaching Union & Middlesex Counties' Fair, will close at the Mansion House, this city, Sept. 10th.

A YOUNG sparrow, confined in a cage by the children of Mr. John R. Vail, this city, is regularly fed at certain intervals of the day by the parent birds.

ONE of Mr. John Simpson's choice cows presented her owner, on Thursday of last week, with twin calves. All are reported as doing so well as could be expected.

THOSE desiring to secure a loan of money on bond and mortgage, can be accommodated at the law office of Wm. M. Stillman Esq., No. 26 West Front street.

A NEW plate glass front is being put in the building on Front street, formerly occupied by the 2d National Bank. Peck will occupy the store room when completed.

A SWARM of mosquitoes have annoyed our citizens the past few nights. They came from the direction of Elizabeth and were very poor in flesh, but awful bloodthirsty.

CODDINGTON'S pond has been drained preparatory to the digging of the weeds from its bottom, in order that no vegetable matter will be frozen into next year's crop of ice.

A FREIGHT train backing on the switch near the gas house, Saturday, ran some of its cars off. No damage of any consequence resulted, and no delay was occasioned other trains.

THE Camp Meeting held in Hyde's Grove, North Plainfield, the past two weeks, has been continued for another week. Crowds of people were in attendance last Sunday evening.

MR. A. A. Titsworth, being engaged in a geodetic survey of New Jersey, will be absent from Plainfield for the next two months, and his office will be closed until his return on or about Nov. 1st.

GOVERNOR LUDLOW has answered by telegraph in response to a request or suggestion that a day of prayer for the recovery of the President be named, that he will join in appointing such a day.

THE rooms formerly occupied by the P. A. C. gymnasium, at the corner of North and Park avenues, have been rented by the Plainfield Saengerbund, which removes this week from its former location.

MRS. A. B. Warner, at 31½ West Front street, has just received Butterick's patterns of the coming Fall fashions. She also has on hand a full line of felts and linens of the latest colors and the newest designs in stamping.

IT is reported that the estate of the late Adam Craig, which is now being settled, will amount to nearly a million of dollars. No will was left, and after the widow is accorded her lawful share, the balance will be divided among the children—two sons and a daughter.

OVERSEER of Poor Vanderbeek has rid the city of one of its oldest "paupers." The party in question only wanted a ticket to Milwaukee, where she had friends, and her name should not again appear on his books as a guest of this city. "Van" soon procured her a "pass" and she went.

THE Potter Press Works have five of the Scott Perfecting Presses in course of construction (three of which are for Chicago) and orders for more in hand. The large eight-page folio press, lately completed for the Louisville Courier Journal is to be duplicated for the same establishment.

LILIENSTERN the Clothier, displays in his window a picture of the President and his Cabinet the faces of which, are very life-like portraits. The figures are dressed in the prevailing fashion and their garments show the perfect fit and stylish cut that characterizes all of Lilienstern's work.

WHILE a colored lady of this city was attending a funeral on Friday morning last, two youths of the same race entered her apartment and helped themselves to a two dollar bill. They were subsequently captured by the owner, but only one dollar and forty-five cents remained of the "ill-gotten wealth."

ABOUT twenty-five carrier pigeons were released at the depot on Monday afternoon last upon the arrival of the 5:04 train by baggage master Thos. Jones. After circling about the vicinity for about half an hour the birds took a straight flight in the direction of Jersey City from whence they came.

THE Board of Directors of the "U. & M. C. M. A. A." met at the Mansion House last Monday evening, to make any further necessary arrangements regarding the approaching Fair. Nothing of importance was transacted excepting the appointment of Judges to serve in various capacities during the Fair.

A BEAUTIFUL flower plant, Night Blooming Cereus, attracted much attention from passers-by at the Post Office on Monday night last. The plant developed twelve beautiful large flowers by midnight. It was the property of Mrs. Clawson, on Seventh street, who has a number of these rare plants in her conservatory.

CONDUCTOR "Jack" Smith is considered one of the most fickle officers on the C. R. R. He transfers his kind care from one race to another with the greatest ease and willingness. On Tuesday he had charge of one division of the Crescent avenue Excursion, and the next day escorted the colored folks of Somerville in the same direction.

Two of the most diminutive specimens of dogs of the black-and-tan species, may be seen at Bates' Hair Emporium on Park avenue. They are now six weeks old, and are smaller than ordinary rats. When born, the pair of them weighed less than five ounces. The mother, "Tiney," herself a very small animal, and her offspring are well and lively.

SOME extent of the drought this Summer may be learned from the figures submitted for July. From these it appears that only one July in thirty-eight, that of 1881, had as small a rainfall as that of last month which was only one inch and thirty-four hundredths. The average rainfall for July during the past thirty-eight years has been over four inches.

STREET Commissioner Hand, working under orders from the C. R. R., has laid a connecting pipe from the Company's stand-pipe at the tracks, under McIntyre's building and into the sewer beneath North avenue. It is for the purpose of carrying off the waste water that formerly ran down the embankment and under the walls, thereby loosening the foundations of the buildings along the vicinity.

AT about noon on Saturday last, a lady walking along Broadway to her residence on Kensington avenue, was approached by a tramp who snatched the chatelaine bag from her waist and made off with the property. The value of the lost article and its contents was fortunately small, but the escape of the thief is to be regretted. Captain Dodd, however, is hunting for a man he suspects of the robbery, and the victim feels confident that she can identify him.

MR. L. L. Manning has contracted for a new engine and boiler at his marble, granite and slate works on West Front street. Increased steam facilities, in consequence, are available to his tenants, and the stocking factory on the upper floor of the building has taken additional power. Those desiring commodious quarters for any manufacturing purpose where steam power is required, should inspect the unrented part of Mr. Manning's building.

MR. George A. Moore having entered into partnership with Mr. Benj. F. Moore the popular butcher of North avenue, the firm henceforth will be Moore Bros., which at the old stand will continue business with the same enterprise and the same consideration for the benefits of its customers as heretofore. The new partner during a connection of eleven years past, with Mr. James M. Dunn the grocer, has gained a reputation for courtesy and an obliging disposition that will serve to draw many patrons to his new venture.

OH, for another flood.

SCHOOL opens on Monday.

ONLY one more excursion.

NOW roll your "R's." The juicy oyster is just too sweet to live and fat enough to kill.

THE summer is almost ended. Two weeks from next Thursday is the beginning of Autumn.

A PAIR of gold spectacles lost on Park avenue or Fourth street, on Wednesday, is advertised for elsewhere.

ARRANGEMENTS are being made to heat the Mansion House by steam the coming winter. Ed. Thorn, the proprietor, is a popular and enterprising landlord.

WE wish every resident would place a kerosene lamp in front of his premises. The expense is slight, but the accomodation and safety afforded cannot be estimated.

THERE will be preaching of the Gospel on Sunday afternoon, at 4:30 o'clock, on the grounds of Mr. Paul J. Loizeaux, on Chatham Street, foot of Water Street. Seats provided. All are welcome.

A NUMBER of stages and wagons conveyed the Dunellen M. E. Sunday School and friends through this city on Thursday morning. Their destination, from the direction taken, seemed to be Feltville.

OUR North Plainfield neighbors are to be congratulated. The inmates of the establishment that has so long been a disgrace to the township, left for New York by the 5:40 train, Thursday morning.

MESSRS. Manning & Melbourne, builders, have purchased of Mr. E. L. Roberts, a finely situated lot in the rear of ex-Councilman Lithgow's, fronting on Third Place, on which they will erect a handsome dwelling.

THE sacrament of the Lord's Supper will be administered in the Trinity Reformed church, Sunday, at 10:30 o'clock. There will be no evening meeting, but a service with the children will be held during the afternoon.

A SHAWL supposed to belong to the lady that fell in getting on one of the sections of the Crescent avenue excursion at Ocean Grove, was picked up at that depot and may be identified by its owner upon calling at the ticket office of the Plainfield station.

A VERY desirable tract of land at the corner of Madison avenue and sixth street, is to be sold at auction on the premises, Monday next, at 2 o'clock, p. m. It is a part of the estate of Alexander Dunham, deceased, and offers a rare bargain to the purchaser.

MR. James DeGraw, so well and favorably known as having for many years been engaged in the manufacture of Mineral Waters, has purchased the interest of G. Keller, in his fruit and confectionery stand on Front street, and will hereafter conduct the business under his own name. We wish him success in his new enterprise.

A FLAT car loaded with telegraph poles was thrown from the track near Potter's Press Works on Tuesday night, and dragged others after it in such a way that the three lines of rail were effectively blocked for some time. Before the wreck was cleared a continuous succession of coal trains was stretched from Elizabeth to this city.

IF the drought in this State continues, the man who has the most applejack to sell seems destined to grow rich. While we are complaining of dry weather, however, the English are suffering from too much water. On Tuesday last, during eighteen hours of rain in some parts of England, the fall was one hundred and fifty tons to an acre.

R. WALDRON, frame maker and gilder, Front street, opp. Park ave., has in his possession an ancient document to enclose in a frame. It is the commission of one Samuel Yates as Second Lieutenant of Volunteers, signed by President James Madison in the year 1813. The document is now the property of Joseph W. Yates, Esq., of this city, a relative of Lieutenant Yates.

A LARGE cess-pool to receive the sewerage of the Plainfield station, has recently been completed on North avenue at the expense of the Railroad company, and is believed to be a most satisfactory piece of work for the purpose. Street Commissioner Hand directed its construction, and no expense was spared to make it serviceable in arresting the objectionable matter that formerly found its way into Green Brook. The masonry on the inside was done by Mr. Isaac Pangborn.

IN accordance with a resolution passed at the last meeting of the Common Council, Street Commissioner Hand has just completed a cess-pool at the corner of Second and Peace streets. It is intended to receive the surface water and the overflow of the main cess-pool on North avenue, and has been sunken to the depth of 12 feet and stoned up. The authority for the act is given by an ordinance passed in November, 1872, and does not, as some suppose, conflict with the provisions of a later ordinance, as that was afterwards repealed.

THE exorbitant ice dealers throughout the country are threatened with financial ruin. Despite the fact that the ice crop was abundant last year, consumers have wondered and despaired at the continuation of high prices for the commodity, but a great and scientific personage has at last solved the mystery. He has discovered that there exists an insect which eats the ice as readily and easily, and with as much enjoyment as a school boy does a piece of candy. This insect thinks nothing of attacking an iceberg, and after undermining its base by eating it away, attacks the berg when it topples over and finally devours the whole of it. It is predicted by the savant that in the course of a few thousand years this insect will have eaten a roadway through the icebergs to the North Pole, so that it will become a pleasure to approach that desirable point in the summer time. Now that the wicked ice man has been told of the cause of the shrinkage of ice, let him again advance his prices before he is ruined entirely by the destruction of his entire "short" crop of last winter in the ravenous appetite of this newly discovered insect.

Caught in the Act.

While Mr. Wm. Moore of this city was standing in front of the Western Union Hotel at the corner of Cortlandt and West streets, N. Y. city, on Friday evening of last week, a nimbled-fingered bootblack snatched Mr. Moore's doubled-case gold watch and passed it to a confederate. The latter was seized by Mr. Moore, however, and although numerous of the pickpocket's "heelers" attempted a rescue, the guilty party was taken before the justice and locked in the Tombs in default of $1,000 bail.

The Last Picnic of 1881.

The A. O. H. No. 4 of Plainfield, propose to make its Third Annual Picnic at Stelle's Grove on the afternoon and evening of next Thursday, the finest ever given under its management. Frazee's Quadrille Band will furnish the usual first-class music, and all the attractions of past picnics with many additional features will be offered. The event will probably close the season of such festivities and consequently all should take advantage of the last opportunity. Tickets may be procured of members of the order.

Great News for Long Branch.

The Board of Directors of the Central Railroad of New Jersey have decided to make very extensive improvements on the Long Branch Division this Fall and Winter. The double track will be completed from Elizabethport to Point Pleasant, and laid throughout with steel rails of the best quality. All the locomotives and cars used on the division will be manufactured expressly for it. The grounds about the depots on the lower portion of the road are also to be surrounded with beautiful parks filled with choice trees and shrubbery. The work on the new tracks will be commenced as soon as the Summer travel comes to an end.

One Year Ago.

We intend each week to record a list of noticeable events that happened during the corresponding week of the preceding year. Seasons, however, are but repetitions, and we find that there was no more news during the past week in 1880 than in 1881. The following item published just one year ago may be read again with interest, but subsequent events prove the fallacy of any belief that "throat troubles" are permanently benefitted by a trip to Maine:

"Mr. E. W. [illegible] gave us a call last evening. He has just returned from a two months' tour in the State of Maine. He came back to the Middle States looking hale and hearty, and says his throat trouble had been very much benefitted by the trip. We hope to hear his ringing voice many times during the Fall and Winter."

The Very Biggest.

Twenty three cars divided into two trains, conveyed 1,543 excursionists and their lunch to Ocean Grove on Tuesday. The crowd was composed principally of the congregations and scholars of the Crescent avenue and First Presbyterian churches, and the children and officers of the Warren Mission School. The trip to and from was made rapidly and without an accident, and the managers of the affair deserve the credit of arranging the largest and most successful of the kind. Although a large number of tickets were necessarily given the scholars of the three schools, it seems probable that a balance above expenses will remain, to be divided among the three organizations.

A Water Famine.

In Orange, N. J., the wells are nearly all dry, and supplying water has got to be a regular trade. Wagons loaded with five hogsheads each make regular rounds, the water be sold for $2 to $3 per load. Poor people pay four to five cents a pail, and as the fluid is too precious to be used for anything but drinking and cooking, the fashion of washing bodies or clothing is temporarily abandoned.

An Example of Courtesy.

In a private letter to the editors of THE CONSTITUTIONALIST, Mr. John F. Talmadge of Bound Brook speaks as follows regarding the late services of the Plainfield Fire Department: "Too high praise could not be awarded it, and as the same is now extended I am glad to know it is accepted in as kindly a spirit as if it had been rendered more promptly. The hasty mouth-word is not always as sincere as a delayed heart-utterance."

Entertainment at the Hotel Netherwood.

The Netherwood Concert for the Union Chapel Furnishing Fund, did not come off on Monday evening last, as intended. A number of the Stock Exchange Glee Club were unable to be present on that evening, and a severe throat trouble with which Berthelati the tenor was attacked, precluded his singing, entirely. The date when the entertainment will take place, has not yet been selected.

Milk.

The continued drought is probably a greater blow to our milkmen than many of our readers are aware of. At the present price of milk (6 cts. per qt.) our milkmen are certainly not coining money, when we state that on account of the scarcity of grass they are compelled to feed their cows the same as in the middle of Winter, and with feed at $1.50 a hundred, the continuation of the dry spell will certainly cause an increase in the price of milk.

Fair.

The ladies of the Union Village M. E. Church will hold a fair Thursday and Friday, Sept. 8th and 9th, afternoon and evening. No pains will be spared to make this the grand event of the season. In connection with the fair there will be a farmers' exhibit. Farmers and stockmen are requested to make exhibits of vegetables, grain and live stock. Suitable testimonials will be presented to the successful exhibitors. Entries must be made by 12 o'clock on the first day.

Runaway.

A horse attached to a covered delivery wagon belonging to Mr. Richard Totten, started from in front of the Post Office on Thursday evening of last week and ran at a fierce speed through Front and up Somerset streets, almost overturning the vehicle at Pope's corner. A number of unsuccessful efforts to check the animal's speed were attempted during the journey, but a halt was not made until its owner's tin store on Somerset street was reached. In spite of the crowded street, no damage resulted.

An Unfortunate Accident.

While putting a pane of glass in one of the windows of Fine's cigar store on Park avenue on Friday morning last, Mr. Charles Johnson was severely cut in the leg just above the knee. The victim was engaged in removing the broken glass in the sash, when a piece fell from the frame and striking him as designated inflicted a cut through the clothing and into the flesh to the depth of about an inch. Dr. Fritz was summoned at once and ordered the removal of Johnson to his home after taking measures to stop the flow of blood that resulted from the severing of one or two arteries. The patient under proper treatment, has since recovered most satisfactorily.

Union & Middlesex Counties' Fair.

The Third Annual Fair and Exhibition of the Union & Middlesex Counties' Mutual Agricultural Association, to be held at Plainfield on the days of September 26, 27, 28, 29 and 30, promises to eclipse its predecessors in point of exhibits and general good management. The premium lists are now ready and may be obtained of the Secretary, James S. Vosseller, either at the County Clerk's office, Elizabeth, or at his residence, Plainfield. The list shows that some $4,000 in premiums will be distributed for farm products, cattle, horses, fowls, sheep, swine, fancy articles, etc. A fair proportion of the premiums are set aside for the ladies' department, which will be under careful management and competent judges. A premium of $10 is offered for the family making the greatest number of exhibits. A large amount of premiums are offered in the speed trials, which occur on the last four days of the Fair, and it is safe to say there will be some very fine trotting on the occasion by fast horses. The entry books will be open three days before the opening of the Fair at the office of the Association, Plainfield, and at Elizabeth, Rahway and New Brunswick. All entries close at 10 a. m. on the Fair Grounds, Tuesday morning, Sept. 27th.

A Golden Wedding.

One of the most auspicious occasions of late was the celebration of the fiftieth anniversary of the wedding day of Mr. and Mrs. Isaac D. Titsworth, which we could only casually refer to in our last issue. The event took place at Dunellen on Thursday afternoon of last week and brought together a gathering that embraced immediate descendents and distant relations. The aged couple were so fortunate as to have with them all the children of their married life—seven sons and three daughters—whom with their wives and husbands formed a group of twenty adults, that was a source of pride to the pair they delighted to honor as father and mother. Besides these were the many grand-children of all ages, and a number of most satisfactory photographs containing the entire family were taken by photographer Langhorne of this city. A very pleasing repetition of the ceremony that 50 years ago united together Isaac D. Titsworth and Hannah Ann Sheppard, was repeated, and a bountiful and enjoyable collation was spread for the guests by Mr. L. L. Compton, of W. Front street. Mr. and Mrs. Titsworth were presented with a large and handsome album containing the portraits of all their descendants, besides other relatives.

Beware of Fire.

The extremely dry and warm weather we have been having lately, has so parched everything that the slightest spark is all that seems necessary to effectively start an incipient conflagration. On last Saturday afternoon the roof of a Cottage Place residence was set on fire by a locomotive cinder, and only the immediate discovery consequent upon its happening during the day and prompt assistance, saved the building. On Tuesday a dwelling-house on West Second street came near being consumed from the same cause; Wednesday, Cook's lumber yard caught fire and a portion of the woods at Short Hills was burned; and probably other fires, unreported, have been discovered in time to prevent damage. Eternal vigilance will be the only means to insure safety during the present drought, as the fire-wells are comparatively empty and a wide-spread conflagration is sure to result if once fairly started. Elsewhere along the line of the C. R. R., many fires are reported as being started by locomotive sparks. On Saturday some coal sheds at Somerville caught, but the flames were promptly extinguished. The depot at Annandale a few nights ago was almost consumed, and a dwelling house at Bound Brook on Friday evening, was only saved from destruction by the efforts of the fire company lately organized in that place.

A Dastardly Outrage.

On Friday evening of last week, Mary Heenan, a domestic in the employ of Mr. Burton of Putnam avenue, visited Maggie McGrath, who lives at the house of Dr. Charles A. Hart on the Crescent, and the two, just after dark, started for the former's home. They had reached the bridge over Cedar Brook and were standing on the left-hand side of Putnam ave., when they noticed the form of a man approaching—the darkness being too intense to permit the recognition of either face or figure. Upon Mary remarking that they had better wait until he passed, the two girls stood still on the bridge. Without a word or the slightest intimation of his intent, the man suddenly stepped up to the Heenan girl and struck her with some force in the front of the body just above the left hip. He then turned and disappeared in the darkness. The girls were naturally terribly frightened and retraced their steps until the residence of Mr. Job. Male, on Crescent avenue, was reached. Here they sought and obtained the protection of Mr. Male's coachman, Mr. John Brennan, who accompanied the injured girl to the house of her employer. She did not complain of much pain, but said she could feel a lump where struck. On reaching home the circumstances were related to Mrs. Burton, when that lady then noticed that the victim's clothing was cut and upon examination blood was found that proceeded from a slight wound apparently made with the small blade of a knife. No cause for the assault can thus far be discovered, and the darkness surrounding the scene made it impossible for the girls to form correctly any idea of the man's features or even color.

Home Again.

Dr. John P. Gross from the White Sulphur Springs.

Mrs. Wm. E. Smalley from Greenbrier, W. Va.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Struthers from the White Mountains.

Miss Katie Kimball from Chautauqua Lake.

Mrs. John W. Murray and family from Lucerne.

Mr. and Mrs. Howard Goff and Miss Emma Ayres from Saratoga and Lake George.

Mr. James McGee's family from Lake Mahopac.

Miss Stella Whidden from the Catskill Mountains.

Mr. Orson Green from the western part of New York State.

Rev. Robert Lowry from Saratoga.

Prof. and Mrs. James Lyon from Greenwich, Conn.

Mr. S. C. Peck and heir from Connecticut.

Mr. Clark W. Evans from Canada and the Adirondacks.

Mr. W. C. Rogers, of Fifth street, from Barnegat Bay.

Personalia.

Mr. Charles Schomerhorn and family from New York State.

Mrs. Galer of Brooklyn, has been visiting friends on East Fifth street.

Mr. John F. Gibson from Sea Girt, Ocean Beach, Asbury Park and way stations.

Rev. and Mr. Robert E. Clark left for their Iowa home on Monday evening last.

Miss Grace Johnson and mother are visiting a sister of the former at Haddonfield, N. J.

Mr. C. A. Potter, Jr., and daughters are expected home from Europe about the 15th of October.

Mr. J. F. Wilson of Washington Valley, has added a gracefully built buck-board to his carriage accomodations.

Mr. W. S. Angleman, Librarian of the Y. M. C. A., and sister, have been visiting friends in the vicinity of Bound Brook.

Mr. Alexander Butts, LLD., intends removing to New York city—there to find a larger field for the practice of his profession.

Miss Kate Wotherspoon is at West Point, the guest of the Honorable John Bigelow. She attended the Academy Ball of Monday evening.

Mr. Christian Schepflin was serenaded at his residence in Dunellen, on Monday evening last, by the musical members of the Plainfield Saengerbund.

The remains of the sister of Mrs. David M. Demarest, who recently died in this city, were taken hence on Monday by rail to their place of interment.

Mr. Edward Reichel, of Reynolds' Pharmacy, sailed on Thursday for Bath, Pa., a branch of the German Continent. Dots a pully biaces, anyhow.

Ex.-Gov. Geo. B. McClellan, in a private letter to Gen. Wm. H. Sterling of this city, announces his intention of sailing for home with his family, from Liverpool, on Thursday the 15th inst.

Mr. Wm. Van Voorhees is summering at the Washington Rock House and reports that between forty and fifty fellow guests are enjoying the bracing and healthy atmosphere of that mountain resort.

Mr. P. M. French's recovery from his late severe illness, has been sufficient to allow of a journey to the Delaware Water Gap. Among the surroundings of that section we feel assured the patient will find health again.

Mr. H. B. Newhall, Superintendent of the Crescent avenue Presbyterian Sunday School, has purchased the very attractive property he has been renting on Seventh street, and is making many additional improvements thereto.

Mr. Wm. Walter Springmann, the Tonsorial Artist of the Somerset House, was presented by his wife on Wednesday morning last with a beautiful fair-haired and blue-eyed daughter, weighing 12 pounds, which he has named in honor of his mother.

Mr. Randolph Dunn, whose death we published last week, was buried from New Market on Friday and the funeral ceremonies were attended by a large number of friends. The deceased was in the 83d year of his age, and senior deacon of the Seventh Day church of this city.

President John I. Holly, Secretary Jas. S. Vosseller, and Directors Eugene Gross, Nate Robbins and J. W. Johnson, of the U. & M. C. M. A. Ass'n, attended the Fair at Morristown on Thursday. Cadmus, the Livery merchant, furnishing them means of transportation.

Dr. J. H. Vincent, the founder of the Chautauqua Literary and Scientific Circle, has been made the recipient of a water-pitcher embellished with paintings of Chautauqua scenes, and emblematical representations suitable to the subject treated.

Geo. E. Hoadley, Esq. of this city, and Dr. Abram Coles, of Scotch Plains were two of the pall bearers on the occasion of the funeral of the late Fitch Shepard, father of A. D. Shepard, Esq. of Scotch Plains, last Thursday, Aug. 15th. Mr. Shepard was an old and respected citizen. The remains were interred at Greenwood.

The residence of Mr. R. S. Little, on Park avenue, is surrounded with choice fruit trees and graperies, which each succeeding year bear a prolific crop of fruit. This year is no exception, judging from the appearance of the trees and vines. Mr. Little's gardener, "Robert" thoroughly understands how to trim those trees and vines to make them bear fine fruit.

Mr. John Hughes, a former resident of Union avenue, this city, and now residing in Maryland, was a guest at Miller's Hotel, Tuesday evening last, while here on business. Mr. H. is concerned in the construction of immense silk mills near Paterson, also 60 large dwelling houses, which are being erected on a tract of land purchased in 1873. His many friends in this section were glad to grasp him by the hand and learn of his continued prosperity.

Mr. Eben L. Roberts of Park avenue is the architect of the new mansion about to be built on the corner of Crescent ave., adjoining his residence. Mr. Roberts' taste and ability in the line are widely recognized—the churches at Montclair, N. J., Yonkers, N. Y., Brooklyn, L. I., and elsewhere (including the Crescent avenue Presbyterian edifice of this city) built from his plans, are considered the most admirable specimens of artistic design in the direction, that America boasts of.

We are indebted to our old friend, J. H. Smith, formerly of this city, but now doing a fine business in Brooklyn, N. Y., for invitations to the Annual Picnic and Clam Bake of the 25th Ward Original Night Owl Club, at High Ground Park, Myrtle Avenue, Brooklyn, N. Y., Tuesday, Sept. 6. We notice that "Jim is one of the officers of the association. We extend our regrets on not being able to attend. The recollection of past clambakes in "ye olden times," make us feel like being one of the party, nevertheless.

WESTFIELD WISPS.

Where's your jail?

Buckets at Witike's.

Meeting of Town Committee last night. Particulars in our next.

Another buggy ride Sunday night or, to be more correct, Monday morning last.

Very dry! We refer to the condition of the earth, atmosphere &c. in this vicinity.

Artist Jerome Neil is busy decorating the exterior of the residence of Mr. David Sayre.

Without buckets members of the Bucket and Engine Co. keep certain portions of Broad street wet down daily.

A large number of our residents have visited the camp meeting (colored) at Plainfield during the past week.

It might prove a wise precaution on the part of our present Town Committee to consider the question of fire wells.

Our esteemed friend Mr. R. P. Davis, has, after faithful practice, acquired the ability to (stand on his head.)

Meeting of Westfield Bucket and Engine Co., at Hotel Hall, Monday, Sept. 5, at 8, P. M. Business of importance.

Dr. Stillman, Sr., after an enjoyable trip to Wisconsin, returned last Wednesday night and is again looking after the welfare of his patients.

Westfield Hotel under the management of its present popular proprietor, Mr. A. W. Moffett, appears to be reaping a fair crop of success. Moral. Burt runs it.

Messrs. Irving, Woodruff and Smith deserve the thanks of our Fire Department for the conveyance of the apparatus and members to the fire at Oakland on Wednesday last.

Half a dozen apparently happy wagon loads of both young and old left our village on Wednesday morning last, bound for Woodbridge Landing. A particularly pleasant day is reported.

Delinquent taxpayers will do well to remember that the Collector, under the warrant of the Town Committee, is only allowed four months from the date of said warrant, July 28, 1881, to make his returns.

Constable John R. Barcalow has tendered his resignation of that important office to the Town Committee. Why? Johnny.

Terrible scandal! A young lady of Broad street invited a young gentleman of Central avenue to partake of soda on Wednesday last.

Col. Henry J. Taylor, formerly a resident, favored his many friends here with the sight of his genial countenance on Monday last.

Road Overseer Dist. No. 5, should attend to the repair of roadway on Broad street corner of Chestnut. It is in a very bad condition.

Atlas Lodge, 125, F. & A. M., will meet after the summer vacation on Monday evening next Sept. 5th. The third degree will be conferred.

Our friend, Chas. Lyons, appears this week with a very handsome buggy, (Brewster, of Broome St., we believe.) Is it for a week only, Charley?

Mr. Cornelius Decker of Jerseyville, Jersey Co., Illinois, (heavy on Jersey) is paying his son, our popular (P. M.) which means Post-master, a short visit.

Mr. Chas. P. Conant, a former and extremely popular citizen, is spending a few days at the residence of Anson P. Grant on Westfield avenue. Come back Charley!

"Maud S. and St. Julien" outdone. Westfield's celebrated trotter "Major" can eclipse them all. For engagements for exhibition purposes, apply to Mr. W. H. Edgar.

Residents desiring a particularly pleasant day, would do well to accompany Gazelle Engine and Hose Co. on their excursion on Wednesday next. Tickets can be procured at Bayard's or of our local.

The past week has been banner week at Westfield's Turf Exchange. Market has been very good (7 trades in one day.) Supt. Brockmier reports market at close strong, with upward tendency.

A typographical error in our last issue made the well on the Hoggett place at Fanwood, driven by our popular well driver John Dane, only 14½ feet deep, the notice in question should have read 149½ feet.

Parties desiring to purchase horses or wagons, will serve their own interests by an inspection of stock for sale at the hotel stables before looking elsewhere. Particulars under head of "Westfield Advertisers."

We understand that ex-Supt. of Lamps, John Pfeifer, Janitor of the Lyceum, has been requested by the Board of Trustees of that organization to surrender the keys of the building and insignia of office. Is dot so?

The many friends as well as neighbors of Mr. and Mrs. David Miller, of Elmer street, visited their residence, by invitation, on Tuesday evening last, to witness the blooming of a very handsome specimen of the night-blooming cereus. Thanks are due Mr. and Mrs. Miller for the opportunity offered.

Great alarm was caused to our worthy Town Clerk and your local upon opening the Town rooms on Wednesday afternoon, upon finding the room full of smoke and an unmistakable odor of fire. The occupants in the entire building were alarmed and after examination it was decided that the fire was in a charcoal furnace in the yard.

Wagon loads of furniture and other articles leaving our town on Wednesday morning last under the guidance of Messrs. Lyon and French, gave farewell greeting to his many friends here from Mr. Henry Shafer, upon his leaving our community to locate at Pamrapo. Success attend him is the verdict of our citizens.

By an act approved, March 17th, 1865, it becomes the duty of our Town committee to furnish to the Comptroller of the State Treasury, a certified account of the financial condition of the Township on or before the first day of October in each year. Call upon our unrivalled Collector, gentlemen, settle your taxes and we can claim to be the banner town of the State.

Not to be outdone by his rival compounder of prescriptions, Mr. John Dorvall the popular assistant at "Bayards" has started a Bugology department, his first exhibition occurred on Tuesday evening last and fairly eclipsed any specimens hitherto exhibited. The exhibitor himself was unable to give it a name and the general verdict is "What-is-it."

Considerable excitement was occasioned on First street one evening last week by a goat, the property of a young gentleman by the name of Stapford. Those particularly afflicted by his butting ability proved to be Mr. Wm. Davis and Mrs. Schott; the former decided that another Comet had arrived, the latter that an attack on chairs, tables, etc., by his goatship was decidedly expensive.

OUR COURT.

Before Squire Jacques, Saturday, Aug. 27th, Theodore V. Smith vs Annie Pfeifer, charge slander. Dismissed for want of jurisdiction.

Tuesday Aug. 30th, George B. Long vs Wm. S. Moffett, charge assault and battery. Bail given for appearance of defendant at Court of General Sessions.

An alarm of fire on Wednesday last at about 1 p. m., brought out our department, who by the aid of wagons kindly furnished by citizens, quickly arrived at the scene, a house and barn adjoining the railroad at Oakland. Inability to procure water prevented its extinguishment. If that at present particularly valuable article could have been secured upon the arrival of the companies, the house, at least, could have been saved. The buildings were the property of Miss Hannah Miller, and were, we understand, fully insured.

An adjourned meeting of the Westfield Bucket and Engine Co. No. 1, was held at the Hotel Hall on Monday evening last. The attendance was large and the business before the meeting was promptly disposed of. A regulation bucket was adopted (a very good one). Constitution as reported by Committee was adopted. A ballot for the Election of Second Assistant Foreman resulted in the election of Mr. A. Edgar Wilcox to that position. Members will find buckets ready after Friday at the office of the Treasurer, C. F. W. Witike, Broad street.

At the request of a committee of citizens of Elizabeth addressed to our Town committee, requesting them to send a representative to join with them in arrangements for a general demonstration in the event of the recovery of the President, our Town committee at their meeting held Aug. 23d, appointed Mr. Henry F. Alpers as such representative. The encouraging reports up to this time of our beloved Chief Magistrate's condition, makes it a possibility that this demonstration will be held and our representative can rest assured of the heartiest co-operation of the citizens of Westfield in that event.

School enumerator, Thos. H. Clark, Dist. No. 10, has made the following report:

Total number of children from infancy to 18 years, 711.
Total number of children from infancy to 5 years, 190.
Total number of children from 5 years to 18 years, 521.
Number of male children from infancy to 5 years, 90.
Number of female children from infancy to 5 years, 100.
Number of male children from 5 years to 18 years, 264.
Number of female children from 5 years to 18 years, 257.

With all the wells and force pumps on Broad street in the centre of our village, it seems a shame that during the present (particularly) dry spell, that no arrangement has been made for the proper watering or wetting down of the street. It is an unquestioned fact that our merchants on that thoroughfare lose in damaged goods twice the cost of keeping the street properly watered. We regret to announce, however, that their intelligence in this respect borders upon the 16th rather than the 19th century. The slightest attempt at organized effort on their part would have resulted ere this in the entire removal of this dust nuisance.

The regular taxes on the different road districts for the year 1881, are as follows:

District No.
1,	$979.13.
2,	73.18.
3,	88.35.
4,	176.87.
5,	57.29.

7,	69.21.
8,	365.90.
9,	83.81.
10,	49.44.
11,	121.55.
12,	135.28.
13,	70.64.
14,	166.69.
15,	6.54.
Total	$1,590.

WESTFIELD TOWN COMMITTEE.

Thursday evening, Aug. 25, 1881.

Pursuant to adjournment. Present Messrs. Henry F. Alpers, chairman, Jas. Moffett, Robert R. Sinclair and L. M. Whitaker, Clerk. Minutes of last meeting Aug. 23d, read and approved. Communication from Constable John R. Barcalow tendering his resignation received, was read and on motion referred to counsel. The Committee continued the further examination of the duplicate of assessment and being unable to complete the same, on motion adjourned to meet Thursday, Sept. 1st, at 7:30 P. M.

L. M. Whitaker,
Town Clerk.

COMMUNICATED.

For "The Constitutionalist."

MESSRS. EDITORS:

If Mr. Murray in his communication of last week had simply said that the contract for furnishing coal for the public schools was not awarded to me, because my bid did not reach the board in time for action, and had not tried to give me a severe castigation, he would not have made known the true reason for "Squandering the monies of the school." It seems that the committee in their desire to purchase coal at cheapest rates, "Learned that the coal dealers of Plainfield had entered into a combination," and "With this fact before them the committee at once put themselves in communication with dealers outside." They did not learn this "Fact" of me, they did not apply to me at all. I sent my unsolicited bid to Mr. Kirkner before they had closed the contract, and not one week after, as Mr. Murray seems to intimate. I did not know that Mr. Kirkner "was absent from the city," and "would be absent for weeks."

Mr. Murray's "humble opinion that charity for the taxpayers had nothing to do with it," is entirely correct. Charity does not usually enter into business transactions, and "the less Mr. Guion says of this matter the better" for them perhaps. Yet it is still true, that had not the committee "learned of the combination" and at once "closed the contract with a dealer in New Brooklyn," they could have bought their coal at a less figure at home, and thus have saved the "monies of the school," and Mr. Murray might have saved his temper.

Respectfully,
CHAS. S. GUION.

SHILOH'S CONSUMPTION CURE.

This is beyond question the most successful Cough Medicine we have ever sold, a few doses invariably cure the worst cases of Cough, Croup and Bronchitis, while its wonderful success in the cure of Consumption is without a parallel in the history of medicine. Since its first discovery it has been sold on a guarantee, a test which no other medicine can stand. If you have a Cough we earnestly ask you to try it. Price 10 cts., 50 cts. and $1. If your Lungs are sore, Chest or Back, lame, use Shiloh's Porous Plaster. Price 25 cts. Sold by R. M. Steele. 1ag6m

ANSWER THIS QUESTION.

Why do so many people we see around us, seem to prefer to suffer and be made miserable by Indigestion, Constipation, Dizziness, Loss of Appetite, Coming up of the Food, Yellow Skin, when for 75 cts. we will sell them Shiloh's Vitalizer, guaranteed to cure them. Sold by R. M. Steele.

NEARLY ALL THE ILLS THAT AFFLICT US can be prevented and cured by keeping the stomach, liver and kidneys in working order. There is no medicine known that will do this as surely as Parker's Ginger Tonic. See adv.

PLEASANT LETTERS.

They are sheets of sunshine. A Methodist clergyman of Hartford, Conn., writes Dr. David Kennedy, of Rondout, N. Y., that "Favorite Remedy" cured him of Chronic Liver Disease and Indigestion, from which he had suffered for a long time. This was splendid, but nothing more than anyone may expect who uses this medicine. One Dollar a bottle is a small consideration when health is in question. The clergyman says he is going to introduce Dr. Kennedy's "Favorite Remedy" among his people. He can't do better.

HAY FEVER.

FOR HAY FEVER I recommend Ely's Cream Balm. It entirely relieved me from the first application; have been a sufferer for ten years. Being from home and neglecting to take the remedy, I had an attack; after recovering I immediately resorted to it, and found instant relief. I believe, had I begun its use earlier, I should not have been troubled. Have stood heat, dust and draughts as well as during other months. J. COLLYER, Clerk, 119 Broad street, Elizabeth, N. J.

FOR YEARS I have been afflicted with Hay Fever from early in August until frost. I was induced to give Ely's Cream Balm a trial. The relief was immediate. I regard myself cured. G. [illegible], Supt., of Gas Co., Elizabeth, N. J. Sept. 23, 1880. Price 50 cents.

"Having been an invalid for a number of years, I have received more benefit during the last six months from the use of your 'Favorite Remedy' than from the preceding 15 years of treatment from the best physicians of New York and surrounding country." Thus writes Mrs. Marion Reeve, in a letter dated at Cornwall, N. Y., to Dr. David Kennedy, Rondout, N. Y. Is any extended comment needed on this? One Dollar a bottle. All Druggists sell it.

MISCELLANEOUS READING.

THE HEIR OF HEATHCOTE.

'You give me no hope?'

'None whatever. My only answer can but re-echo the same story. I love you. Heaven alone knows how dearly. When I am with you Hugh, it seems as though I were in paradise, for surely our souls were made to beat as one. Fate has been less kind, however, and our time of parting has come. After this night we must meet no more.'

'Alice, what am I to believe? Because of a foolish promise, given to a dying man, who was probably out of his mind at the time, you refuse to accept happiness. You love me, and yet, because of this promise, you will marry the heir of Heathcote.'

There was passion perceptible in the voice of the young man, either real or assumed; but she looked up into his face, her sweet blue eyes meeting his half-angry glance.

'Hugh, I have tried to explain it to you, but it seems as if you could not or would not understand. My father, in dying, made me promise to marry the heir of Heathcote.'

'Perhaps I was foolish to give him such a promise, but he lay there dying. Hugh, the parent I love so well that his death has left that what ever time can never fill, and I would not have refused his last request even had it been doubly foolish in me to grant it.'

'Like you, I now regret the act, but I cannot break my promise. It gives me greater pain than you will ever know; but, Hugh, my only love, we must part to meet no more under starlit skies and by the babbling brook, for to-morrow the man comes who is to be my husband.'

She almost choked while uttering the words; but with heroic fortitude subdued the emotion that threatened to overpower her.

He looked at her, a strong light in his eyes, but whether it was anger, jealousy or something else, the overshadowing branches would not allow her to discover.

Then he came close to her again and took her in his arms, almost crushing her slight form, but she did not resist, for it told her what power his love possessed, and though she gave him up voluntarily, yet it was a sweet thought to remember that he loved her, and she believed would come to her as a sort of consolation in the coldness of the future she had mapped out for herself.

He kissed her face passionately.

'My darling, you cannot mean it. Look at me, Alice; I am a strong man, full of the vigor of life, and with ambition beyond that of most men; but here I tell you truly and solemnly, that if I lose you I lose all hope in life. The future may look bright to others, but to me it will be a dreary waste from which escape by death would be welcome.'

'Hugh, you would not be foolish enough to think of suicide?' she asked quickly.

He laughed bitterly.

'Unfortunately, perhaps, I am one of those who would never resort to such an ending of life, for I am a Christian man, with hopes beyond the grave. What I meant was that, losing you, I would not care how soon death came to me. I ask you for the last time, Alice, will you marry the man you love, breaking the foolish promise, or wreck two, perhaps three lives, by carrying it out?'

She looked pitifully up into his face.

'Hugh, I can not, oh! I can not do as you wish. As long as I live the memory of my dead father and the broken vow would haunt me. Better that we part now.'

He turned as if to leave her in anger, but she uttered a plaintive cry that must have touched a heart of flint.

'Oh, Heaven! not that, Hugh; kiss me again, darling, and tell me you do not hate me because I believe in duty before love, for oh! I do love you, Hugh, with all my heart and soul. You do not know the anguish in my heart, at giving you up. Unless you hate me, Hugh, kiss me and forgive me.'

She sank down upon the little hammock at the foot of the old apple tree and where they had been seated, with the white blossoms raining down from above.

He looked at her again.

Perhaps pity was uppermost in his heart just then, for he could not refuse her plaintive cry. Coming back to her he bent down, took the sweet face between his hands, and gently kissed her.

'There is nothing to forgive little girl. Perhaps I have been a fool in loving you, but it is a dream I shall remember all my life. Good-by, and try to forget me. You will never see Hugh Norman again. I leave you to the heir of Heathcote, and may you be happy.'

Turning, he strode away.

Alice could not raise her head for some minutes, so violent was her emotion, and when she did it was only to catch a glimpse of his fast disappearing form.

'Gone! I am left alone, and with a breaking heart. Oh! Heaven give me strength to carry out my father's wish, cruel though it was. All that our life holds dear have I given up to marry the heir of Heathcote.'

Then she buried her face in her hands again and wept violently.

The apple blossoms fell upon her hair, the robin in the tree overhead whistled lustily, the men in the distant fields sang on their way home from their hard day's toil, but she heeded none of these.

It was long ere she arose, and the shadows of the coming night were not darker than that which lay upon her heart, for life held nothing that was bright to her.

Still she clung to the idea that she was making this terrible sacrifice to please the dead, and in so doing forgot that her father might, as Hugh said, have been out of his mind when he asked such a thing, and also that it was a sin to ruin several lives to please the dead.

When she came to think of it, this was a pure excuse, but she had gone too far to return now, for the heir of Heathcote, Mr. Randall, nephew of her father's old friend, would be on hand to-morrow, ready to carry out the wishes of his uncle and marry the girl whom he had never met face to face, though he had long had her picture.

The day broke.

Never had Alice spent such a night, and she was glad to see gray light of dawn appear, even though it was to consummate her anguish.

The afternoon came, and evening was not far away.

Would he never come and end her anguish!

She sat up in her room, dressed for the sacrifice, as she bitterly said to herself. All the while she would not allow her thoughts to travel back to Hugh, though ever before her eyes his reproachful face would rise.

All at once a cold thrill went through her whole frame, as if, according to the old superstition, some one was walking over her grave.

The sound of carriage wheels reached her ears. He had come.

In her heart she prayed he might read the anguish on her face and refuse her hand. It would be the most noble act he could perform, and yet she was afraid, for she knew her beauty, and that when the heir of Heathcote had seen her he would be more than human if he voluntarily gave her up.

Never before had she so hated the fatal loveliness that had crowned her queen of every assemblage in which she had part.

Who could describe her feelings as she sat there listening to the sound of approaching wheels?

There was a strange war going on in her breast, in which the many emotions to which the human heart is susceptible held fierce sway.

Then she rose up, outwardly calm, and with a determined look on her face.

'The time has come when I must fulfill my promise to the dead. Oh, spirit of my lost father, give me strength in this trying hour. Farewell, Hugh, my darling. Henceforth our paths lie apart. With you I leave all hope of happiness.'

She was prepared to go down to meet her future husband; but, oh, what a hollow mockery it all was.

As well might she prepare for her funeral, for all the interest she took in the matter. She could not help looking lovely, for even in rags that face would have drawn the attention of all by its extreme beauty.

The heir of Heathcote stood in the parlor, which was shaded by curtains from the glaring light of day, and at this evening hour had a dim shadowy appearance.

She saw his figure by the window and walked toward him, not daring to look up, for a fit of trembling had seized upon her.

He gently put his arms around her and drew the slender form to him.

'Has my bride no greeting for her intended husband? Alice, darling, look up,' said a musical voice close to her ear.

She almost shrieked in astonishment.

'Hugh!' she gasped, 'is it you? They told me it was the heir of Heathcote, Mr. Randall.'

"And so it is; not Hugh Norman, but Hugh Randall, the heir of Heathcote. You will forgive me, darling, for deceiving you, but I would not wed you unless I had your love, and the only way I could get this was to come in disguise. All that I regret is the pain that I have been compelled to bring upon you in carrying out my little project to the end, and I shall strive to wipe that out by the happiness of the future. Are you glad, Alice, darling?'

Glad? One look into her face was enough to tell him that she was supremely happy, and we can only add that the future was one of rosy-tinted bliss to the heir of Heathcote and his charming wife.

NICODEMUS DODGE.

When I was a boy in a printing office in Missouri, a loose-jointed, long-legged, tow-headed, jeans-clad, countrified cub of about sixteen lounged in one day, and without removing his hands from the depths of his trousers' pockets, or taking off his faded ruin of a slouch hat, whose broken brim hung limp and ragged about his ears like a bug eaten cabbage leaf, stared indifferently around, then leaning his hip against the editor's table, crossed his mighty brogans, aimed at a distant fly from a crevice in his upper teeth, laid him low, and said with composure:

"Whar's the boss?"

"I'm the boss," said the editor, following this curious bit of architecture wandering along up to its clock face with his eye.

"Don't want anybody fur to learn the business, 'taint likely?"

"Well, I don't know. Would you like to learn it?"

"Pap's so po' he can't run me no mo', so I want to get a show somers, if I can, 'taint no difference what—I'm strong and hearty, and I don't turn my back on no kind of work, hard nur soft."

"Do you think you would like to learn the printing business?"

"Well, I don't re'ly k'yer a durn what I do learn, so's I git a chance fur to make my way. I'd jist as soon learn print'n's anything."

"Can you read?"

"Yes—middlin'."

"Write?"

"Well, I've seed people could lay over me thar."

"Cipher?"

"Not good enough to keep store, I don't reckon, but as fur as twelve times twelve I ain't no slouch. 'Tother side that is what gits me."

"Where is your home?"

"I'm from Shelby."

"What's your father's religious denomination?"

"Him? Oh he's a blacksmith."

"No, no—I don't mean his trade. What's his religious denomination?"

"Oh—I didn't understand you befo,' He's a Freemason."

"No—no, you don't get my meaning yet. What I mean is does he belong to any church?"

"Now you're talkin'. Couldn't make out what you was trying to git through yo' head no way. Belong to a church! Why boss, he's been the pizenest kind of a Freewill Baptist for forty years. They ain't no pisener one's he is. Mighty good man, pap is. Everybody says that. If they said any different they wouldn't said it where I was—not much they wouldn't."

"What is your own religion?"

"Well, boss, you've kind o' got me thar—and yit you hain't got me so mighty much nuther. I think 't if a feller helps another when he's in trouble and don't cuss, and don't do any mean things, nor nuth'n' he ain't no business to do, and don't spell the Saviour's name with a small g, he ain't running no risks—he's about as saft as if he belonged to a church."

"But suppose he did spell it with a little g—what then?"

"Well, if he done it a purpose, I reckon he wouldn't stand no chance—he oughtn't to have no chance, anyway, I'm most rotten certain 'bout that."

"What is your name?"

"Nicodemus Dodge."

"I think maybe you'll do, Nicodemus. We'll give you a trial, anyway."

"All right."

"When would you like to begin?"

"Now."

So, within ten minutes after we had first glimpsed at this nondescript he was one of us, and with his coat off and hard at it.

Beyond that end of our establishment which was furthest from the street was a deserted garden, pathless, and thickly grown with the gloomy and villainous "jimpson" weed and its common friend the stately sunflower. In the midst of this mournful spot was a decayed and aged little "frame" house with but one room, one window and no ceiling—it had been a smoke-house a generation before. Nicodemus was given this lonely and ghostly den as a bed-chamber.

The village smarties recognized a treasure in Nicodemus, right away—a butt to play jokes on. It was easy to see that he was inconceivably green and confiding. George Jones had the glory of perpetrating the first joke on him. He gave him a cigar with a fire-cracker in it, and winked to the crowd to come; the thing exploded presently and swept away the bulk of Nicodemus' eyebrows and eyelashes. He simply said:

"I consider them kind of seegyars dangersome," and seemed to suspect nothing. The next evening Nicodemus waylaid George and poured a bucket of ice water over him.

One day, while Nicodemus was in swimming, Tom McElroy "tied" his clothes. Nicodemus made a bonfire of Tom's by way of retaliation.

A third joke was played upon Nicodemus a day or two later—he walked up the middle aisle of the village church, Sunday night, with a staring handbill pinned upon his shoulders. The joker spent the rest of the night, after church, in the cellar of a deserted house, and Nicodemus sat on the cellar door till toward breakfast time, to make sure that the prisoner remembered that if any noise was made some rough treatment would be the consequence. The cellar had two feet of stagnant water in it, and was bottomed with six inches of soft mud.

But I wander from the point. It was the subject of skeletons that brought this boy back to my recollection. Before a long time had elapsed the village smarties began to feel an uncomfortable consciousness of not having made a very shining success out of their attempts on the simpleton of "Old Shelby." Experiments grew scarce and chary. Now the young doctor came to the rescue. There was delight and applause when he proposed to them the plan of frightening Nicodemus to death, and explained how he was going to do it. He had a noble new skeleton—the skeleton of the late and only local celebrity, Jimmy Finn, the village drunkard—a grisly piece of property he had bought of Jimmy Finn himself, at auction, for fifty dollars, under great competition, when Jimmy lay very sick in the tanyard a fortnight before his death. The fifty dollars had gone promptly for whisky, and had considerably hurried up the change of ownership in the skeleton. The doctor would put Jimmy's skeleton in Nicodemus' bed.

This was done—about half-past ten in the evening. About Nicodemus' usual bedtime—midnight—the village jokers came creeping stealthily through the jimpson weeds and sunflowers toward the lonely frame den. They reached the window and peeped in. There sat the long-legged pauper on his bed in a very short shirt and nothing more. He was dangling his legs contentedly back and forth, and wheezing the music of "Camptown Races" out of a paper overlaid comb which he was pressing against his mouth; by him lay a new jew's-harp, a new top, a solid india rubber ball, a handful of painted marbles, five pounds of "store" candy and a well gnawed slab of ginger bread as big and thick as a volume of sheet music. He had sold the skeleton to a traveling quack for three dollars, and was enjoying the result.—From Mark Twain's New Book, "A Tramp Abroad."

A GLASGOW MISER.

Robert Carrick, of the renowned Glasgow Ship Bank Company, was one of the greatest scrubs in money matters that Glasgow ever knew. He died about fifty years ago worth nearly a million sterling, leaving no family of his own, and not a farthing to any one of the charitable institutions of his city. His housekeeper, an elderly dame, Miss Paisley, was his favorite neice. They lived in a dark, dingy building; and, while Robert Carrick was famed for his great banking negotiations in the flat below, Miss Paisley was notorious for the most miserly management in the flat above. She would higgle with the shopkeepers in the neighborhood about the price of a pound of cheese, and if "Robin," as he was called, had a dinner party (of rare occurrence), she would be seen hurrying from the fish market in King street with a sheep's head and a string of flounders, and she invariably stipulated with the green grocers in the Candleriggs that if any apples or pears should be left over after the dessert at Robin's table they should be taken back on the following morning, and full value allowed for them.

No wonder Robin amassed riches by this way of living? On one occasion he was waited on by a deputation of three citizens for a subscription to some public charity or other, then of pressing importance. They expected that he, being a banker, and well knowing the urgent circumstances, would head the list with a handsome sum. To their mortification he would only give "twa guineas." When they pressed him a little, he replied, "he could not afford to give them any more," and bowed them out of the room. Not far from the bank was the warehouse of John M'Ilquham, then doing a good stroke of business in Glasgow. When the deputation waited on him, he glanced over the list of subscribers, but mused and remarked on the trifling amount given by Banker Carrick. The gentlemen told him the reason they had got, viz, "that he could not afford to give any more."

"What is that you say?" exclaimed old M'Ilquham, rising from his seat with bristling indignation.

They repeated the answer truly.

"James," said he to his cashier, "bring me the Ship Bank book, and a cheque, and a pen." With that he filled up the check for £15,000 sterling. "Run down," he said, "as fast as you can, and take care and get that money for me, and the gentlemen here will please wait till ye come back."

The cheque was presented. Robin stared and rubbed his spectacles more than once.

"Go back," said he, "to Mr. M'Ilquham, with my compliments, and say there must be some mistake here."

"What!" said he, when that message was brought to him, "will he not give me my own money out of the bank? Go back instantly and tell him there is no mistake whatever on my part. I'm waiting for the money."

On this Robin got nervous and alarmed, for there had been an understanding between him and his customer that when an unusual supply of money was required, a day or two's notice was to be given.

"What's wrong with you?" said the banker, as he toddled up, finding it necessary now so to do, to Mr. M'Ilquham's warehouse. "What's wrong with you today, Mr. M'Ilquham?"

"Nothing wrong with me, I hope, Mr. Carrick, but there's surely something very far wrong with yourself, for when those decent gentlemen sitting yonder called for me they mentioned that you could not afford to give more than twa guineas for this excellent subscription, and if that is the case it is high time for me to look after my deposits in your hands."

This led to a pleasing result. Robin, at the instigation of the worthy merchant, now put down his name for fifty guineas. Mr. M'Ilquham cancelled the cheque, and the collecting deputation went away delighted. What the banker's private feelings were can easily be imagined.

READ THE EVIDENCE

Which will Remove All Your Doubts—A Good Investment—One that Yields "AN HUNDRED FOLD."

The world is full of charlatans asking public attention to patent inventions for the mitigation of suffering. Everything claiming the power to do good should be from a reputable source, otherwise it is open to suspicion. Dr. David Kennedy, of Rondout, N. Y., affirms that his medicine, "Kennedy's Favorite Remedy," is the best article of its kind ever produced. Hence it is only just to the public that he refer to his record as a physician and surgeon. Among the capital operations performed by him are: Amputation of the thigh-bone in the case of Abraham Elsworth, Port Ewen, Ulster Co., N. Y.; amputation of the arm, case of Mrs. Edward Meyers, of Rondout, N. Y., and the operation of lithotomy (removal of stone from the bladder), in the case of Simon Tietsell, of Kingston, and the removal of the eye for Oscar Craigg, of Rosendale, Ulster Co., N. Y. These are a few of many. All these persons fully recovered because Dr. Kennedy prescribed "Favorite Remedy" (which has unequaled powers of purifying the blood). Owing to the use of "Favorite Remedy" in the after-treatment of his surgical cases, not one has died; all are living to this day in the bloom of health. Dr. Kennedy's "Favorite Remedy," for sale by all druggists. $1.00 per bottle.

HEADACHE

DIRECTIONS. For Catarrh, Hay Fever, Cold in the Head, &c., insert with little finger a particle of the Balm into the nostrils; draw strong breaths through the nose. It will be absorbed, cleansing and healing the diseased membrane. For Deafness, Apply a particle in to the ear.

ELY'S CREAM BALM

Effectually cleanses the nasal passages of Catarrhal virus, causing healthy secretions, allays inflammation and irritation, protects the membranal linings of the head from additional colds, completely heals the sores and restores the sense of taste and smell. Beneficial results are realized by a few applications. A thorough treatment as directed will cure Catarrh. As a household remedy for cold in the head it is unequaled. The Balm is easy to use and agreeable. Sold by druggists at 50 cents. On receipt of 50 cents will mail a package. Send for circular with full information. ELY'S CREAM BALM CO., Owego, N. Y.

"MERIT MUST REAP ITS JUST REWARD."

Of the many Catarrh and Hay Fever remedies we keep in stock there is none of which our customers speak more highly than of Ely's Cream Balm. A comparatively new discovery, but one which, from the many reports and evidences of cures produced, is destined to be a leading article. We have never handled a remedy which has increased so rapidly in sales or that has given such universal satisfaction. Price, 50 cents.

TUBULAR HOT-BLAST NON-EXPLOSIVE

Oil or Gas Stoves!

THE REASONS WHY THE TUBULAR HOT-BLAST OIL OR GAS STOVE IS SUPERIOR TO ALL OTHERS:

Its appearance is more like a stove than anything that has yet been offered.

It requires no wire gauze or water tank to make it safe.

A continual current of air passes to the burners over the Oil Pot, preventing the oil from getting warmer than the atmosphere in which it is burning. The bake oven is not in the way of the kettle or boiler.

Baking, roasting, and boiling can all be done at once, and in less time than with any other oil stove. The No. 3 or Three-Burner Stove will make 12 inches of pure white flame at a cost of 1¼ cts. per hour. The reservoir holds four quarts of oil, sufficient to burn for twelve hours.

The No. 4 or 4-Burner Stove will make 16 inches of white flame at a cost of 2 cents per hour. The reservoir holds 5 quarts of oil sufficient to burn for twelve hours.

The No. 3 Stove will consume between three and four cents worth of gas per hour.

The No. 4 will consume between four and five cents worth of gas per hour.

No. 4, with four 4 inch burners, including oven; $15

POETRY.

TO MY LITTLE BOYS.

BY MARIE.

Three little winsome laddies
As 'twas ever your lot to see,
Dwell in my heart and home to-day,
Making life sweet to me.

There is Willie, with royal beauty,
And Frankie, with earnest eyes,
And Baby, fair and spotless
Like a snow-flake from the skies.

Sometimes I am heart-sick and weary,
And I long for the promised "rest,"
Then the happy laughing faces
I clasp to my aching breast.

Ah! the merry, childish voices,
How they drive dull care away,
How oft the sad heart rejoices
While watching their pretty play.

My little jewels I call them,
Fit for a "Monarch's" crown,
And yet if the King should crave one,
Would I lay it willingly down?

Would I trust my darling to Jesus,
And homeward walk alone?
"And say, though my heart was breaking,
Lord take him, he is thine own.

I look at my boys sleeping sweetly
In their snowy curtained beds,
My tears fall fast and softly
On the dear little golden heads.

My darlings, oh! my darlings,
Without you what would life be?
"And I cry aloud in my anguish,
Lord spare them all to me."

Is it wicked to pray thus I wonder?
Then I hear through the gloom of the night
A voice saying clearly and sweetly,
"The Lord will do what is right."

Ah! this is what Christ is speaking
To rebellious hearts like mine;
Oh! keep me from earthly idols,
Not my will Lord, but thine.

BRIMBLECOMBE'S BET.

If you had known Brimblecombe you would not have been surprised at the bet which he made with his friend Wrixton last winter.

It was this: Brimblecombe made a wager of a basket of champagne and game dinner at Taft's, that he would live a month in Wrixton's house without being found out by the family, and that during that time he would not suffer from hunger or endure any particular discomfort.

It was about the beginning of the New Year when the singular bet was made, and when the spring came, Wrixton had forgotten all about it. This, however, was not the case with Brimblecombe. He had a good memory, and he longed for that bird and fish repast by the sounding sea.

So one night he made his appearance at Wrixton's back door, after the household had retired to rest, and vainly tried to open it. It was so firmly locked that it effectually resisted the pressure of Brimblecombe's stout shoulders. Then he tried the windows, and by great good fortune, as he thought then, he found that one of them had been carelessly left unfastened. He immediately proceeded to lift it previous to propelling his body through the opening, when he discovered that there was a stout grip on his shoulder, and turning was met face to face with the bearer of a billy. The impliment mentioned, speedily came in contact with his cranium, and he measured his length upon the greensward. While in this helpless condition a pair of handcuffs were slipped over his wrists, and suddenly there appeared sleepily from a neighboring doorway another blue-coated guardian of the law. On being placed between them he felt instinctively that his destination was the station-house.

Explanations were useless. How could a man excuse an attempt at house-breaking?

Brimblecombe did not want to summon Wrixton, for notwithstanding the fact that he had received a broken head in his attempts to take the first step toward winning his wager, he still hankered after the flesh pots of Point Shirley. Therefore he meekly allowed himself to be put into a cell. Here he passed the night dreaming that he was trying to devour a turbot as big as a whale, and that he finally into the stomach of the fish, where he met Wrixton in the character of Jonah, and explained matters in the most satisfactory manner hopelible. A change, however, came over the spirit of his dream, when he awoke to find himself in a close omnibus with a number of disreputable characters who inquired in the most disgustingly familiar manner, "What are you for?"

Luckily the magistrate before whom he was brought was a friend who was familiar with the story of the wager. He discharged Brimblecombe without much ado, not neglecting at the same time to give him a lecture on the folly of practical jokes in general and the one he was to perpetrate in particular.

This, however, did not cure Brimblecombe. He was bound to cut and come again, and so, after two weeks spent in the seclusion of the country to allow his battered countenance to return to its normal condition, he found himself in town once more, determined to get into Wrixton's house at midnight or die in the attempt.

His second effort was made on a dismally rainy night, when, as a matter of course, no policemen were abroad, and not wishing to encumber himself he was naturally wet to the skin. Notwithstanding all this, he thought himself particularly lucky, once more, for he discovered the covering had been left off the coal hole and being a small man he believed he could squeeze through the opening.

On trial he learned that he was not mistaken, though his somewhat large head struck frequently during his descent of the inclined plane, with a pertinacity that nearly suffocated him.

He landed, of course, in the coal bin and then his troubles really began. He did not dare to strike a light for fear of attracting attention, and he groped his way about in a vain endeavor to find the stairway, stumbling over innumerable obstacles, and receiving contusion upon contusion, until he felt that he must be black and blue from the crown of his head to the soles of his feet. He was about to give up his search in despair when he met with another obstacle, and putting his hand down to feel what it was, he joyfully came to the conclusion that he was at the foot of the long-sought-for ascent.

Taking his last fall as a token of good luck, he gaily tripped up the stairs, only to find that the door at their head was stoutly bolted on the other side. Here was an unlooked-for barrier, and he sat down to consider what his next move would be.

Worn out with his ridiculous labors he fell fast asleep, and was only awakened when the early rising domestic opened the door to procure fuel to light the kitchen fire. When he realized his position he darted past her with the velocity of a cat who has been found meddling with forbidden fruit.

"Tare and ouns, look at the nager!" was the exclamation of the frightened girl, as she let the coal hod fall with a bang that awakened the whole household.

When the unfortunate but undaunted Brimblecombe reached the street he ran plump into a group of boys who were evidently bound on a picnic and primed for fun and when they caught the first glimpse of Brimblecombe they set up a shout that made the welkin ring, and one more adventurous and inventive than the rest, shouted:

"Hello! Here's a Zulu escaped from Barnum's big show; let's capture him!"

Down the street they started after the unfortunate fugitive, while he, at a loss what to do next, plunged into a neighboring tap-room, where the attendant, thinking he was an early coal-heaver who wished to slake his thirst with a refreshing draught of malt liquor, kindly barred the door against his remorseless pursuers.

In a few words, accompanied by the dollar which always unlocks the popular heart, Brimblecombe briefly explained the situation, and was furnished with soap and towels necessary to recall the Circassian bloom which usually adorned his sanguine countenance. These, nevertheless, could not restore his boiled shirt and light pantaloons to their primitive hues, and his new friend was obliged to call a hack, into which Brimblecombe jumped and was rapidly conveyed to his boarding place.

Here his landlady shook her head ominously, as she peered through the basement blinds, and said:

"I am afraid Mr. Brimblecombe is getting into a bad way. I shall move Laura to the other end of the table this very day. Mr. Earlybird will make her a much better husband."

Meanwhile Brimblecombe reached his own room, and as he overhauled his wardrobe for clean clothing, he murmured with the decisive air which had distinguished the Brimblecombes for centuries, as is shown in the pictures at Brimblecombe Hall:

"Failure number second, but I'm not conquered yet."

Sure enough, he was not. The very next night found him at Wrixton's front door. He knew that his friend was at a club dinner, and would not return until after twelve o'clock, and consequently only the latch-key stood between him and the accomplishment of his wishes. By a simple device, which he learned when he was an inmate of his father's house in those green and salad days when he was denied the use of a latch-key, he opened the door. This consisted simply in the use of a lead pencil as a lever, in a particular manner which Brimblecombe had never yet revealed to even his most intimate friend.

He was at last within the walls of Wrixton's dwell place, and no one knew of his whereabouts. All was still as death, save for the beating of the clock, and the low breathing of mother and children, which fell upon his listening ear. A low light in the hall, evidently left for Wrixton's accommodation, revealed to him his surroundings, and guided his footsteps. Cautiously he proceeded up stairs, each step giving forth a sound that would pass unnoticed in the daytime, but which seemed now, in his nervously apprehensive state, like the sharp report of a pistol. Two flights brought him to a chamber in which two children were peacefully slumbering, and by the rays of the moon which shone through the window, Brimblecombe saw that there was another door leading from this apartment beside the one by which he had entered.

He resolved to try to find where it led, and was overjoyed when it swung open, not without a creaking of its hinges to discover that there was a skylight above through which friendly Luna smiled upon him in the most inviting manner. Here, then, was what he sought—an old-fashioned and little-frequented garret; and he proceeded to seek rest in its dusky shades.

Just then the children, evidently awakened by the betraying hinge, turned uneasily in their beds and cried, "Mamma," and a light footstep was heard coming from a neighboring apartment. Brimblecombe had just time to get out of the way, when he heard the mother's voice soothing the children to rest, and telling them they had been dreaming. One of them was quite persistent in saying that she saw a man in the room, but the maternal answer was that she had been suffering from nightmare, and must not be frightened. Then all was still again, and Brimblecombe threw himself on a ragged old lounge and slept the sleep of the just.

In the morning Brimblecombe was somewhat dazed both by the bright beams of the sun and the strange apartment in which he found himself. It was a long, low attic, with sloping sides and a rough, unfinished ceiling. Through the centre ran an uneven brick chimney.

It was rather a hot place for a month's stay, Brimbleton thought, but it was roomy enough, and he opened the windows and felt more comfortable. He could hear the family already astir below him, and began to feel hungry.

In his anxiety to get into the house he had neglected to provide himself with rations, and it now occurred to him that in order to win his wager he must follow the example of those illustrious fasters who have furnished food for the newspapers, while they daily deprive themselves of proper nourishment. Luck, however, came to his assistance. From the conversation of the female portion of the family he discovered that a picnic was in contemplation, and not many hours elapsed before he saw, from a coign of vantage, two carriages drive from the front door, bearing the young Wrixtons and the two domestics who made their lives miserable.

This gave Brimblecombe the run of the house, and he improved it. He first took a needed bath, and then helped himself to one of Wrixton's shirts; then he inspected the well-filled larder and partook of a substantial breakfast. This done, he bore off in triumph such provisions as he thought would not be immediately missed to his eyrie, and spent the rest of the day in reading Wrixton's books, drinking his wine and smoking his cigars.

At night Brimblecombe did not need to be told, like Box or Cox, to go to his attic. He retreated to that elevated locality without command or entreaty. Emphatically he knew on which side his bread was buttered, and having succeeded thus far, he did not intend to be finally defeated.

But it was quite plain, even to his sanguine mind, that there could not be a picnic every day and that his stock of edibles, even with the utmost economy, must speedily be consumed. Therefore he set about inventing means for further raids into the enemy's country. From one corner of his attic home he excavated a box of candles. This was so much in his favor. Helping himself to a small portion of its contents, he waited until midnight, and lighting it, proceeded slowly down stairs in his stocking feet.

This became his nightly custom, and at last so expert did he become in letting his feet fall lightly that even the most expert red man of the plains in his most wakeful moments could not detect a sound.

And he was not lonely in his retreat, for he found several piles of old magazines, which furnished very entertaining reading, and the roof of the kitchen L, which was not overlooked by any of the neighboring houses, and upon which he could step from a convenient window, afforded him a cool and snug harbor, where he could puff Wrixton's fragrant Havanas. Once he came near being discovered here by a child who had come to the garret in search of some discarded plaything, but he dodged behind the chimney just in time to avoid observation.

It was the morning of the thirty-first day of Brimblecombe's strange visit, and, moreover, the first of the month. Wrixton sat at the breakfast table, with a pile of bills before him.

"It strikes me, my love," said he, in that mild voice which first won his Arabella's kind consideration, "that our expenses have been twice as large this month as usual. Here the laundress has brought in an account in which I am represented as wearing double the usual amount of underclothing, to say nothing of the white linen shirts for which she has not accounted, though I bought two dozen new ones this spring; besides, our grocer's bill, particularly in the item of cigars and liquors, is frightfully large."

"Well, my dear," answered she, with that asperity of manner which she could so well assume when she felt that she had been injured by being deprived of the requisite amount of pin money, "I always told you that you were ruinously extravagant."

"Don't say a word," broke in Brimblecombe's cheery voice, as its owner walked into the breakfast room with a beard of a month's growth. "I am a culprit. For over four weeks I have enjoyed your hospitality and won my wager."

"Don't believe it," growled Wrixton.

"Count the shirts bearing your name that make a pyramid on yonder attic floor, and be convinced," ejaculated the elated Brimblecombe, in a melo-dramatic manner.

The bet was won, and Brimblecombe's disappearance, which had been so widely chronicled in the newspapers, was accounted for.

A CHICAGO GIRL AT CONCORD.

A young lady on the West Side has just returned from Boston. While there her uncle, who is a reporter on a sporting paper, took her to the Summer School of Philosophy at Concord. She heard some one read an essay on "The Absoluteness of Absolutism," and became infatuated with the doctrine taught.

"Chawles," said she to her lover the other evening (he is a clerk in a harness store), "Chawles, do you realize that you cannot differentiate the indissoluble absoluteness of the absolute?"

"No," he replied, "to tell you the truth I don't;" and, as it was the first time he had seen her since she got back, the suggestion uttered struck him with some alarm.

"Do you ever stop to inquire," she began again, "into the inchoation of the rudimentary incipience of the rhapsodical coagmentation of your thoughts of love?"

"Well, not to speak of," he said.

"Then, if there is one drop of blood in your heart that pulsates for me; if there is one conceit, noscopic or psycological, that in the incogitancy of your dreams, or in the perquisition of your waking hours, absorbs a thought of me, I beg that you would eliminate any abstruse or equivocal particles of distrust from the profound and all-transpicuous abnormality of your love."

"Great heavens, Maria, have you swallowed a dictionary?"

"No, I have not," she said, with a look of stern and forbidding displeasure; "I have been to the School of Philosophy at Concord."

A TRICK THAT OUGHT TO BE PATENTED.

Some time ago the Virginian reported numerous depredations by dogs upon the sheepfolds in a certain neighborhood in Bedford county, in some cases, the farmers losing all their sheep. At the time, the names of the heaviest losers were printed, the number of dogs killed approximated. Subsequently, a well-known farmer, who owns a large boundary of land in the same neighborhood, complained that a raid had been made upon the sheep in which he lost nearly twenty, and indicated his opinion that a certain dog belonging to one of his neighbors who had positively refused to permit his dog to be killed in the previous general massacre, was one of the guilty ones, and asked that the dog be then killed.

To this the owner vehemently objected, avowing that his dog never touched a sheep and threatened to visit consuming wrath upon any person who dared to trouble or rumple a hair on his ugly cur's worthless hide.

The owner of the slaughtered sheep merely remarked that was "all right," and good humoredly said good-by to the owner of the dog. Upon reaching home he had all the dead sheep hauled to a convenient point and laid out in regular grave yard style. He then built a fence of rails about twelve feet high, and about ten feet square at the ground, and gradually diminishing in dimensions until it was not more than five feet square at the top. He then retired to his home and awaited results, knowing that even a clumsy hound could climb the fence and jump into the pen, but that not even a greyhound could escape from it.

The next morning, gun in hand, he visited the place and planted his bullet in the head of the obnoxious dog which the master had before refused to kill, and the remaining ones were then systematically and coolly dispatched. On the third morning he completed the roster of the dead, and found that it footed up forty-six dogs, including fifteen or twenty which had never before been seen in that vicinity. At last accounts the carcasses of the sheep and dogs were all lying in a confused heap, and it is said the bark of a dog in that neighborhood now would cure the most aggravated case of hereditary deafness.—Lynchburg Virginian.

THE WIDTH AV THE DURE.

"I want a piece uv a board sawed off, planed on the outside," said Mr. Donlevy; "we'd a few frinds in at the house lasht night to a christenin', and the lower panel av the dure got kicked out durin' the merriment."

"How wide do you want the piece cut, sir?" asked the carpenter.

"The width av the dure, av course," replied Mr. Donlevy.

"And how wide is the door?"

"Well, it's as wide as a chair is long, jist. Ye kin jist lay a chair across it to kape the childer in an' the pigs out, an' it fits as though it wor matched fur it."

"But all chairs are not the same size," said the carpenter.

"Aw, thunder and turf! yer thicker headed nor a railroad spike! The chair comes up jist even wid the edge av the windy sill."

"But how high is the window sill?" asked Mr. Chips.

"Bother the badgerin' tongue o' ye," growled Mr. Donlevy, "it's only the widness av me hand, barrin' the thumb, higher than the rain wather that sthands outside, and ay ye's can't make it from that ye lave the job an' I'll take it to som carpinther that understands his business an' knows the measure av a dure in his head widout makin' a chatycasm av him self. Say, can ye cut me a piece aff the size av that ye leather-headed wood butcher, ye, or will go find a man av your craft that has half the sinse ye wur born wid?"

And he had to go and find one.—Hawkeye.

The American Iron and Steel Association of Philadelphia suggests the holding of a convention on behalf of "an intelligent and equitable revision of the tariff laws."

That is a sensible proposition and comes from an unexpected quarter.

To revise the present bungling tariff, not in a spirit of partisanship, but with practical business knowledge and a just regard for every industrial pursuit, is what the country urgently needs.

ANTI MONOPOLY.

A member of the Board of Assessors of Long Island City refuses to sign the assessment rolls as made out by his colleagues, because, as he asserts, the Standard Oil Company, a giant monopoly, is thereby taxed for only about one-eighth of actual property value, and consequently, the tax-rate of small property holders is greatly increased.

That Assessor is entitled to double honor.

Firstly—for bringing to public notice the plundering greed of monopolists, and

Secondly—for defending the rights of small down-trodden property owners.

It is time for the people to rise in opposition to all monopolies.

The battle must be fought.

A GLEAM OF HOPE.

The defeat of a notoriously corrupt Republican State Senator for renomination in the Cattaraugus District, New York, is a favorable omen for the cause of honest government and as such deserves applause.

The political trader in question has been for years not only active in the work of partisan depravity, but a brazen-faced boaster of his rascally skill, and at the present time, stands indicted by the Grand Jury of Albany County for bribery committed as a member of the last Legislature.

The rejection of such a man as a public representative affords a gleam of hope that the day approaches when the political sky will be cleared of the pestilential vapors now obscuring it. If the purifying storm of popular indignation will extend its sweeping force from Cattaraugus to the uttermost parts of the land, great will be the blessings thereby conferred upon an outraged people and disgraced country.

Reform should be the rallying cry of all parties.

Not reform as an idle word, but as a cutting sword.

There is no earthly reason why political scoundrels should be honored with office, when those of another hue, and not a particle worse, are locked up in prison.

THE CRAMER CASE.

The preliminary hearing in the case of James and Walter Malley, on a charge of having murdered Jennie Cramer, was begun before Justice Booth at West Haven, Monday last. Messrs. Bush and Bollman appearing for the State and Blydenburgh and Fox as counsel for the accused.

Counsel for the State announced that the separate complaints made against the accused had writs nolle prosequi entered against them, and a single complaint had been entered in their stead. This complaint contains five different specifications as to the manner of the alleged murder—drowning, chloroform, arsenic, drugs and liquors, causing congestion of the brain, and force, causing smothering and suffocation.

They were called upon to answer and both the defendants replied "not guilty."

AT LONG BRANCH.

The President seems to have borne his journey to Long Branch remarkably well, suffering less from the attendant fatigue and excitement than was expected. But the reports of his condition since are certainly far from cheering. There by the sea, with the purest air this side of the Rocky Mountains to breathe, his chances of recovery are largely increased. He has shown such remarkable physical vitality and moral courage already, that, unless he is too much reduced for his recuperative powers to act, there is now a basis for hope. But the country will wait with profound anxiety to see how he rallies from the fatigue, and whether he can tide over the end of the week, when a relapse is likely to occur. Once fairly set out on the road to recovery, his restoration will be merely a question of time.

But it is a still most serious question whether he can live many days where he is. Slowly but surely his life seems to be ebbing out in spite of all that medical skill, backed by the active sympathy of the whole nation, can do to save him. If he should recover, it will be regarded as a marvel of physical persistency and recuperative power, and the men who believe in the efficacy of prayer, even in producing physical effects, will plausibly claim that the event has confirmed their theory. The hope for his recovery is almost universal, but it is a hope which has nothing more substantial than the kind wishes and profound sympathies of the people to rest upon.

The proclamation met with the earnest approval of every citizen of the State, and its suggestions were universally observed in this city. Religious exercises were held in the M. E. Church and Trinity Reformed, at which ministers of all denominations were present and took part. Prayers were also offered in the Church of the Holy Cross, North Plainfield. During the hours set apart for prayers all the business places of the city were closed.

* * *

The picture presented by the fates of Jennie Cramer at New Haven, and Louisa Huber in Philadelphia—one murdered in her first step in the giddy path to ruin and the latter betrayed and seeking oblivion from shame in death—is one in which is centered a world of thought. The picture is sad, turn it any way you will, and from it may be learned a lesson which if heeded may save the peace, honor and happiness of many a family. Day and night the scenes to be witnessed on the streets, at resorts of pleasure-seekers, at the camp meetings, the harvest homes, the churches, and even at the very homes of our citizens, on the part of young men and women, while not in themselves criminal are, at least, suggestive of a lack of decency and modesty that betoken a training in the right way. A looseness of that parental sway and governance that it is the duty of those whose care should be to shield the young fledgling, as it were, from harm, is alarmingly visible, and it often occurs that the old saying "boys will be boys and girls will be girls" is so much observed by fathers and mothers nowadays, that before they are aware of it those boys and girls are beyond their control, have formed circles of acquaintances they would blush to own at the homely fireside, and have taken wing to scenes and pleasures unhallowed and unclean. Then like a crash comes the story of ruin and disgrace, perhaps of death, as in the cases cited.

The fate of these two unfortunates is but the reflection of many others reported in the daily press—young men, defaulters and fugitives; young girls, ruined and worse than dead—whose fall was a seven days' scandal and then forgotten, except by those whose neglect of duty assisted in bringing about the sorrow that will accompany them through life.

It is a warning that could be heeded by many of our own people with profit. Young ladies and girls who should be at home and abed, are to be seen nightly upon our streets behaving more like the blase roue or demi monde than the possessors of the good reputation they are presumed to bear. Who is responsible for this and its probable consequences is a question which parents and guardians must answer. To them this lesson of the fate of Jennie Cramer, Louisa Huber and a host of others is presented. It is to be hoped it will not be neglected.—Trenton True American.

The President's Removal.

The President having become reduced to the last point of feebleness and growing worse on Saturday, without a subsequent recovery of lost ground, it was decided to remove him from Washington. Immediately upon such decision, preparations were commenced at once, and at 2 o'clock Monday morning 20 laborers in the employ of the Baltimore and Potomac Railroad Company began laying a temporary track from the main line, just beyond the car-sheds in Sixth street, to the asphalt on Pennsylvania avenue a distance of 750 feet. Heavy wooden ties were placed upon the Docca cobble-stones and the rails were fastened upon them in the usual way. Then the spaces between the ties were ballasted with gravel and dirt. At 7 o'clock the force of workmen was increased by the arrival of 130 more employees, partly of the Alexandria and Fredericksburg Railroad Company, and partly of the Baltimore and Potomac Railroad Company. The job was completed in good shape by 2 o'clock in the afternoon.

The New York Times describes the car used by the President, as follows:

It is a combination baggage and smoking car, with sliding doors on the sides of the forward compartment. The partition in the centre has been partly removed, and two doors have been substituted which can be opened for the purpose of taking the President in and out. During the journey one door can be shut and bolted, leaving only a narrow passageway at one side. In the rear compartment, from which the seats have been removed, is the contrivance for holding the President's bed. It is arranged on the buckboard principle, and is of the simplest possible character. Two springy boards have been fastened by the ends to the molding at the sides of the car. They are about six feet distant from each other, and about two feet from the floor and across from side to side. To obviate any possible jarring, the edges of the boards rest on small cushions of plush. Resting upon thick cushions placed upon the boards in the centre is a box of pine about seven feet long, four and a half feet wide, and a foot deep. This leaves a space of about two feet on each side, but persons passing will be obliged to step over the boards. The box is filled with a double thickness of car cushions, and upon these it is proposed to place the mattress and bed upon which the patient is to lie during his journey. So nicely balanced is the whole arrangement that the slightest touch with the finger causes it to move up and down. A false roof has been placed inside the car to promote the circulation of air. A short distance from the head and foot of the bed-frame heavy curtains of green reps have been hung from side to side, extending from the false roof to the floor. The latter is thickly carpeted. All the windows have been provided with drab shades with patent rollers, and outside they are covered with fine wire screens to keep out the dust. Otherwise there is no attempt at ornamentation. There are two ice-chests in the front compartment, and a closet and several movable armchairs for the use of the surgeons and attendants. New trucks, with six wheels each and new springs, have been placed under the car, and the sides have been ballasted with heavy iron engine axles. There are storm doors at the front and rear. The outside of the car is painted red and the inside yellow. Its number is 268.

Immediately after the noon examination Monday, Drs. Agnew, Bliss and Barnes, and Col. Rockwell entered the President's carriage and were driven to the Sixth street station. Their arrival was anticipated, and the special train was in readiness with engine attached and steam up. The engine is numbered 569, and belongs to the New York Division. The baggage car, which is a duplicate of the Presidential car before it was altered, is numbered 59, and was placed directly behind the tender. The Presidential car came next, and in the rear was attached President Roberts' private palace car, in which the family and household were to ride. After the doctors had entered the Presidential car and made a brief inspection of the arrangements, the train pulled out and started for Benning's station, five miles distant. Passing through the city the progress was slow, but after reaching the suburbs the speed was gradually increased to 40 miles an hour and a marked decrease in oscillation was experienced. Soon after starting Dr. Bliss threw himself at full length upon the bed-frame. There was a continuous but gentle up and down motion of the bed, and the doctor thought the springs too limber. One of the accompanying railroad officers placed a short board upon the board under the head of the box and an immediate stiffening was apparent, which Dr. Bliss pronounced it just right. All the surgeons subsequently expressed expressed their delight with the arrangement in the most unqualified terms. The long tunnel was passed through. Anthracite coal was burned in the engine, and, although no attempt was made to close the windows, not the slightest inconvenience from smoke or foul air was experienced.

At about 10 o'clock of Monday morning, General Manager Harris of the New Jersey Central Railroad, received a dispatch from Attorney-General MacVeagh, asking him to lay a track from the depot to Francklyn cottage and have it ready for use by 10 o'clock to-morrow. Word was at once sent to W. W. Stearns, the Assistant General Superintendent of the road, and surveying instruments were ordered from Jersey City so that the route could be laid out for the workmen. Track-master Murtagh was ordered to come from Newark by telegraph, and orders for ties and rails were hurried on to Jersey City and Elizabethport. About 2 o'clock ground was broken by Mr. Murtagh, with only 12 laborers, all who were there. An hour later laborers began to arrive from all parts of the road between Jersey City and Sea Girt, and by 9 o'clock Monday night 300 skilled railroad-builders were hard at work. A full supply of ties and rails were on the spot long before that time. The length of the new track was 3,200 feet. The route chosen was one containing very few obstructions. Beginning at a point about 800 feet north of the Elberon station, the route described a wide curve to the eastward until it struck the driveway leading from the station straight to the hotel. The rails were laid along the southern side of this road, directly to the hotel grounds, where the track described another wide curve, and ended in front of the entrance to the President's cottage.

The President was carried down the stairs of the Executive Mansion nearest the west room lying upon his bed, which was placed upon a stretcher, the latter made of ash and consists of two long side bars, the ends being rounded off for handles; three jointed middle pieces provided with hinges of heavy wrought iron and so arranged that it can be folded, and four stout legs, each about a foot long. The east stairway was selected because it is the widest in the house. The President was born upon the shoulders of four men who had been specially trained to carry him easily. He was taken out of the front door, because in the rear there is an extra flight of steps before reaching terra firma. A strong platform was constructed out from the portico for the purpose of facilitating the bearers in depositing him upon the floor of the vehicle in which he was transported to the cars. This was a large two-horse, covered express wagon belonging to the Adams Express Company, and used for the transportation of bullion to and from the Treasury Department. It stood in front of the White House, and orders were given to the agent of the company to have his horses hitched to it at 5:30 o'clock Tuesday morning, at which time Dr. Bliss was present and such of the surgeons and attendants as was needed to minister to the President on his way. It was arranged so that nothing inside the wagon could be seen, and arrangements made to picket the route with soldiers and policemen so that no person would be able to get near to it. The floor of the wagon was on a level with the floor of the Presidential car, which was the principal reason why this particular style of vehicle was selected. It was driven up to one of the side doors of the forward compartment, and the President was carried into the rear compartment through the double doors before described and placed in position upon the bed frame.

James M. Whelpley was the conductor, Edward S. Page the engineer, James Kelly the Baggage-master, and George Dean the brakeman. Mr. John W. Garrett, of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad, through Secretary Windom, placed at the President's disposal his private car, the Maryland.

The special train that conveyed the Presidential party from Washington to Long Branch passed over six different railroads, and traversed a distance of 228 miles. Leaving Washington on the Baltimore and Potomac Railroad, it passed such stations as Bowie, Patuxet, Odenton, Severn, Stony Run, Winans, and one or two others, until Baltimore was reached. The train did not go into Baltimore proper, but passed the outskirts of the city and on to Bay View, where the Philadelphia, Wilmington and Baltimore Railroad Company took it in charge and sent it on its way to Philadelphia. A very large number of small cities and villages were passed on the Philadelphia, Wilmington and Baltimore Railroad. From Gray's Ferry, just out of Philadelphia, the train ran over the Junction Railroad, passing the West Philadelphia station at Thirty-second and Market streets, and through the West Philadelphia yard to Mantua, at which point the New York Division of the Pennsylvania Railroad begins. After leaving Mantua and passing Bristol, the train crossed the Delaware River at Trenton, and then ran by Princeton Junction and entered upon the Amboy Division at Monmouth Junction. From there it went to Jamesburg, thence to Englishtown, and via Freehold to Farmingdale, Manasquan and Sea Girt. At the last-named place a junction was effected with the Long Branch Division of the Central Railroad of New Jersey. The distance from Sea Girt to Elberon station is about nine and one-half miles, and the intervening stations are Spring Lake, Ocean Beach, Ocean Grove and Deal Beach.

Mr. Charles Watts, the Train-master of the New York Division of the Pennsylvania Railroad, left Jersey City for Washington on Sunday night, and superintended the movement of the President's train from the capital to the Elberon. Extraordinary precautions were taken to make the journey a safe and easy one. Nothing that money and skill could do was omitted, and the President's train had the absolute right of way over all of the roads over which it passed.

Proceedings of the Board of Chosen Freeholders of the County of Union, N. J.

[OFFICIAL.]

ELIZABETH, N. J., Sept. 1, 1881.

The Board of Chosen Freeholders of the County of Union met at the Court House in the city of Elizabeth, on Thursday, Sept. 1st, 1881, at 2 o'clock p. m.

Present—Director Martine and Freeholders Briant, Clark, Doty, Eller, Forsyth, Hubbard, Issmann, Melick, Mapes, Newbury, Randolph, Smith, Sullivan, Thompson—15.

Absent—Freeholder Rankin.

The minutes of the last meeting were read (omitting list of bills ordered paid) and on motion approved as read.

COMMUNICATIONS.

A communication, presented by the members of the Board of Chosen Freeholders from the city of Plainfield at the request of the Common Council of the city of Plainfield, was read.

Freeholder Briant moved the communication be received and placed on file.

Which was carried.

P. H. Gilhooly, Esq., County Attorney, presented the following, which was read, and on motion of Freeholder Doty, received and ordered spread upon the minutes:

To the Directors and Board of Chosen Freeholders of the County of Union:—

Gentlemen:

The city clerk of Plainfield has been directed to send a copy of certain resolutions passed by the Common Council of that city to their representatives in your Board, with a request that they enter their emphatic protest against the injustice done the city of Plainfield by the reception and entry on the minutes of the statements contained in my letter to this Board of July 7th, 1881. The resolutions are quite voluminous and full of denunciation of this letter.

The following extract from it, viz: "The authorities of the city of Plainfield evince a disposition to use every means in their power to thwart and defeat the payment and even the collection of the State and County taxes. Through their Common Council, a resolution directing their officials to proceed with the collection of these taxes was defeated. They sought the opinion of eminent counsel in Jersey City and because that opinion advised them to pay, they repudiated it" was recited in these resolutions and then they solemnly and officially resolved that these statements were unwarranted and untrue. They are now a matter of record in the city of Plainfield and will be laid before you at the request of the dignified Legislative body, its Common Council. I do not expect to change that record during the existence of the present regime in Plainfield, but I do desire that you whose servant I am, shall not pass judgment upon the resolutions of that eminently respectable body, without being informed of my reasons for making the statements contained in my letter, every word of which is true, and which will be proven, by the action and utterances of the Mayor and Common Council of Plainfield alone.

In his message to the Council, April 11th, 1881, the Mayor says, Section 11, "the onus of the collection of the State and County taxes is not upon the city."

At a public meeting of taxpayers held April 25th, 1881, called for the purpose of considering the city's financial condition and its difficulty with the County, he offered the following resolution:

"Resolved, That the duty of the City Government and its legal advisers is to defend to the best of their opportunity and ability, in all the courts the interests of the city involved in the case now in the Supreme Court, in which a claim is made against the city for State and County taxes."

On the application for a rehearing of the mandamus suit, he appeared as a witness on May 21st, 1881, and on page 9 of his testimony says: "That under the present circumstances not more than from one-quarter to one-third of the delinquencies of the State and County taxes for 1878 and 1879 would be collected."

At a meeting of the Common Council held April 11, 1881, a committee was appointed to publish a list of delinquent City taxes, and on April 27, 1881, a list was published with the following title: "Arrears for city, poor and school taxes from 1875 to 1881." The State and County delinquents were omitted and never have been published.

At the meeting of May 9, 1881, Councilman Tyler offered a resolution directing the Corporation Counsel to collect the city taxes due previous to 1880. Councilman Darling moved an amendment to include State and County taxes. Mr. Tyler said in view of the attitude of the city in this matter, it was impolitic to mix the city with other taxes. He would not embarrass the collection taxes by adding State and county. Mr. Darling being satisfied with Mr. Tyler's view, withdrew his amendment, and Mr. Tyler's resolution was carried unanimously.

The Corporation Counsel has since begun suits for the recovery of the city taxes alone, leaving the collection of State and County taxes to depend upon the good will of the people.

At the same meeting Councilman Darling offered the following resolution, viz:

Resolved, that the Common Council direct the Finance Com. to meet the Freeholders of Union County and acquaint them with their decision that the city of Plainfield is liable for State and County taxes for 1878 and 1879 and will pay the same as soon as the amount claimed as being in arrears is ascertained to be correct and in the meantime will pay the County Collector such sum on account as may be necessary to induce the Freeholders to withdraw the mandamus against the Treasurer of Plainfield.

After an exciting and protracted debate this resolution was defeated by a vote of 7 to 4.

These resolutions were acted upon after the reading of Mr. Scudder's opinion, to which I referred in my letter.

This opinion was obtained by a Committee of three from the Council, appointed by a resolution for that purpose, April 18, 1881, directing them to confer with such legal advisers as they might select and procure an opinion at a cost not exceeding $25.

It was presented to the Council by Mr. Darling, Chairman of the Committee, at its meeting of May 9th, 1881, and read. The opinion very evidently conflicted with the views and desires of the Council, since they immediately referred it back to the Committee. I quote from it the following:

"The question then is, would the Court order a mandamus against 'The Inhabitants of the City of Plainfield.' On principal it seems to me that a mandamus would be so ordered. My advice is that 'The Inhabitants of the City of Plainfield,' through their Common Council make provisions to ascertain and pay the amount of State and County taxes in arrears." He quotes Section 83 of the tax act and continues, "The provisions of the act seem broad enough to cover the case whether the boundary of the city and township is the same or not."

That this opinion was unpalatable to the Plainfield Common Council and city officials, is demonstrated by the declaration of Councilman Darling in a letter in which he says "Mr. Scudder requested me to furnish him with all the papers relating to the case. First, I went to Mr. Tyler for them. He, or the Corporation Counsel sent me one. Mr. Scudder said there must be more, I want them all. I went again and received another, and again, and I received a third. Anyhow, I received the papers one at a time. I sent a message to Mr. Kimball asking him to go and see Mr. Scudder. This he did not do. * * * * * Mr. Editor, the plain English version of all these manœuvres is that Messrs. Tyler and Kimball didn't want any opinion from Mr. Scudder. One thing is quite certain we have been compelled to do what I urged, pay the money. If it had been done long ago, it would have been more to our city's credit and we should have been a large gainer in interest account alone, but we shall see how Mr. Tyler and his friends shall steer now."

This is the evidence of one of the men who voted for the resolutions.

At a meeting of the Council held June 20, 1881, Councilman Coriell introduced a resolution directing that the Corporation Counsel do proceed and collect the County and State taxes. This resolution was overwhelmingly defeated, only three members of the Council voting in its favor.

In the face of this record, I am at a loss to understand how the Council hope to deceive any one by their set of resolutions. Their professions now may be fair, but their action in the past belies their present attitude and in addition to what I have written you before, which I now repeat, it is my candid opinion of the present Government of Plainfield unless in the future its authorities are compelled to pay its State and County taxes out of the first monies that come into their hands, they will never make any effort to collect any taxes but their own.

Yours respectfully,
P. H. GILHOOLY.
County Atty.

SPORTSMEN'S CORNER.

Large numbers of young shad fry were last week seen in the Raritan River below the Bound Brook dam. This would seem an evidence that shad deposit spawn at that point, which is afterward hatched out. The prohibition from netting close to the dam, which formerly was a practice, may be the cause of this appearance of shad fry there.

NORTH PLAINFIELD PARAGRAPHS.

The Public Schools was opened on Monday with the usual preliminary ceremonies. The new principal, Mr. Sydney Moore, conducted the exercises.

The school census as taken by District Clerk Arnold, shows the total number of children between the ages of 5 and 18 to be 904—an increase of 1 over last year.

The many friends of Mr. William L. Smalley were glad to observe his attainment of renewed health, as shown by his appearance at church on Sunday last for the first time in three years.

Mr. Voorhees VanVliet, of Duer street, has a curiosity in his garden, in the shape of a sun flower plant. The stalk is 12 feet in heighth, and bears thereon 39 blossoms or flowers.

Mrs. Austin's Craig Place school opened on Monday most favorably and with every prospect of increased success. The number of scholars that commenced the term under Mrs. Austin's direction, far exceeds any previous attendance.

Mr. Charles Groeder, having purchased the Coon property at the corner of Somerset and Chatham streets, will occupy it on or about the 15th inst., as a residence and also a depot for the sale of his popular bottled lager.

NEW ADVERTISEMENTS.

Corporation Notice.

Notice is hereby given that the following ordinance has been introduced before the Common Council and ordered to a third reading, and that it is the intention of the Council to pass the same.

O. B. LEONARD, City Clerk.
Plainfield, N. J., Sept. 2, 1881.

AN ORDINANCE.

To License and Regulate Peddlers, Hawkers, Cartmen, Hack, Omnibus, Stage and Truck Owners and Drivers.

The Inhabitants of the city of Plainfield, by their Common Council, do enact as follows:

Sec. 1. That a license may be granted by the City Clerk of said city, upon payment to him of the fees hereinafter provided, to each of such persons as shall apply to him therefor, to carry on, wholly or in part, within the limits of said city, the business of peddler, hawker or cartman, to drive or keep for use a hack, omnibus, stage, truck or other vehicle for the transportation of passengers, baggage or merchandise for hire, according to the provisions of this ordinance; and the said clerk shall keep a detailed record of all licenses so granted.

Sec. 2. That all applications for such licenses shall be in writing, signed by the applicant, stating his place of residence and the purpose and length of time for which such license is asked.

Sec. 3. That no person shall, after this ordinance shall go into effect, pursue, or in any manner carry on, as owner or as agent for another, within the limits of said city, the business of peddler or hawker without being first licensed therefor, according to the provisions of this ordinance; provided that nothing herein contained shall prevent farmers, gardeners or milkmen from selling the products of their own farms, or butchers from serving on their business in said city without a license.

Sec. 4. That no person shall, after this ordinance shall go into effect, drive, keep or use for hire at wages, or cause to be driven, kept or used for hire or wages, any cart, truck, hack, omnibus, stage or other carriage or vehicle, for the transportation of passengers, baggage or merchandise of any kind, wholly or in part within the limits of said city, without being first licensed therefor, according to the provisions of this ordinance. One license and only one shall be required for each cart, truck, hack, omnibus, stage or other carriage or vehicle; and no person shall be deemed guilty of a violation of this section for driving a cart, truck, omnibus, stage, or other carriage or vehicle, for which a license has been obtained by the owner.

Sec. 5. Each license granted under the provisions of this ordinance shall expire on the first day of September next following the granting of the same, and shall state the object for which it is given, the name of the person licensed, the number of the license, and the date of its expiration.

Sec. 6. That each and every person so licensed shall, at the time, pay therefor into the hands of said city Clerk, to be by him paid to the City Treasurer for the use of said city, the sum of five dollars for each license for one year, or unexpired portion thereof, and in addition thereto the clerk's fee of fifty cents for issuing each license.

Sec. 7. That no person licensed under this ordinance shall stand upon or along the sidewalks, or in the streets or other public places in said city, with vehicles or otherwise, for the purpose of seeking or securing custom, or for any other purpose, in a way to obstruct travel or cause damage or annoyance to the owners or occupants of premises fronting on the public thoroughfares; and any person believing himself aggrieved by a violation of this section may make complaint thereof before the City Judge, and the offender shall be liable to a fine not to exceed five dollars for each offense.

Sec. 8. That every person so licensed as aforesaid, as soon as licensed, shall cause the number of his license to be conspicuously placed or painted upon the outside of his vehicle, and keep the same so placed or painted, and also wear on his person while engaged in the business for which he is licensed, so as to be easily seen, a badge with the corresponding number thereon, and shall be liable to a fine of three dollars for each violation of this section.

Sec. 9. That every license granted under this ordinance may be suspended or revoked by the Mayor on satisfactory cause, other than offenses especially provided for in this ordinance; and no person during such suspension or revocation shall carry on his particular line of business, under penalty of ten dollars for each and every offense.

Sec. 10. That for each and every violation of section three or of section four of this ordinance the offender shall be liable to arrest and punishment by a fine not exceeding fifty dollars nor less than ten dollars, or imprisonment for a term not less than ten days nor more than thirty days.

Sec. 11. That the ordinance approved June 17th, 1878, entitled "An Ordinance to license and regulate street vendors," &c., and the ordinance entitled "An Ordinance to license cartmen, expressmen and hackmen," approved July 22, 1879, and the amendment thereto approved December 26th, 1879, be and the same are hereby repealed. s9w2

A REWARD of $100 has been offered by the city for the apprehension of the person who assaulted and stabbed a young woman on Putnam avenue about two weeks ago.

WHILE proceeding to the fire yesterday Gazelle steamer and Zephyr truck collided. Result—the old truck "bent" a little and a spoke in No. 1's nicely painted wheels splintered.

INCIPIENT tragedies, nipped in the bud, are reported in this city daily, but for a first-class row, involving incidents exciting enough to fill a column or two, the local editor sighs in vain.

WHY didn't our Board of Education follow the example set it by Jersey City's school authorities? At that place the opening of the public schools was postponed until next Monday on account of the heat.

HUNT, the photographer, has returned from his business trip to the sea shore, and may now be found at his studio on Front street, nearly opposite the Post Office, ready to take your picture with life-like accuracy.

WONDER what has become of Vennor's frost and rain? If that enterprising weather prophet could be induced to take a ten-mile tramp on the dusty roads with which the country is suffering he might hurry up matters.

THE petit jurors from Plainfield for the October term of Union County Courts are Benj. H. Bachman, Edward M. Thorn, John Rafferty, Albert Runyon, Joseph R. Jenkins, John B. Brown, Edward Willis, Jr., Henry Bachman.

THE Plainfield Saengerbund attended divine worship at the Church of the Holy Cross, on Thursday, on the occasion of the hours of prayer for the recovery of President Garfield, at the solicitation of Rev. T. Logan Murphy, the pastor.

THE assortment of school stationary and text books offered the public at the establishment of Mr. Mulford Estil, includes everything necessary, and the entire outfit desired in any department or grade may be be obtained at that place.

PATIENCE and perseverance are the only qualities necessary to become a weather prophet. Look, for instance, at Vennor! He has been prophesying "frost" right along for a month, and his patience will undoubtedly last until a cold snap comes and his prognostication is fulfilled.

THE highway from Plainfield to the U. & M. C. M. A. Ass'n grounds is to be sprinkled as usual during the holding of the Third Annual Fair. The Association will bear the expense from the city limits to the grounds, and the Common Council has appropriated $75 for the same use along Park avenue.

OUR present moon which was full on Wednesday, will for four evenings thereafter (weather permitting) irradiate the east so soon after the setting of the sun as to seemingly prolong the autumnal twilight. During those four evenings there is only an average difference of 34 minutes in the time of her rising.

THERE will be a Lecture delivered in St. Mary's church, this city on Sunday evening, Sept. 18, commencing at 8 o'clock, by Rev. Clarence C. Woodman, C. S. P., under the auspices of the Ladies of St. Mary's church, for the benefit of the Furnishing Fund of the Rectory. Subject—"St. Paul at Athens." Admission 25 and 35 cents.

CORPORATION Counsel Kimball has issued another circular calling the attention of delinquents to the decision recently rendered by Justice McLoughlin to the effect that personal taxes can be collected by civil suit. As the cost of such legal proceedings as may be taken to collect the taxes must be paid by the one who is sued, it is cheaper to pay up before a suit is instituted.

THE delinquent taxpayers seem unwilling to accept as final the decision of Justice M'Loughlin, holding that taxes on personal property may be collected by suit, and we are informed, Craig A. Marsh, Esq. has been employed to test the question in the higher courts. An appeal of the case against Laing has accordingly been taken, and the case will be next argued before the Somerset Common Pleas.

A NEW ordinance is on its way towards a final passage by our Common Council, requiring all hacks, &c., to be licensed. The purpose seems to be that the ordinance should reach its passage before the date of the County Fair, and such intention is entirely proper. But unless amended during its 3d reading (as has been done before without precedent) the act will fail to cover the ground at many points.

OTHER duties prevented our presence at the annual dinner, given the press of the State, on the grounds of the New Jersey Agricultural Society by the officers of the association, last Friday afternoon. There were some thirty editors present and a bountiful collation preceded an inspection of the grounds. The Society is noted for its generosity, and its exertions for the benefit of its patrons and exhibitors are universally appreciated.

IT is unnecessary to inform the public that it has been sweltering through a heated spell unprecedented for years, but a record of the thermometer's aspirations may be interesting for reference. On Tuesday the lowest register during the day was but 80 deg., while at one time the mercury reached 103 deg. and lingered in that vicinity. Wednesday, however, surpassed even that, and its altitudinal achievement was 105 deg. with no lowering during the night less than 85 deg.

OUR city's old sojourner, "Chicago," who has been spending the past summer at Somerville awaiting trial for the Millstone burglary of some years since, almost escaped the "clutches" of the law again, recently. He is reported to have scraped sufficient lead from the water pipes passing through his cell to melt into a lump from which he fashioned keys that, we are told, "would open any lock in the jail." If such is the case, the sooner Somerset county purchases padlocks that a thin piece of soft lead will not turn the bolts of, the better for the population of its jail's security.

WE haven't had the glorious moonlight turned off, anyway!

THE public school scholars were dismissed on Thursday morning and will not assemble again until Monday.

THE Singer Sewing Machine Factory at Elizabeth, is offered for sale, the Company desiring to remove their works to another locality.

A DELEGATION from the Plainfield Saengerbund attended a Singing Festival at Trenton on Monday last and was generously entertained.

THE Sunday afternoon service in the Church of the Holy Cross will hereafter commence at 4 o'clock, and the Sunday School exercises will begin at 2:45.

THE Fire Department is clamoring for its taxes now, and after Monday next "levies" will be made and other steps taken to enforce the collection of such.

THE waters of New Market pond have been drawn off to allow of repairs to the grist mill. Residents complain of the stench arising from the muddy bottom of the pond.

THE water in the race-way back of French's Mill has become so low that it was necessary yesterday to lower one foot the pipe that supplies the water for the sprinkling carts.

THE continued drought has so effected the cistern supply of water at many residences in Netherwood, that Mr. P. M. French has been furnishing them with water for washing purposes by the load for some days past.

Opening of School.

The Public Schools of our city were opened for the Fall term on Monday last with the usual attendance of visitors and an increase of 73 in the number of scholars in comparison with last year. The regulation ceremonies were carried out in the chapel of the High School, where an address was delivered by Principal Gross.

Mail Matter.

The new postal law now makes the taking of a newspaper, and the refusal to pay for the same, a theft, and any person guilty of such action is liable to criminal prosecution the same as if he had stolen goods to the amount of subscription. A New York paper has already commenced suit against several subscribers for such an offence.

Dancing School.

In another column will be found the advertisement of Mr. T. Geo. Dodworth, instructor in Dancing, announcing his Fall term of School. Mr. D. has given great satisfaction to the pupils under his charge in seasons past, and we doubt not but that his class for the Fall will be speedily made up. As an instructor in the terpsichorean art he has no equal.

Movements of Ex-Gov. McClellan.

Gen. McClellan and family are at present making a tour of Switzerland, and will return to this country again next month, sailing on the steamer Gallia, on the 10th of Oct. The General has taken the house, No. 17 Gramercy Park, New York City, for his winter residence, the same being two doors from the home of Hon. Samuel J. Tilden.

Monmouth County Fair.

The 28th annual exhibition of the Monmouth County Agricultural Society will be held at Freehold, September 13, 14 and 15. Competition open to the State. 700 premiums offered. Good trotting. Bicycle races. Fine display of farm products, farm machinery, ladies' work, horses, cattle, sheep, swine, poultry, etc. Catalogues of premiums, programmes of trotting, and all information relating to the fair may be had by addressing the Secretary, J. C. Smock, Freehold, N. J.

Perth Amboy's New Water Works.

The company organized at Perth Amboy recently for the purpose of supplying the city with the needed water works is pushing ahead the work on the reservoir as fast as possible. A fine brick building is being erected near the new reservoir, which will contain the immense pumps and the powerful engine of the company. The daily capacity of the works will be over 3,000,000 gallons. The force will be so great that five streams of water can be thrown at once over the tallest building in the city, thus giving ample security from fire without the use of fire-engines.

Literary Note.

The publishers of Rev. Dr. Robinson's "Spiritual Songs for the Sunday School" have just issued a little book containing only the hymns of that work and selling for one-half the money. It will be a most desirable supplement to the large book, greatly increasing its usefulness, and placing it within the reach of the largest missions schools. The new edition is prettily bound in flexible red cloth, and cost but 20 cents. The complete tune edition, bound in stiff boards, covered with red cloth, with red edges, costs 40 cents to schools in quantities. It is said that the sales of the latter work have mounted up into the scores of thousands since its issue a year ago. (THE CENTURY Co., New York.)

Important to Tax Delinquents.

A decision has been rendered by Corporation Counsel Kimball relative to the liability of tenants of property for taxes. He quotes the following section 33 of Act of 1866 as applying to the case. It reads: "That the tenants or other persons in possession or having care of any lands or tenements, and their goods and chattels shall be and they hereby are made liable for the payment of taxes which are or shall be imposed on said lands, and if any such tenant or other person shall pay, or his or her goods and chattels shall be levied on and sold to pay any such tax, it shall be lawful for him to deduct the sum so paid out of the rent, etc."

The World's Fair.

The papers are beginning to wake up to a knowledge of that which we have been endeavoring to impress upon their understanding for a year past. The Trenton State Gazette begins to exercise its comprehensive faculties, and merely repeats our words of weeks ago when it says:

"It is now definitely ascertained that the New York World's Fair project is neither dead nor asleep, but that while the whole country has been absorbed in other and sadder thoughts, a few energetic men have been quietly but effectively pushing the enterprise. The whole country will hope that they will be successful. A World's Fair in New York in 1883 would be very popular, and it could be held at no more propitious time than during the great prosperity which has come upon us.

Union & Middlesex Counties' Fair.

The Third Annual Fair and Exhibition of the Union & Middlesex Counties' Mutual Agricultural Association, to be held at Plainfield on the days of September 26, 27, 28, 29 and 30, promises to eclipse its predecessors in point of exhibits and general good management. The premium lists are now ready and may be obtained of the Secretary, James S. Vosseller, either at the County Clerk's office, Elizabeth, or at his residence, Plainfield. The list shows that some $4,000 in premiums will be distributed for farm products, cattle, horses, fowls, sheep, swine, fancy articles, etc. A fair proportion of the premiums are set aside for the ladies' department, which will be under careful management and competent judges. A premium of $10 is offered for the family making the greatest number of exhibits. A large amount of premiums are offered in the speed trials, which occur on the last four days of the Fair, and it is safe to say there will be some very fine trotting on the occasion by fast horses. The entry books will be open three days before the opening of the Fair at the office of the Association, Plainfield, and at Elizabeth, Rahway, and New Brunswick. Entries close at 10 a. m. on the Fair Grounds, Tuesday morning Sept. 27th—Except speed entries, which close Saturday, Sept. 10th, at 11 P. M.

Gazelle's Excursion.

Gazelle's Engine and Hose boys wound up the season by the hottest excursion we have ever attended, and the managers, Messrs. Jeremiah Moore, Frank Wright, Clarkson Hope, Charles Johnson and William Ryder, have every reason to be proud of its success. Those who were present on the occasion would have filled to overflowing two cars more than were taken, and in consequence it was the most crowded affair of the year. Neshaminy Fall's Grove was the destination, which was reached about 9:30 o'clock on Wednesday morning and where all were received warmly and a day of pleasure spent. The "Falls" were absent upon the occasion, but Prof. Franze was there with one of the best of brass and string orchestras that kept a hundred or so feet flying until it was time to return home. With the exception that fifty or more were compelled to stand in the cars all the way to the grounds and back again, and that the cars were old and dirty, without a drop of water in them from one end of the train to the other, and the start back was made just two hours later than it should—with these and a few other exceptions, the excursion was perfect throughout.

The affair was also a financial success and the companies deserve the assistance given by the patrons of the event. All fault that might be found arose from actions of the railroad company in the furnishing of uncomfortable cars, etc., and were but incidents of travel that could not be averted by the Committee in charge.

The Prize Picnic.

On Thursday evening of last week, the Warren Engine Company held in Woodson's Grove, as successful and pleasant a picnic as any our public has ever enjoyed. Music and dancing, with other attractions, tempted the attendance of a large number of the gay and festive young folks from both sides of the brook—all of whom had a most happy time. The lucky two the prizes advertised are to be presented to, are not yet named as some difficulty has arisen regarding the numbered tickets.

Assault and Highway Robbery.

Two more assaults, since our last issue, has been committed by the proverbial "person or persons unknown." The first was again on Putnam avenue, where on Monday afternoon last a nurse girl engaged in pushing a baby carriage, was seized by a ruffian who was subsequently frightened off by his victim's screams.

On Tuesday Miss Pound, of Scotch Plains, who was walking along Front street on her way from this city to her home, was approached by a man who snatched a leather bag from her belt to which it was attached, and ran off with it. The bag contained about $143 in money and a number of articles of jewelry. The police are at work on the case with more or less prospects of success.

Encampment and Festival.

A grand Three Days' Encampment and Festival will be held at Schutzen Park, Union Hill, Hudson County, N. J., on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, September 12th, 13th and 14th, under the management of Henry Wilson Post, No. 19, Grand Army of the Republic, Department of New Jersey. The object of the affair is to establish a fund for the erection of a Memorial Hall, in Jersey City, to perpetuate in durable form the memory and heroism of their Comrades who gave up their lives to save the Union.

The Encampment Exercises will consist of Guard Mount, Skirmish and Exhibition Drill, Review, Dress Parade and other military manoeuvers, concluding with a grand Sham Battle on the last day. An Oration will be delivered by some distinguished Union soldier or prominent civilian each day. The festival exercises will consist of dancing on the grand platform from 3 o'clock in the afternoon until 11 o'clock at night, and of various athletic games and sports, each day. A full military band will furnish the music for the occasion.

Common Council Proceedings.

MONDAY EV'G, Sep. 5, 1881.

Council met in regular meeting. Members all present except Messrs. Darling, Tracy, Whiton.

In the absence of Pres. Whiton, meeting called to order by the Clerk.

On motion, Mr. Gilbert was elected pro tem for the evening.

Minutes of last meeting read and approved.

By Mr. Hamilton, the following police claims for month of Aug.: C. W. Dodd, $58 34; Rob't Randolph, 22 89; M. Conway, 2. Ref'd.

By Mr. Finch, claim of J. S. Cutter, $77 11. Ref'd.

By Mr. H. A. Smith, the following claims: A. Vanderbeek, $50; H. H. Lowerie, 17 40; B. Force, 1 75; Wm. H. Voorhees, 10 20. Ref'd.

By Mr. H. Smith, the following claims; Wm. Hand, work on streets month of August, $86 16; David Hand, 148 62; Ann Flynn, 6; Alex. M. Runyon, 2 bills, 61. Ref'd.

By Mr. Gilbert, a com'n from His Honor Mayor Randolph relative to the attack on a young lady on Putnam ave a short time since, and thought that some action should be taken by the Council.

Mr. Waring moved that the com'n be ref'd to Police Com.

Mr. Tyler moved as an amendment that the Com. report this evening. Amendment carried. Res. as amended, adopted.

The Clerk then read the following report of Treasurer Van Winkle:

J. VAN WINKLE,
City Treasurer.

Filed.

By Mr. H. Smith, from Alms Com., as correct, the following claims: P. Casey & Son, $14; Mrs. Wilkins, 12; P. Langenbahn, 6; Jas. Ross, 8. Ref'd to Aud. Com.

A report from the Aud. Com. being called for, Mr. H. Smith was found to be the only one present. On motion, the rules were suspended, and Mr. H. Smith presented the following claims as correct: A. A. Titsworth, $12; Wm. Hand, 146 30; N. Y. & N. J. Globe Gas Co., 122 30; Plainfield Gas Co., 244 10. On motion, warrants were ordered drawn.

By Mr. Waring, from Lamp Com., reported as correct claim of N. Y. & N. J. Globe Gas Co., $40. Ref'd.

By Mr. Finch, from License Com., stated that he had examined the petition of Mr. C. H. King for a license to keep a Hotel at Netherwood, and found it conformed to the ord., and moved that it be granted. So agreed to, by the following vote: Ayes—Finch, Gilbert, Guion, Hamilton, A. H. Smith, Waring—6. Nays—H. Smith, Tyler—2.

By Mr. Hamilton, from Police Com., as correct, the police claims presented this evening. Ref'd to Aud. Com.

By Mr. Guion, from Printing Com., as correct, claims of Runyon & Leonard, $47 10, W. L. Force & Bro., 33 10. Ref'd to Aud. Com.

By Mr. Guion, from St. Com., as correct, claim of St. Com'r Wm. Hand, $22 50. Ref'd to Aud. Com.

By Mr. Tyler, an ord. relative to Peddlers, Hacks, &c. Read 1st time, and on motion, read 2d time and engrossed and to a 3d reading. All aye.

By Mr. Guion, a res. relative to the sale of land for the payment of taxes. Adopted.

At this juncture, on motion of Mr. Tyler, a recess of five minutes was taken to present some plan relative to city warrants.

At the expiration of the above time, Mr. Hamilton, from Police Com., offered a res. that a reward of $100 be paid out of the funds of the city for the arrest of the person or persons that made the assault upon the young lady on Putnam ave a few evenings since. Adopted.

By Mr. Hamilton, a motion that the rules be suspended in order that the police claims presented this evening, and as an amendment by Mr. Guion, claims from the Printing and St. Coms. also, have warrants ordered drawn for their several amounts this evening. Carried.

By Mr. Waring, a res. that the sum of $75 be appropriated for sprinkling Park ave. during the continuation of the Fair of the Union & Middlesex Counties' Mutual Agricultural Association. Adopted. All aye.

By Mr. Tyler, the following:

Resolved, That the Finance Committee be directed and instructed to take the necessary steps to call in and redeem all the outstanding city warrants, or so many of them as can be redeemed with the funds in City Treasurer's hands derived from the taxes of 1881, under and in pursuance of section 2, of "an Ordinance to provide that certain orders for the payment of money drawn upon the City Treasurer, shall bear interest," approved April 19, 1881.

Adopted. All aye.

By Mr. H. Smith, from Aud. Com., the following claims as correct; Wm. Hand, 221 50; Runyon & Leonard, 47 10; W. L. Force & Bro., 33 10, and the police claims presented this evening. On motion, warrants were ordered drawn. All aye.

On motion, Council then adjourned to meet two weeks from this evening.

Home Again.

Rev. John C. Bliss and wife from Maine.

Mr. Edward Wheeler Everitt from Nantucket.

Rev. Wm. Manchee from Europe.

Miss Hallie Smith from the Catskill Mountains.

Mr. Charles E. Dunn and sister from Sussex County, N. J.

Mr. F. M. French from the Delaware Water Gap.

Mr. and Mrs. Carmon Parse from the Adirondacks.

Mr. Theo. F. French and family from the Adirondacks.

Mrs. Eugene Laing from Millstone, N. J.

Mr. William Humbert, Jr., from the shores of Long Island.

Miss Annie Woodland from Somerville.

Mr. J. Hervey Doane from Boston.

Mr. William H. Brower from the Catskill Mountains.

Mr. and Mrs. S. St. J. McCutchen from Beach Haven.

Mrs. Warren Marsh and daughter from the Catskill Mountains.

Mr. Abraham Dunlap from "off New Bedford."

And the "School Marms."

Personals.

Ex-Mayor John H. Evans and youngest son sailed for Europe on Saturday last.

Rev. Judson Pierson has accepted a call to a Baptist Church in Woodbury, N. J.

Mr. Frank S. Runyon has returned from his extended pleasure trip to the far West.

Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Brewster of this city are registered among the Americans in Paris.

Mr. J. M. Fraley has had a photograph taken of the six-pound bass he recently caught in the Delaware Water Gap.

Rev. J. A. Todd, a well-known Reformed Church divine, of Tarrytown, N. Y., has been spending a few days among friends in this city.

The congratulations of a host of friends in this city, are extended to Miss Emily Lee that was, and Mrs. Culbertson that is. Full particulars will be found under head of "Marriages."

Mr. and Mrs. S. S. Lancaster, of Seventh street, this city, who have been spending the summer at Old Orchard Beach and Augusta, Maine, will return to their home on the 10th inst.

Mr. George H. Babcock was the purchaser of the Dunham property, on the corner of Madison avenue and Sixth street, at the Executor's sale, recently. The price paid was $3,150.

Mr. George Kirkner is credited by the Delaware Times with a big catch of trout at Roxbury, N. Y., in the vicinity of which he has been summering with his father, Jacob Kirkner, Esq.

Mrs. John J. Shotwell and daughter, who have been spending the summer with the former's parents, Mr. and Mrs. A. Vanderbeek, in this city, returned to their home in Fargo, Dakota Territory, on Wednesday last.

Mr. J. Frank Hubbard, while attending a meeting of the Union Co. Board of Freeholders on Thursday last, was taken with a severe attack of vertigo. His many friends will be glad to hear of his speedy recovery since and the absence of any permanent evil effects.

Mr. Henry S. Sterling, formerly a resident of Arlington avenue and a teacher in the Crescent avenue Sunday School, jumped from the second story window of No. 80 Clinton Place, N. Y. City, on Saturday last, while suffering from delirium caused by cerebral meningitis. He struck head foremost on the sidewalk below and received a severe fracture of the skull. He died while being conveyed to the hospital. The funeral was held from the residence of his mother, Mrs. Sherwood Sterling, at Bridgeport, Conn., on Tuesday, at 3 o'clock p. m.

STATE FAIR.

The time is now drawing near when the State Agricultural Society will hold their twenty-third Annual Exhibition. This State institution has permanent grounds located on the line of the Penn. R. R., between Newark and Elizabeth, and eleven miles from New York. These grounds are enclosed by a substantial fence, with a spacious and artistic main entrance. Inside of this enclosure, the Society have made many improvements since the last annual fair.

The pond in the field that has always been an eyesore to the otherwise picturesque grounds, has been drained and the surface filled in so that the whole "field" can now be turned to use during the fair week. The half-mile track, which is the best in the country, is in prime condition for the development of speed, looks better than usual, since the new fence with the hub-board has been built around the track. On the right as you enter the grounds, a new poultry house has been built, which will afford accommodation and perfect protection to the exhibition of poultry, which grows larger and more interesting each succeeding year.

This poultry house is the beginning of a plan of a series of new buildings and sheds to be constructed next year on the north side of the grounds. Among the first of these to be built will be two new lines of cattle sheds, constructed on the most approved plans.

The main buildings have been renovated and now afford ample room and protection to manufactured goods of all descriptions.

We learn from the officers of the Society that the prospects for the fair that will open on the 19th inst and continue for five days, give promise of a larger exhibition than usual, which is saying a great deal, although we have always found the Executive Committee to be nearly correct in their estimates. There is sure to be a large show of horses, both for style and speed.

The trotting on the track will commence each day at 2 o'clock, and on Tuesday at 3 p. m. sharp, the celebrated pacers "Rowdy Boy," "Mattie Hunter" and "Lucy" will speed on the track mile heats, beating 2:15.

The exhibition of neat cattle, sheep and swine increase in numbers every year, and we are assured that those who are interested in the full blooded stock of Jersey short horns, Ayrshires and Holsteins, will have a rare treat in store for them on the grounds at Waverly. The department devoted to farm machinery and agricultural implements, will be an attractive and instructive feature, where our farmers will see the latest and best labor-saving machinery that is now manufactured in this country.

The miscellaneous department which includes needle work, fancy articles of domestic manufacture, will be large as usual with some new features which will interest farmers' wives and daughters.

The protracted drought may injure to some extent the horticultural department, but there is no doubt that there will be a creditable show of fruits, grain, flowers and vegetables. Everybody should contribute the best they have of either the articles named, to show what can be done under adverse circumstances.

Outside of these practical, useful and productive branches of industry, the officers have arranged for a series of Athletic sports, which will afford visitors to the Fair amusement of a simple and manly character. On Wednesday, the 21st, there will be a grand Bicycle Tournament, the largest ever witnessed in this vicinity. The same day there will be a series of games of La Crosse, by some of the best clubs in this country, and on Friday the Lawn Tennis clubs meet and play on the grounds, and the Archery Tournament for ladies' and gentlemen's teams will take place at the same time.

We advise all of our readers who can, to visit the Waverly Fair grounds during the week of the exhibition, and we feel assured that they will be paid a hundred fold for their time and expense.

FIRE MATTERS.

At about 9 o'clock p. m., of Friday, a few taps of the alarm bell called out the Department and directed its attention to a fire that seemed raging in the vicinity of Ninth street and Park avenue. The cause of the excitement was discovered to be a burning brush-heap in a vacant lot on Prospect avenue.

At about eleven o'clock of Tuesday night fire was discovered in a shed on the premises of Mr. Coriell, a rag dealer living on Craig Place between Somerset St. and Stiger's Lane. The building was stored with most inflammable material, (rags, paper, &c.,) and an extensive fire seemed inevitable, but the prompt attendance of the entire department and the nearness of water—which was easily attainable from the brook—saved a spreading of the flames. A small loss only was the result.

The Board of Managers of the Plainfield Fire Department met in regular session on Wednesday evening. All present excepting Mr. Jones. Quite an unusual amount of business was transacted, of which only the most important we can find room for. The Committee on Repairs and Supplies was authorized to make the necessary contract for purchasing a new truck for the department. Foreman Auguste Saltsman was elected a delegate to attend the Firemen's National Convention at Richmond, and the Secretary instructed to furnish the necessary credentials. The Treasurer was empowered to take the proper legal steps to collect back taxes after the 15th inst., and to employ the assistance of counsel in the matter. The meeting adjourned.

The railroad bridge at Washington street was slightly damaged by fire on Saturday morning of last week.

A small barn, on Grand View avenue, North Plainfield, the property of Mr. R. Fairchild, was totally destroyed by fire about half-past 12 o'clock yesterday (Thursday) noon. The Fire Department were on hand but could be of little service. Warren No. 3 procured a stream from the Jackson street well. The barn and contents were a mass of ruins before the stream was put on. Two workmen were engaged in filling the barn with hay and say that the flames were first seen in the top of a small stack of hay placed alongside the barn. They cannot tell how the fire originated. The loss is about $250. Insured in the German American for $150.

SCOTCH PLAINS SCRATCHINGS.

Rev. A. H. Lewis, of Plainfield, will preach in Scotch Plains Baptist church on Sunday next, 11th inst.

WESTFIELD WISPS.

Dry! Terribly dry.

Row! Row! Row!

Rah! for Westfield. Court busy.

Don't forget the Fair at Plainfield.

"Crushed Tragedian." John Pfeifer.

Thanks, Bro. Chapman, for picture in costume.

No challenges as yet received for Mayor. Where is he.

The "What is it." exhibited by Mr. Dorvall, still remains unnamed.

Our master mechanic, Joseph Moffett, has just completed the enlargement of the residence of Mr. Patrick English.

Charley Day still continues his practice on the cornet. As we write, the sweet strains of that instrument are heard.

Dapner's bottled lager, as served by mein host Moffett, is the popular drink with the thermometer in the nineties. Call on Burt.

The sympathies of the community are extended to Mr. J. C. Carberry in the loss of his son William, which sad event occurred on Wednesday morning last.

The finest growth of "Madeira vines" that has been our privilege to see, is that on the side porch of the residence of Mr. A. H. Shopland on Central avenue.

Notice is hereby given that any person posting bills on the fence rights or bill boards under control of our local, without his permission, will be prosecuted for trespass.

Constable J. M. C. Marsh was called out at an early hour on Monday morning to remove a tramp who had taken up quarters on the lawn at the Dowper residence on Broad street. He left—we mean the tramp.

The return of the popular assistant of our worthy P. M., Miss Louise Decker, after an absence of several weeks visiting relatives in the West, is a matter of personal congratulation to the many visitors to the Post Office.

Attention is called to the advertisement of our unrivalled well driver, Mr. John Kane, that appears under the head of Westfield Advertisers. Our citizens will consult their own interests by consulting him before giving orders elsewhere.

In accordance with the Governor's proclamation, a service of prayer was held at Lyceum Hall yesterday, between the hours of 10 and 12 a. m. The services were largely attended by the citizens generally, and the deepest feeling was evinced by the participants.

Persian insect powder can be bought pure at $1.00 per pound. A gun to fire it off for 20 cts. Recommended by the President of our Game Protective Society as sure death to that unquestioned plague and nuisance, "musquitos." Don't know; never tried it. If true, a grand discovery.

We understand that well driver, John Kane, has secured another contract from the Central Land Improvement Co. Having already completed several contracts for this Co., this additional con*tract proves the confidence of the com*pany in his work.

A regular meeting of the Board of Directors of the Westfield Game and Fish Protective Society will be held at the Truck House on Tuesday next at 8:30 p. m. Under a resolution adopted by the present board, all members of the Association are cordially invited to be present.

We have heard of so many complaints relative to the corn crop, that we notice with pleasure a single exception. Our popular distributor of meat, Mr. Wm. Schoonover, reports the possession of 24 acres of unrivalled production, both in point of yield and stalk. Having visited the same, we accord to him the medal for general excellence.

Foreman John McNair of the Scotch Plains and Fanwood Fire Dept., paid a visit to Foreman Webb, of Bucket and Engine Co., No. 1, on Wednesday last. Explanations regarding the Fanwood fire were in order, and entirely satisfactory. The Scotch Plains Dept. can congratulate themselves on having so able an officer.

We learn with regret that Mrs. Goodrich, who has filled the position of teacher at our Public School so acceptably to our citizens for several years past, has tendered her resignation to the Board of Trustees. To her pupils the loss is both unexpected and unpleasant. We hear of many expressions of regret, as well as wishes for her continued prosperity, health and happiness.

The adjourned meeting of Westfield Bucket and Engine Co., No. 1. was held at Hotel Hall on Monday evening last. The attendance was good. The report of the Com. on By-Laws was adopted with a few amendments. Notice was given by the Com. on Buckets, of the return of buckets received from the party who agreed to furnish the same and communications relative thereto were read by the Chairman. Buckets were ordered.

Mr. Chas. Parkhurst one of the proprietors of Parkhurst's paper and grist mills, at Branch Mills, reports the capture in his pond of 4 catfish and 1 eel last week, total weight 16 pounds. Quite a number of bass have been taken out of this pond, some weighing 14 pounds. Our Fish Protective Societies should look after these waters. They were stocked several years ago, and if the Fish law is properly enforced, no waters in this vicinity will prove more worthy of the attention of the disciples of Isaak Walton.

Our popular livery stable proprietor seems to be in bad luck lately. Constable Marsh and your local last week enjoyed a midnight drive after a supposed lost or stolen horse, which fortunately returned without injury, although the party hiring the same proved to be impecunious. A party from Plainfield followed this up on Sunday last by hiring a horse and buggy for a ride to Springfield. Failing to return, the constable was again called into service and succeeded in finding the rig at Orange, where its driver left it.

Our local has duly posted the notices of the "Union and Middlesex Counties' Mutual Agricultural Association." No similar opportunity will be afforded the residents of this and adjoining Townships for the proper exhibition of the products of the soil, fruit, household wares, etc. We trust that our citizens will not forget that this is our County Fair and that Westfield ought to compete in the exhibition with the other Townships of the County. Premium lists may be procured of the Secretary, James S. Vosseller, Plainfield, N. J.

One lesson with reference to disorderly conduct ought certainly to prove an entire sufficiency, but in the case of several residents the contrary is the case and a second lesson may become a necessity. These continued disturbances of the peace, should bring forcibly before our citizens the necessity to which their attention has repeatedly been called, "a JAIL in Westfield." Our constables cannot be blamed for failing to arrest violators of the law, such violations generally occurring at late hours in the night. When we remember that they are obliged to take the prisoners to Elizabeth at their own expense, and if not indicted by the Grand Jury, this expense has to be borne by them. We know that our Township officers are not authorized to appropriate money for that purpose, but if the matter is properly understood by our citizens, we see no reason why a strong room cannot be provided for the purpose.

Our public school, (Dist. No. 10,) had its opening on Monday last. President of Board of Trustees, Mapes, opened the proceedings with a very appropriate address and was followed by Rev.'s Gill, Hoagland, Neff and Brunson, who delivered short addresses. Bro. Pearsall, an old friend of the popular principal, Mr. W. H. Elston, as well as an interested friend of the pupils, favored them and others present, with a few remarks. The following changes have taken place in the corps of teachers: Miss Schamp, of Rahway, in place of Mrs. Goodrich, resigned; Miss Mary Cory, in place of her sister, Miss Phebe Cory, resigned, who leaves to accept a position at Summit, N. J. The attendance of scholars was good, and under Prof. Elston, with his able assistants, we anticipate already the ability to claim the banner school of the County, if not State.

The attention of our Board of Health is called to the condition of the brook or drain running through the centre of our village. Personal inspection, on their part, we are sure, will prove sufficiently convincing to induce them to at once take steps to abate what is certainly a shameful nuisance, detrimental both to the health and interests of our citizens. We learn that Freeholder Mapes has already engaged Mr. Thos. H. Clark to clean the ditch and cut the vegetation on the banks that later would decay and add to the present trouble. So far as this goes it is a good thing, but it cannot remove the nuisance. With the present drought what little water there is, backs up in the rear of Broad street and becomes stagnant.

OUR COURTS.

Before Squire Jacques, Monday, Sept. 5th. H. M. Moffett vs John Stewart, charge, larceny of horse and buggy. Warrant issued.

Friday, Sept. 2d, charge, assault and battery, with intent to commit a rape. Defendant committed for further examination.

Before Squire Godfrey, Tuesday, Sept. 6th, Bertha R. Clark vs Emma R. Vermeule, charge, offensive and approbrious language. Warrant for arrest issued.

A reported assault with intent to commit rape, noted under the head of "Our Courts," that occurred on the Mountain above the upper Springfield road, on Thursday night of last week, occasioned considerable excitement in our usually quiet village. Constable J. M. C. Marsh with our local, endeavored to capture the perpetrator of this outrage, were finally successful in capturing party implicated on Tuesday morning last, while partaking of his noonday meal at Samuel Badgley's place on the mountain. Since the alleged commission of the crime, the party arrested had visited Dover and other places in that vicinity.

IT IS A FOOLISH MISTAKE to confound a remedy of merit with quack medicines. We have used Parker's Ginger Tonic with the happiest results for Dyspepsia and Debility, and know it to be a sterling health restorative.—Times.

HURRAH FOR OUR SIDE!

Many people have lost their interest in politics and in amusements because they are so out of sorts and run down that they cannot enjoy anything. If such persons would only be wise enough to try that Celebrated remedy Kidney-Wort and experience its tonic and renovating effects they would soon be hurrahing with the loudest. In either dry or liquid form it is a perfect remedy for torpid liver, kidneys or bowels.—Exchange.

HAY FEVER.

MESSRS. WHITE & BURDICK, Druggists, Ithaca, N. Y.—I can recommend Ely's Cream Balm to relieve all persons suffering with Rose Cold and Hay Fever. I have been a sufferer from the same complaints; have had great relief by using the Balm. I have recommended it to many of my friends for Catarrh, and in all cases where they have used the Balm freely have been cured. T. KENNEY, Dry Goods Merchant, Ithaca, N. Y. Sept. 5, 1880.

MR. A. L. AVERY, Pharmacist, Newark, N. J.—Having been severely afflicted for eleven years with Hay Fever, after trying almost everything without avail, I gave up all hopes of being cured, when I purchased of you a box of Ely's Cream Balm. To my surprise, after a few applications, I was entirely relieved. E. WATSON HARRIS, Letter Carrier, No. 14, New P. O., Newark, N. J. Price 50 cents.

There was a man in Hackensack,
And he was wondrous wise;
Of, local papers he went back

SHE IS GOING TO TRY IT.

A correspondent writes from way down East in [illegible] to Dr. David Kennedy, Rondout, N. Y.: "I called on you about six weeks ago sick with [illegible] Disease. I bought a bottle of 'Favorite Remedy,' and it cured me. What I want is some more of your medicine. My daughter is going to try it." Sensible man. He will not regret it, and when his daughter has tried it she will be satisfied too. "Favorite Remedy" is just the thing for the ills that afflict womankind.

Now, as he sees that he was wrong,
He wiped his weeping eyes;
This is the burden of his song;
"I'll have to advertise!"

RESCUED FROM DEATH.

The following statement of William J. Coughlin, of Somerville, Mass., is so remarkable that we beg to ask for it the attention of our readers. He says: "In the fall of 1876 I was taken with a VIOLENT BLEEDING OF THE LUNGS followed by a severe cough. I soon began to loose my appetite and flesh. I was so weak at one time that I could not leave my bed. In the summer of 1877 I was admitted to the City Hospital. While there the doctors said I had a hole in my left lung as big as a half dollar. I expended over a hundred dollars in doctors and medicines. I was so far gone at one time a report went around that I was dead. I gave up hope, but a friend told me of DR. WM. HALL'S BALSAM FOR THE LUNGS. I laughed at my friends, thinking that my case was incurable, but I got a bottle to satisfy them, when to my surprise and gratification, I commenced to feel better. My hope, once dead, began to revive, and to-day I feel in better spirits than I have the past three years.

"I write this hoping you will publish it, so that every one afflicted with Diseased Lungs will be induced to take DR. WM. HALL'S BALSAM FOR THE LUNGS, and be convinced that CONSUMPTION CAN BE CURED. I have taken two bottles and can positively say that it has done more good than all the other medicines I have taken since my sickness. My cough has almost entirely disappeared and I shall soon be able to go to work." Sold by druggists.

ANOTHER CANDIDATE.

By a large majority the people of the United States have declared their faith in Kidney-Wort as a remedy for all the diseases of the kidneys, liver, [illegible] some, however, have disliked the trouble of preparing it from the dry form. For such a new candidate appears in the shape of Kidney-Wort in Liquid Form. It is very concentrated, is easily taken and is equally efficient as the dry. Try it.—Louisville Post.

A HITCH.

"I hate to see a hitch in a weddin'," remarked a farmer from out Jamaica way, as he dropped into the Eagle's counting room with a nuptial notice. "It looks bad and it makes talk."

"Anything wrong about this wedding?" asked the clerk, as he made change for the old man.

"Nothing positively wrong, but it didn't launch like I want to see a thing of that kind. You see by the notice that Buck Thomas was marryin' Mary Biff, and at one time we begun to think they never would get through that ceremony."

"What was the hitch?"

"Why, Buck is a Methodist, and Mary is a 'Piscopalian, and as one wanted one service, and the other another, they patched up some kind of a scheme to have both. Neither would go to the other's church, but each had their own minister and the weddin' came off in the school house. The 'Piscopal minister married Mary, and the Methodist undertook to marry Buck, and there they was takin' alternate whacks at the thing and neither paying any attention to the other. The Methodist brother fired off a sermon first, and the bride sat down and went to sleep. Then the 'Piscopalian said as how we'd all dropped in to see that woman j'ined, but he wouldn't say who to, and wanted to know if there was any objections. That started up the Methodist who began to ask Buck if he knew what a solemn business he was peggin' at, and if he really meant trade. All that time the 'Piscopalian was howling around about this woman, and Mary was saying she'd do this and that and the other. The Methodist was marryin' away on his side and finally they brought up against a stump."

"How's that?" asked the clerk.

"Well, the 'Piscopalian wouldn't recognize Buck or his minister, and the Methodist wouldn't have nothin' to do with Mary or her preacher, and there was no way of getting them together. Everything was all ready except asking them if they'd take each other, and neither one of them would do it. Mary and Buck was standing hand in hand and the crowd was gettin' hungry."

"How did they get through it?"

"They had to compromise. They wrangled around for a time and finally Buck spoke up of his own accord and said he' take Mary for his wedded wife, and then Mary chipped in and said she would take Buck for her husband. At that we all cheered and hollered. But there they plumped on another snag."

"In what respect," inquired the clerk.

"Because there was no one to pronounce 'em man and wife. Buck tried to reason Mary into lettin' the Methodist do that part, and Mary argued with Buck and tried to persuade him into listening to her preacher, but it was no use. That brought on another row, and it was gettin' nigh onto dark, we all felt that something ought to be done, and as we'd been there most all day."

"Well did they get married?" asked the tired clerk.

"Yes, we fixed it up. The ministers was gittin' pretty mad at each other, but they agreed that they'd each attend to their own flock, so the Methodist said I now pronounce you man, and the 'Piscopalian said I now pronounce you wife, and they let it go at that. Then Buck paid the Methodist, and the 'Piscopalian wanted to know where he came in. Buck said he'd hired his man and paid him, and, as he was not responsible for his wife's foolishness before marriage, her parson could whistle for his wealth. I guess there'll be a lawsuit about it, for the 'Piscopalian says he'll have half of that five dollars if it takes a leg short off to the armpit. I don't like to see them hitches at weddin's. It don't look right, and it ain't business."

With which reflection the old man buttoned up his change and drove home in deep meditation.—Brooklyn Eagle.

THE FRUITS OF THE SEASON.

The close of the Summer and the opening of Autumn usually put all our markets into a shape in which a bucolic poet might write endless idyls, if not of the king, after the manner of Tennyson, at least of the king of fruits and his subjects. But which is the king of fruits? There need be no war of the roses, for every eater may elect his own king and have no one to quarrel with him, and as tastes vary, there are a good many thrones and a good many kings to occupy them; this being alone a certainty, that there are few or no fruits that would be willingly dispensed with, if coming to us in any state approaching perfection. When the season has been favorable and there is gathering of varieties, when the portly apple makes love to the rosy peach; when the Bartlett and the Sickle, the plum and the grape nestle behind a rampart of melons, the ideal of garden and orchard luxuries becomes a reality, and the song of nature becomes audible in the golden atmosphere. There is no country on earth where Providence has been more bountiful than here. The fruits are not merely luxuries but substantial articles of food. Some of them last far into the Winter in their natural condition, and when they do not, art comes in as supplementary, and "all the year round" is a phrase that can be applied to nearly every one.

But, what between late frosts and early droughts, this must be considered an "off year." With such an extent of country, there cannot be an entire failure of anything. There will be fine peaches and fine apples and pears for those who can afford to pay for them, but that season is hardly to be considered a good one, in which the poor cannot share with the rich in these fruits of the season. The glory of such a country is in having all its blessings universal. In peaches, however, we fear that this will not be the case. Much of the fruit that is now coming has the stamp of disease upon it, and should no more be allowed to be sold than diseased meat. The best peaches so far are from Delaware, but New Jersey, adding but little to the immense quantity consumed, has the satisfaction of adding the best, the Mountain Rose, Moore's, and later the Heath being favorite varieties. The presumed scarcity of peaches and the high prices expected bring out contributions from distant localities; Florida, Georgia, and even California. There are some expected also from Illinois and Ohio.

Apples will be scarce but good, and pears are expected to be more plentiful. The Bartlett here holds its own against all competitors, although there are nearly one hundred varieties. As a canned fruit, when properly done, there is nothing equal to it in the world. Pears are usually picked green and allowed to ripen gradually; otherwise there would be much wastage. Melons are abundant, but not as cheap as in some seasons. Why has not some one invented an infallible test for melons? It is necessary to almost cut through a garded patch before striking one that exactly suits. Grapes hold out fair promise, and they have the charm of lingering on into the lap of Winter, and with the help of the Florida orange, of making the circle of the year complete. There has been an astonishing advance made in the cultivation of all the fruits, and it is a consolation to know that if one fails another comes in to take its place.

HAD PLENTY OF TIME.

He had his hat in one hand and his handkerchief in the other as he sat down squarely in front of a ginger ale fount in a Jefferson avenue drug store yesterday. One would have said he was about to melt, but he wasn't the sort of man to be boxed up in a hot day by an imprudent action of his own. He fanned with one hand and mapped with the other, and finally inquired:

'Is this root beer?'

'No, sir, this is ginger ale.'

'Ten cents per glass?'

'No, sir, it is five.'

'Cold?'

'Oh, yes.'

'Made of ginger?'

'Certainly.'

'Well, I suppose I might try some—Is it healthy or unhealthy?'

'It is said to be very healthy.'

'What organs does it to act on?'

'Well, I couldn't say.'

'That's unfortunate. How do you know it wouldn't aggravate my lung trouble, or help along my liver complaint? Have you certificates from any one it has helped or injured?'

'No, sir.'

'That's unlucky.'

'Will you have some?'

'Well, what do you think? Will it be perfectly safe?'

'I think so.'

'Then I might try it. You needn't draw but two cents' worth considering the circumstances.'

'I—that is—we sell it for five cents per glass.'

'Very well—I won't take any. Have you any clear, cold water?'

'Yes.'

'Thanks. Sorry to put you to any trouble, but I fell through a hatchway once by not making inquiries in time.—(Drinks.) That's a fair article of water, very fair. Have you the analysis?'

'No, sir.'

'That's too bad. If you get it please lay it aside until I drop in. As to the ginger ale, let's see. To-day is Friday. I may pass here about next Thursday, and if I do I suppose you will still have it on draught?'

'Yes, sir.'

'And the price will be the same?'

'Yes.'

'Very well. I have no doubt it is a refreshing drink, and fully up to your guarantee, there is no particular hurry in this case, not the least. I shall be in the city off and on about once a week all summer, and any time before cold weather will do. So long life to you.'—Detroit Free-Press.

THE ATTEMPT TO SHOOT JACKSON.

Few persons remember the mad attempt of Richard Lawrence to shoot President Jackson. It occurred on January 30, 1835. On that day the two Houses of Congress convened for the obsequies of W. R. Davis, a Representative from South Carolina, then recently deceased. President Jackson and the heads of departments were in attendance. After a discourse by the chaplain of the House, a funeral procession was formed, in which the President walked arm in arm with the Secretary of the Treasury, Levi Woodbury. The procession left the hall of the House of Representatives and was passing through the rotunda, on the way to the eastern portico, when Lawrence, as he perceived the President approach, stepped forward from the crowd, advanced to within a few feet of him, drew a pistol, aimed it at the President, and pulled the trigger. The cap missed fire. Secretary Woodbury and others sprang to arrest him; he, however, had time to draw another pistol, but this second attempt to shoot was equally unsuccessful. He was thrown down, disarmed, and secured.

In taking aim he stood so near the President that the latter instinctively started forward to strike the pistol aside with his cane; so that, had not the caps failed, there is every probability that a dangerous, probably a fatal, wound would have been given. The trial of Lawrence was postponed until April, apparently to allow time for searching his antecedents and investigating his mental condition. Both the evidence and Lawrence's demeanor in the court room satisfied the public at the time that the shooting was the act of a lunatic. He had for some time believed himself to be king of the United States and Jackson to be an intruder and usurper. In the court room his behavior was so wild and disorderly that his counsel begged that he might be removed and the trial proceed without him. No wonder, for when the District Attorney commenced speaking, Lawrence started up wildly, exclaiming: "What means this personal indignity? Is it decreed that I am to be brought here? And for what? I desire to know if I, who claim the crown of the United States, likewise the crown of Great Britain, and who am superior to this court, am to be treated thus?" And the proceedings were frequently broken by like interruptions. As the jury agreed with the medical men that he was an irresponsible monomaniac, he was committed to an asylum.

MEDICINAL QUALITIES OF THE WATERMELON.

A prejudice has long existed in the minds of many persons against the use of watermelons on the ground of their being unhealthy, and many cases of colic, cholera morbus and similar diseases have been charged to their use. A writer in Food and Health takes a very different view of the subject, and stands up bravely in defense of the much abused vegetable. He says:

"I can imagine the horror of certain readers who fancy that they are so peculiarly constituted that they can't eat fruit, and 'watermelons, Mercy! I should have an attack of cholera morbus, surely.' There is not, in my opinion, one such person in the world who would be troubled by watermelons if taken after a fast day. It might start the sluiceway in the case of a constipated person, who has been clogging up with bad food for days and weeks, and save his life. If so it would prove the best and safest physic in the world. Watermelon contains about ninety-five per cent of the purest water, and a trace of the purest of sugar, and nothing has yet been discovered that furnishes so perfect and speedy a cure for summer complaint as watermelon, and nothing else. Even when diarrhœa has been kept up by continued eating of ordinary food, until the disease has become chronic, this delicious beverage—for it is little more—watermelon, taken freely two or three times a day, has again and again been known to work wonders, and to cure when all the usual remedies had failed.

THE HOT SEASON.

This is the season when the editor dashes off a spirited editorial urging the farmers to labor on in the hot fields and make the hay, and then goes down into the depths of a cooler cellar and smokes or drinks himself to sleep.

This is also the season when fat men grumble and lean men grin.

The man who makes soda water laughs a cold-blooded laugh.

The ice man snickers in his sleeve and the people come in and buy his wares.

And oh, how hot it is!
Hot enough to melt fire into icicles!
And that's drawing it strong.

Vennor says he can't help it, and the man who loafs on the street corner goes around and asks folks if life is worth living for.

The seats of chairs get so warm that clerks have to stand up to write.

Why do people get wrathy? Why do people swear? Because it is hot weather; because the price of cool drinks remain the same.

Who do young fellows go around and take the girls to ice cream saloons, and kick themselves, if the bill is $3.17? Because the heat is in the sunbeam and the weather is too hot to go skating.

And why do men—great, tall, brave-looking men with red suspenders—sit around near the entrance of drug stores listening to the mocking siss of the fountain? Why? And why, when a friend asks them to go in and take a ginger flavor, do they say they'll be gink-swinked if they won't take a little sumthin,' and whisper to the clerk to put a timber-stick in? Because—because they do.—Breakfast Table.

The man who knows the most is not an owing man.

The best people need afflictions for trial of their virtue.

Small faults indulged are little thieves that let in greater.

Mr. Berrian Platt, of Cork, Fla., has an orange tree that is 39 years old. In 1878 he sold 8,000 oranges from this tree at $1.25 per hundred. In 1879 he sold 10,000 at $1 per hundred, but in 1880 it fell off to 5,000 oranges.

A barrel of lager contains about thirty gallons. There are sixteen half pints to the gallon. Retailers, however, get about twenty glasses from the gallon. For a barrel of beer which costs $8 the retailer receives about $30.

A fish-propagating company of California is experimenting with a frog farm. New Brunswick furnished the material to start with, 130 frogs being sent from there packed in fresh moss in a box plentifully supplied with perforations for the admission of air. The moss was frequently moistened on the way.

An Indianapolis man was nipped by a bug while sleeping sweetly the other night. He lighted a lamp to look for the bug, the lamp turned over and set fire to the bed, and while the man yelled fire, murder and help, the fire department drenched his entire house. He wouldn't have cared so much, however, if the bug hadn't got away.

'How did you like the hymns?' he asked his city cousin as they left the church.

'One of them was just splendid,' she replied.

'Ah! which one?'

'The one in the next pew, with black curly hair, and such killing black eyes.'

A little North Side boy of four years was much astonished when he awoke one morning last week to find a little sister in his mother's arms.

'Where did it come from?' he asked, with his eyes wide open.

'From God,' was the reply.

'Who brought it?' was the next very natural inquiry.

'An angel.'

He thought for a moment and then exclaimed:

'Oh! mamma, why didn't you catch the angel, too?'

They were two crafty and cautious old vags. They met in an alley, looked each other over, and one of them queried:

'Say, do you chew?'

He did but he didn't want to spare any. He therefore replied:

'Yes, I chew gum.'

'Sorry,' continued the other as he handed out a large plug and held it up to the light. 'I don't use the weed myself, and I was going to give this to you. If I find any gum in any of my travels through the alleys, I'll bear you in my mind. Tra-la.'

It is estimated that 225,000 pounds of opium are annually imported into the United States, of which 150,000 pounds are used illegitimately; that is to say, that quantity is consumed by opium smokers and morphine injectors. The vice is about equally divided between the male and female victims, and once contracted is seldom cured. Unlike drunkenness, it can be carried on for years in secret and unsuspected; but it breaks down the system none the less surely than alcoholic stimulants. Nearly all the opium consumed in the United States is controlled by a New York syndicate.

Some men, when they go to church, never think of studying the frescoing on the ceiling of the edifice until the collection plate is being passed around.

The latest case of absence of mind was that of a young woman who was sent by her mother to buy a pair of shoes, and instead of buying them married the shoemaker.

A shark recently caught in New York harbor had a flask and a pack of cards in his pocket. A telegram was immediately sent to Long Branch to enquire who was missing.

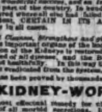
READ THE EVIDENCE

Which will Remove All Your Doubts—A Good Investment—One that Yields "AN HUNDRED FOLD."

The world is full of charlatans asking public attention to patent inventions for the mitigation of suffering. Everything claiming the power to do good should be from a reputable source, otherwise it is open to suspicion. Dr. David Kennedy, of Rondout, N. Y., affirms that his medicine, "Kennedy's Favorite Remedy," is the best article of its kind ever produced. Hence it is only just to the public that he refer to his record as a physician and surgeon. Among the capital operations performed by him are: Amputation of the thigh-bone in the case of Abraham Elsworth, Port Ewen, Ulster Co., N. Y.; amputation of the arm, case of Mrs. Edward Meyers, of Rondout, N. Y., and the operation of lithotomy (removal of stone from the bladder), in the case of Simon Tiebell, of Kingston, and the removal of the eye for Oscar Craigg, of Rosendale, Ulster Co., N. Y. These are a few of many. All these persons fully recovered because Dr. Kennedy prescribed "Favorite Remedy" (which has unequaled powers of purifying the blood). Owing to the use of "Favorite Remedy" in the after-treatment of his surgical cases, not one has died; all are living to this day in the bloom of health. Dr. Kennedy's "Favorite Remedy," for sale by all druggists. $1.00 per bottle.



DIRECTIONS.—For Catarrh, Hay Fever, Cold in the Head, &c., insert with little finger a particle of the Balm into the nostrils; draw strong breaths through the nose. It will be absorbed, cleansing, and healing the diseased membrane. For Deafness, Apply a particle to the ear.

ELY'S CREAM BALM

Effectually cleanses the nasal passages of Catarrhal virus, causing healthy secretions, allays inflammation and irritation, protects the membranal linings of the head from additional colds, completely heals the sores and restores the sense of taste and smell. Beneficial results are realized by a few applications. A thorough treatment as directed will cure Catarrh. As a household remedy for cold in the head it is unequaled. The Balm is easy to use and agreeable. Sold by druggists at 50 cents. On receipt of 50 cents will mail a package. Send for circular with full information. ELY'S CREAM BALM CO., Owego, N. Y.

"MERIT MUST REAP ITS JUST REWARD."

Of the many Catarrh and Hay Fever remedies we keep in stock there is none of which our customers speak more highly than of Ely's Cream Balm. A comparatively new discovery, but one which, from the many reports and evidences of cures produced, is destined to be a leading article. We have never handled a remedy which has increased as rapidly in sales or that has given such universal satisfaction. Price, 50 cents.

Kidney Wort.
The Great Cure for Rheumatism.

As it is for all diseases of the KIDNEYS, LIVER and BOWELS.

It cleanses the system of the acrid poison that causes the dreadful suffering which only the victims of Rheumatism can realize.

THOUSANDS OF CASES

of the worst forms of this terrible disease have been quickly relieved, in a short time

PERFECTLY CURED.

KIDNEY-WORT

has had wonderful success, and an immense sale in every part of the country. In hundreds of cases it has cured where all else had failed. It is mild but efficient, CERTAIN IN ITS ACTION, but harmless in all cases.

☞ It Cleanses, Strengthens and gives New Life to all the important organs of the body. The natural action of the Kidneys is restored. The Liver is cleansed of all disease, and the Bowels move freely and healthfully. In this way the worst diseases are eradicated from the system.

As it has been proved by thousands

KIDNEY-WORT

is the most effectual remedy for cleansing the system of all morbid secretions. It should be used in every household as a

SPRING MEDICINE.

Always cures BILIOUSNESS, CONSTIPATION and PILES.

Is put up in DRY VEGETABLE FORM, in tin cans, one package of which makes 6 quarts medicine.

Also, in LIQUID FORM, VERY CONCENTRATED for the convenience of those who cannot readily prepare it. It acts with equal efficiency in either form.

TUBULAR HOT-BLAST NON-EXPLOSIVE

Oil or Gas Stoves!

THE REASONS WHY THE TUBULAR HOT-BLAST OIL OR GAS STOVE IS SUPERIOR TO ALL OTHERS:

Its appearance is more like a stove than anything that has yet been offered.

It requires no wire gauze or water tank to make it safe.

A continual current of air passes to the burners over the Oil Pot, preventing the oil from getting warmer than the atmosphere in which it is burning. The bake oven is not in the way of the kettle or boiler.

Baking, roasting, and boiling can all be done at once, and in less time than with any other oil stove.

The No. 3 or Three-Burner Stove will make 12 inches of pure white flame at a cost of 1½ cts per hour. The reservoir holds four quarts of oil, sufficient to burn for twelve hours.

The No. 4 or 4-Burner Stove will make 16 inches of white flame at a cost of 2 cents per hour.

The reservoir holds 5 quarts of oil sufficient to burn for twelve hours.

The No. 3 Stove will consume between three and four cents worth of gas per hour.

The No. 4 will consume between four and five cents worth of gas per hour.

LEGAL NOTICES.

STATE OF NEW JERSEY.
Office of Comptroller of the Treasury.

TRENTON, August 26th, 1881.

The attention of county and local authorities is called to chapter one hundred and eighteen of the Laws of 1881, which requires a report to be made to this department, on or before the FIRST DAY OF OCTOBER in each year, of the financial condition of the respective counties, townships, cities, towns or boroughs in this State, at the close of their respective fiscal years next preceding the time of making such statement. The necessary blanks will be furnished upon application to this office.

E. J. ANDERSON,
Comptroller.

ADJOURNMENT OF SALE OF REAL ESTATE.

In the matter of the sale of land and premises of Anson Frazee, deceased, by Patience Frazee and John T. Wilcox, Administrators, by virtue of an Order of the Orphans' Court of the County of Union:

The Sale of the land described in said Order, is again adjourned until September Nineteenth, 1881, same hour and place.

Dated Aug. 24, 1881.

JOHN T. WILCOX,
PATIENCE FRAZEE,
Administrators.

Surrogate's Order to Limit Creditors.

Union County, Surrogate's Office,
July 5th, 1881.

Caroline S. Herring, the Executrix, and Frank O. Herring, Executor of Silas C. Herring, deceased.

On application of the above-named Executors, it is ordered that said Executors give Public Notice to the Creditors of the estate of said decedent to bring in their debts, demands or claims against the same, under oath, within nine months from this date, by setting up a copy of this Order, within twenty days hereafter, in five of the most public places in the County of Union, for two months, and also within the said twenty days, by advertising the same in THE CONSTITUTIONALIST for the same space of time; and if any creditor shall neglect to exhibit his or her debt, demand or claim, within the said period of nine months, public notice being given as aforesaid, such creditor shall be forever barred of his or her action therefor against the said Executors.

By JAS. J. GERBER,
Surrogate.

Surrogate's Order to Limit Creditors.

Union County, Surrogate's Office,
August 1st, 1881.

John H. Van Winkle, Administrator of Jacob F. Randolph, deceased.

On application of the above-named Administrator it is ordered that said Administrator give Public Notice to the Creditors of the estate of the said decedent, to bring in their debts, demands or claims against the same, under oath, within nine months from this date, by setting up a copy of this order, within twenty days hereafter, in five of the most public places in the County of Union, for two months, and also within the said twenty days, by advertising the same in the CONSTITUTIONALIST for the same space of time; and if any Creditor shall neglect to exhibit his or her debt, demand or claim, within the said period of nine months, public notice being given as aforesaid, such Creditor shall be forever barred of his or her action therefor against the said Administrator.

POETRY.

ECHO.

Come to me in the silence of the night;
Come in the speaking silence of a dream;
Come with the soft rounded cheeks and eyes as bright
As sunlight on a stream;
Come back in tears,
Oh, memory, hope, love of finished years.

Oh, dream how sweet, too sweet, too bitter sweet,
Whose wakening should have been in Paradise,
Where souls brimful of love abide and meet;
Where thirsting, longing eyes
Watch the slow door
That opening, lets in, lets out no more.

Yet come to me in dreams, that I may live
My very life again, though cold in death;
Come back to me in dreams, that I may give
Pulse for pulse, breath for breath:
Speak low, lean low,
As long ago, my love, how long ago!
—Christina A. Rossetti.

MISCELLANEOUS READING.

"ADOPTED."

"It's very strange," muttered Blanche Penroy, slowly weaving together the wreath of scarlet autumn leaves with which she was decorating her broad-brimmed straw hat.

She made a beautiful picture sitting there all alone in the mellow glow and color of the October woods, a crimson shawl drooping from her shoulders, and the sunshine lighting up her bright auburn curls with glittering threads of gold, while upon the fallen tree trunk that formed her impromptu seat lay a tiny branch of ferns and autumnal flowers. She was transparently fair, with purple veins in each waxen temple and a faint pink bloom on her cheeks, while her eyes, large and brown, seemed to look at you with the grave, tender expression of an infant.

"Yes, it is very strange," went on Miss Penroy, musing within herself. "I know so little about him; I have only known him about ten days, yet when he spoke about leaving Elm Point last night it seemed as if all the sunshine was leaving the world for me. Oh, Blanche, naughty, naughty, naughty little Blanche!" she added, leaning forward, and apostrophizing the fair face mirrored in the stream at her feet. "Is it possible that you've allowed yourself to fall in love with that tall, black-eyed young man? Ten days ago I had never seen him—and now!"

The roses mounted up in her cheek as she wondered within herself whether Mr. Evering cared for her.

"I wish I knew!" she muttered aloud.

"Knew what?" demanded a calm voice, and Mr. Gilbert Evering took up the bunch of flowers and coolly seated himself beside her—a tall, handsome man, with brilliant dark eyes, rather irregular features, and a deep color glowing through his olive skin.

Blanche demurely looked up at him—she was not to be taken by storm thus easily—and asked;

"Do you think it will rain to-morrow. For our picnic I want to wear my white Indian shawl?"

"Oh, the picnic! I had forgotten that when I spoke of leaving to-morrow. Of course, though, my presence or absence will make no great difference?"

Blanche was silent. Somehow that scarlet and brown spotted leaf required a good deal of adjustment in that ribbon of her hat.

"Blanche, shall I go or stay.

"As you please, Mr. Evering, of course."

"No; as somebody else pleases. Yes or no! And I forewarn you that yes means a great deal."

"How much does it mean?" questioned Blanche, half archly, half timorously.

"Everything!"

"Then you may stay."

"Mr. Blanche—my little daisy!" he whispered, bending his stately head over the slender hand that lay on the autumn leaves. And Blanche felt that in the golden stillness of that October evening she had turned a new page in the book of her life!

She was verry, very happy, and all that day she seemed to be walking through the bright mysteries of a dream. But with the morning came other feelings; alas! that shadow should always follow sunshine in this world of ours.

"I'm not disposed to be unreasonable, Blanche!" said Gilbert, in a whisper, as he arranged her white lace shawl for her, amid the merry tumult of the picnic ground, "but I do think you have waltzed quite often enough with Mr. Birmingham!"

"Jealous already, Gilbert?" taunted the girl, flushed and rosy with the triumph of her beauty, and the irresistible instincts of coquetry.

"Of course you'll do as you please, Blanche; only I warn you, it's a choice between Walter Birmingham and me. You dance with him at your own risk!"

At the same instant he came up.

"May I have the pleasure of the polka with you, Miss Penroy?

And Blanche, defiant, wilful and a little piqued, answered, "Yes."

She glided away with her hand on Walter Birmingham's shoulder. Gilbert had no business to be so unreasonable.

His grave, stern face rather startled her as she came once more to the rustic seat of twisted boughs, when the band was silent, and Mr. Brimingham had gone to bring her a glass of iced lemonade.

"Gilbert! why do you look so cross?"

"Because I have reason. I am sorry you pay so little attention to my wishes, Miss Penroy."

She drew herself up haughtily.

"You are beginning to dictate early, sir!"

"Have I not the right?"

"No, Mr. Evering."

"Be it so, Blanche," he said, in a voice that betrayed how deep the arrow rankled in his bosom. "I give up the right now and henceforward."

Blanche was startled. She would have said more, but Walter Birmingham was advancing toward her, and when next she had leisure to look round Gilbert was gone from her side.

"What have I done?" she thought, in dismay. "I'll see him this evening, and coax him into good humor once more. He surely can't be vexed with me for an idle word like that."

Ah, little Blanche, it is not the well-considered sentence that does all the harm in this world—it is the idle word!

"Such a charming day we have had, Mrs. Traine," said Blanche, as she came in, smiling and radiant, as if the worm, remorse, was not gnawing at her heart.

"Yes," said the blooming matron, who was reading in an easy chair under the shadow of the vines. "But what sent Mr. Evering away in such a hurry?"

"Sent him away?"

"Yes—by the evening train. He came home, packed his things and drove away as if there was not a moment to lose. I am very sorry; we shall miss him so much."

Blanche went slowly upstairs and sat down by her window, looking out at the purple glow of the evening landscape as if it were a featureless blank. So he was really gone away; and by her own folly she had lost the priceless treasure of Gilbert Evering's love.

"And I cannot even write to him, for I do not know his address," she thought, with clasped hands and tearless eyes. "Well, it is my own fault, and I must abide the consequences as best I may."

So Blanche Penroy went home from the gay, fashionable place a sadder and a wiser woman, and the November mists drooping o'er the brick and mortar wilderness of her city home had never seemed half so dreary to her as they did now.

"I suppose I shall be an old maid," thought Blanche, walking up and down in the fire-lit darkness of her room, her dimpled hands clasped behind her waist. "I never cared for anyone as I cared for—for Gilbert; and I dare say I shall keep a cat and grow fond of green tea. Ah, well-a-day! life cannot last forever."

A dreary comfort that for a girl of nineteen summers.

She rang the bell with an impatient jerk.

"Are there any letters, Sanderson?"

"One ma'am; it came by the evening post, about fifteen minutes ago."

"Light the gas, then, and give it to me."

Blanche sat down by the fire and opened the letter, suppressing a yawn.

"Black-edged and black-sealed! So poor Mrs. Marchmont is gone at last!"

It was from the executors of Miss Penroy's distant cousin, formally and briefly announcing her death, which had taken place in one of the West India Islands some months since; but of which the "melancholera news," as the letter ran, had only just been received. It was not entirely unexpected, as Mrs. Marchmont had been for some years slowly fading out of the world, a victim to hereditary consumption.

"Leaving one child, a son," slowly repeated Blanche, leaning her cheek on her hand and looking down into the fiery quiver of the whitening coals. "Poor little fellow! he must feel nearly as desolate as I do! Only I have one advantage—I have at least a sufficiency of this world's goods; and this orphan child must be thrown penniless and alone on his own resources, for, if I remember aright, Mrs. Marchmont forfeited all the wealth of her first marriage by her second alliance with the poverty-stricken lawyer who death plunged her into such bitter mourning. That was a genuine love match, yet how 'leaving one child—a son!' Why should I not adopt the stray waif, and make it the business of my life to cherish and comfort him? I have no object in existence; here is one that Providence itself seems to point out to me."

Once more she rang the bell, with fresh color glowing in her cheeks and a new light in her eyes.

"Bring in my writing-desk immediately, Sanderson, and get ready to take a letter to the post for me as soon as possible."

The old servant obeyed, wondering at his mistress' unwonted energy, and yet well pleased to see signs of her old animation returning.

"She do look more like herself to-night, do Miss Blanche, than she has for a long time," he said to the house-keeper as he came down-stairs after obeying the summons. "I only wish Miss Blanche would take a fancy to some nice, properly-behaved young man; it don't seem right that she should live all by herself in this big house, so forlorn-like."

The house-keeper nodded sagaciously to old Mr. Sanderson's proposition. She fully agreed with him.

"Only Miss Blanche was too wilful ever to listen to a word of advice."

It was a very simple letter that Blanche Penroy wrote to her "far away" cousin's executors, dictated by the fulness of her heart.

"I shall never marry now," she wrote, "and it seems to become my plainly indicated duty to undertake the care of this orphan child of Mrs. Marchmont. With your approval, therefore, I propose to adopt him, and endeavor, so far as is in my power, to supply the place of his lost mother. You may at first deem me rather too young to undertake so grave and serious a responsibility; but I am nineteen last month, and I am very, very much older in thought and feeling than in years. Of course at my death the child will inherit the property which was left to me by my deceased parents."

"I hope my cousin's executors are like the nice, white-headed old lawyers one reads about," said Blanche to herself, as she folded the little sheet of paper, "and not cross old fudges, talking of 'expediency' and 'appropriateness;' for I do so much want somebody to love and care for; and I've a sort of premonition that this little fellow will be nice, rosy and lovable. I think I'll teach him to call me 'Aunty.'"

Exactly a week subsequently a prim, legal note was received from Messrs. Alias and Corpus, the deceased lady's executors, stating that "they saw no valid objection to Miss Penroy's very laudable projects, and that in accordance thereto the child of the late Mr. Marchmont would arrive at Miss Penroy's residence on the following Saturday."

"Saturday, and this is Friday," ejaculated Blanche, with the new brightness dancing in her hazel eyes. "Oh, how glad I shall be! Sanderson, tell Mrs. Brown to have the blue room fitted up immediately for Master Marchmont, and you had better go yourself to the station with the carriage at five to-morrow afternoon to meet him."

"Yes ma'am," said Sanderson stolidly.

The apparition of a great burly boy tramping with muddy boots on the velvet carpets, and disturbing the house with balls, marbles and haloos did not possess the charm in Sanderson's eyes that it seemed to have for his mistress. And even patient Mrs. Brown remarked with a species of exasperation that "she didn't see what put this freak into Miss Blanche's head."

Saturday was a day of hail and tempest and softly falling snow, and by 5 o'clock the drawing-room were lighted, and the crimson silk curtains closely drawn to exclude the stormy darkness without.

Six times within the last fifteen minutes had Blanche Penroy looked at her watch, as she stood by the fire waiting to hear the returning carriage-wheels.

She was dressed in a rich China-blue silk dress with pearl pin and ear drops, and a little point lace at her throat and wrists, and the color in her cheek, and the golden tinge in her bright hair made her, unconsciously, very fair to look upon.

"Oh, I hope—I hope he will like me," thought Blanche, with that distinctive yearning for love that enters every woman's heart, as the door opened.

"Here's the young gentleman, miss," said Sanderson, with a half suppressed sound between a laugh and a snort.

But instead of a child of seven or eight years old, a tall apparition walked in, something over six feet high, with a black mustache, and merry hazel eyes brimming over with mirth. For an instant Blanche stared at him as if she could scarcely credit the evidence of her own senses.

"Gilbert!"

"Exactly. You wanted to adopt me, and here I am."

"No, but, Gilbert—"

"Yes, but, Blanche!"

"Your are not Mrs. Marchmont's son!"

"I am—by her first marriage. And although I am by no means the penniless infant you seemed to suppose, as all my father's wealth comes to me, I am quite willing to be adopted—particularly as you are not married to Walter Birmingham."

Blanche struggled with tears and laughter, uncertain which would best express her feelings, but Gilbert Evering drew her tenderly toward him.

"If you adopt me, dearest, it must be for life. Nay, do not hesitate—our happiness has already been too much at the mercy of trifles. You will not retrace your offer?"

"Well—after all," said Blanche demurely, "all I wanted was somebody to love and care for, and—"

"And I shall do very well in that capacity, eh?"

And Sanderson, who had listened earnestly at the door, crept downstairs to inform Mrs. Brown that "they were going to have a new master!"

THE AMERICAN FLAG.

The first European banners unfurled upon the shores of the New World, of which we have any authentic account, are those of Columbus, who landed on the small island of St. Salvador, October 12, 1492. Doubtless his ideas of a new world to the westward came from Iceland, which he visited in the spring of 1477.

His son writes that Columbus, dressed in scarlet, stepped ashore and planted the royal standard of Spain, emblazoned with the arms of Castile and Leon. A white flag with green cross was its companion.

In 1499 the eastern coast of South America was explored, and eight years later the great discovery was announced to the world by a Florentine, Americus Vespucius, who gave name to the Western continent. About this time the Cabots planted on the shores of North America the banners of England and of St. Mark of Venice. The earlier voyagers found that the Indians of North America carried for a standard a pole well covered with the wing feathers of eagles.

The red cross of St. George floated from the mast of the Mayflower, 1620, when the pilgrims landed on Plymouth Rock. For a century and a half, during the colonial and provincial periods, the use of the English flag continued in North America with the addition of many devices and mottoes.

Some flags were red, white, blue or yellow. Others were red, with white horizontal stripes, or red and blue stripes. Upon these were the pine or "Liberty Tree," and the words, "An Appeal to Heaven;" also stars, the crescent, anchor, beaver and serpent. Under the latter, "Don't tread on me." A flag at the battle of White Plains bore the words "Liberty or Death."

On January 2, 1776, at Cambridge, Mass., was first hoisted the "Grand Union," flag of the crosses of St. George and St. Andrew, and the thirteen alternate red and white stripes emblematical of the union of the thirteen colonies against the oppressive acts of British tyranny.

This was the flag in use when the Declaration of Independence was read by the Committee of Safety at Philadelphia, in the presence of Washington in New York and from the balcony of the State House in Boston.

On the 14th of August, 1777, Congress resolved "that the flag of the United States be thirteen stripes, alternately red and white, and that the union be thirteen stars, white in blue field, representing a new constellation."

Once the stripes were increased to fifteen, but in 1818 they were changed back permanently to thirteen, perpetuating the original thirteen States of the Union, and it was decreed that for every new State coming into the Union a star should be added. The stars have five points; those on our coins, six. They were first arranged in a circle, afterward in the form of a large star, and now in parallel lines.

A SNAKE ARTIST.

Nobody knew how he got in; but he was there, and after borrowing a chew of tobacco from the police reporter he handed his card to the managing editor:

AL WAYS LYNE.
Snake Artist.

"Well, what can we do for you?" asked the man. ed.

"I'm 'n artist—snake artist."

"So I see."

"Yes. Well, I write snake stories for the public press. Most entertaining reading Imaginable. Never does any harm, because nobody believes 'em."

"What?"

"S'fac'. Nobody takes any stock in 'em, but they read 'em all the same."

"What have you done in this line?"

"I've written all the boss snake yarns in the West for the last ten years."

"Bring any sketches with you?"

"Well, no, but I can get one up in a few moments."

He sat down in the religious editor's place, and in five minutes handed over the following, bearing an up-State date line:

"On the morning of Wednesday of this week little Miss Strayoff, the two-year-old daughter of one of the wealthiest and most influential members of this community, met with an adventure which might be regarded as incredible but for the fact that it is vouched for by reliable witnesses. She got lost in a neighboring forest and was chased by a huge snake, which emerged from a deserted hut in a wild-ravine, where it had been leading a hermit's life, subsisting on wild herbs and eking a precarious income by telling fortunes. When the child saw the terrible monster she was almost paralyzed by fright, but with a superhuman effort regained possession of her faculties and began to flee. She was, however, fated to be overtaken, as the serpent pursued and caught up with her before she had gone ten miles. Then he opened his mouth and prepared to devour her, when all at once his attitude changed. Instead of carrying out this resolution, to the exceeding surprise of his intended victim the monster smoothed her hair and patted her little cheeks, and, gently releasing a $5,000 diamond brooch from her throat, pinned it in his shirt front and walked rapidly away. The friends of the child found her soon afterward, and on learning her strange story went to look for his snakeship. They discovered him sitting in front of his hut studying the Cape May time table, with a view to becoming a watering place hotel clerk."

The editor assured Mr. Lyne that he possessed too much genius to be permitted to run at large, so he employed him to write obituary notices.—Exchange.

HOW SHE WAS FOOLED.

A tradesman living in the Rue St. Honore possesses a young and pretty wife, who is passionately fond of the theatre; but, being continually occupied in business, he is rarely able to indulge her. A short time ago she got a ticket for the Porte St. Martin, and telling him that it had been given to her, asked him to accompany her. He promised to do so, but when the evening came was unable to go. The wife, who was en grande toilette, was furious at her disappointment; but, determined not to be balked, she made her servant accompany her. On leaving the theatre she was followed by two young men, who were very insolent. To escape them she called a cab that was passing, but the coachman made a sign that he had some one in the vehicle. She was turning away, when the cab stopped, and an elegantly-dressed young man jumped from it.

"I see, ladies," he said with a low bow, "that you are annoyed by two insolent young fellows. Deign to accept this cab. I will seek another."

The tradeswoman accepted the offer with thanks, and the gentleman handed her and her servant in with the greatest politeness. She gave her address to the cabman, and the vehicle drove off. Arrived near her own residence, she stopped the cab and asked what there was to pay.

"Twenty-one francs," said the cabman.

"What—twenty-one francs!" cried the tradeswoman, in astonishment. "Why, you have only come from the Porte St. Denis, and have not been half an hour on your way."

"Do not talk nonsense," said the cabman rudely. "I have been driving the gentleman about since morning. But where is he? Disappeared!"

On discovering that his fare had really disappeared, the man thought the women were in connivance with him to cheat him and he became very insolent. The tradeswoman had not money enough to satisfy his demand, and he gave her and her companion into custody. They had to pass the whole night in the guard-house de la Lanjeries, and were not released until the next morning, when the tradesman claimed them, and indemnified the coachman. The tradeswoman vows that she will never go to the theatre again without her husband.

AS FAR AS THE WAX WILL GO.

Many of the first settlers of Illinois were rude in speech and rough in manner. Money was scarce with them, and service was paid for in produce. Gov. R.—used to illustrate these incidents of frontier life by the following anecdote:

Once there came to his office a young man accompanied by a young woman.

"Be you the 'squire?" asked the manly youth.

"Yes sir."

"Can you tie the knot for us right away?"

"Yes sir."

"How much do you charge?"

"One dollar is the legal fee, sir."

"Will you take your fee in beeswax?"

"Yes, if you can't pay cash."

"Well, go ahead and tie the knot, and I'll fetch in the wax."

"Oh," said the 'Squire, thinking there was a good chance for a little fun; "bring in the beeswax first and then I'll marry you."

Reluctantly the youth went out to where was hitched the horse, upon which, Darby and Joan fashion, they had ridden, and brought the wax in a sack. On being weighed its value was found to be only sixty cents.

"Wall," said the anxious groom, "tie the knot, and I'll fetch more wax next week."

"No, sir, I don't trust; that is against the rules of this office."

Slowly the disappointed youth turned to go out, saying "Come, Sal, let's go?"

"I say, mister, answered Sal, with a woman's wit, "can't you marry us as far as the wax will go?"

"Yes, I can, and will," replied the 'Squire, laughing; and he did.

A JOKE ON THE LAWYERS.

A case of assault and battery was recently tried before one of our uptown aldermen, in which a Pittsburg lawyer, who has an office on Grand street, not a thousand miles away from the Court House, tried very hard to make out that the defendant's family must have seen the fight, which took place just outside the kitchen door. The mother of the defendant being on the stand, the lawyer opened the case in this wise:

"Well, where were you when the first blow was struck?"

"Down cellar, skimming milk and tying on cloths over my preserve jars," she replied.

"Where was your husband?"

"He was in the barn, mending harness and greasing the wagon."

"Where was your daughter, Sarah?"

"Sarah was in the north bedroom, changing the pillow cases on the spare bed."

"And where was Jane?"

"Jane? She had run over to a neighbor's to borrow some coffee and nutmeg."

"Let's see! Haven't you a sister living with you?"

"Yes, sir. She was sewing carpet rags upstairs."

"Ah! she was. You have a younger son named Charles, haven't you?"

"Yes, sir; and he was salting the sheep across the road."

"Just so. You are a very busy family, I see. I suppose the dog was very busy just at that particular moment?"

"Yes, sir; he was. Old Bose was down at the gate looking toward Pittsburg for one-horse lawyers!"

That closed her testimony and settled him more than a foot.

DEMOCRATIC HARMONY.

Tammany Hall has formally proposed to the other Democratic organizations of New York City, that they all combine for the choice of delegates from each Assembly District to the State Convention, thereby avoiding the possibility of contested seats.

That is as it should be.

The Democratic party has lost much by the rivalry of factions, and we hope wiser counsels will henceforth sway its actions everywhere.

The integrity of Constitutional Government and the prosperity of the whole people require Democratic success, and to secure and retain that, united zeal and firm adherence to principles are all that is needed.

The cause of Democracy is the cause of country and no man has the right to mar it. If he is a sincere Democrat, he will ignore everything like personal animosity, and cheerfully bowing to the decision of the majority strive earnestly for victory.

WHAT OF THE PAST.

History is the record of deeds enacted and results attained, and its careful perusal is wisdom both for the present and future.

True, the progress of the world, and prominently that of our own favored country, in mental activity and material development has been wonderful, yet the fact remains unimpeachable, that even a discarded past is freighted with safe and useful knowledge.

We need to consult its pages more frequently.

When the Continental Congress assembled in Carpenter's Hall, Philadelphia, one hundred and seven years ago, there resided within that city a gentleman of middle age, modest in deportment, practically intelligent, and sincerely attached to the patriot cause. His reputation for integrity ranked so high that the Indian tribes of Pennsylvania had conferred upon him the grand designation of—"The man who tells the truth."

That gentleman was not an aspirant for position, but ambitious only for the public good, and greatly to his surprise received one morning in the street a message from Peyton Randolph, President of the Congress, requesting him to come at once to Carpenter's Hall.

"For what purpose am I wanted," he asked the messenger.

"I cannot tell, but your presence is desired immediately," was the reply.

He obeyed the summons, and upon entering the Hall was thus accosted by the President—"We have sent for you to keep the minutes of the proceedings of this Congress."

After a few moments thought he took his seat as Secretary of the Continental Congress, and continued to discharge, with rigid fidelity, the important duties of the office throughout the dark struggle of the Revolution and until the establishment of the Congress of the Constitution, a period of fifteen years.

That patriotic citizen was Charles Thomson of honored memory, and the historical incident thus related, although a mere scrap, is rich in moral worth and well deserving of imitation even amid the boasted enlightenment of the present time.

What are its teachings?

They are two-fold and essential, showing in the first place that the Fathers of the Republic made unsullied character and practical ability the positive requisites for every official appointment, and further, that in those brave days of old, men accepted the tender of office as a matter of duty and honestly served the public regardless of mercenary personal gain.

Glorious patriotism!

Would it were now the governing rule, instead of an exception, in the land of Peyton Randolph and Charles Thomson!

Its permanent re-establishment would expunge modern national disgrace, cement the bulwarks of freedom, augment vastly the welfare of all the people, and do justice to the workmanship of those valiants who, amid perils and privations, reared for the happiness of coming generations the matchless pillars of the American Republic.

Let us from the past garner instruction and strength.

THE ASSASSIN SHOT AT.

An attempt was made Sunday evening last while changing guards to shoot the assassin Guiteau at Washington. There is reason to believe that a few days ago there was some talk among the soldiers detailed to guard him, in regard to which one of them should be chosen to shoot at him whenever he should present his head at the window of his cell where it could be seen from outside. It was decided that the work should be done by Sergeant John A. Mason, of Company B, Second Artillery, and he made preparations for it. Sunday evening three wagon loads of soldiers left the Arsenal for the jail to relieve the day guards. Mason was in the last wagon, and his companions noticed that he was fumbling with the lock of his gun, and was acting strangely. Nothing was said to him about it, however. When his wagon reached the jail Mason was the first to get out. He pushed forward, reached a small hillock about three feet from where the horses stood, brought his gun to his shoulder, took steady aim at Guiteau's window, shouted "There he is," and fired. Before the smoke cleared away the other soldiers gather around him. When asked "Why did he shoot?" he calmly remarked: "I wanted to kill that wretch in there, and I have been at it for ten days. I hope I have done the work in good style." Mason then walked toward Captain McGilway and surrendered himself. He was placed in the custody of two officers.

There was much excitement about the jail and inside of it. Prisoners who had heard the shot ran to the windows and shouted. Warden Crocker and his deputy, who had been in the jail office, ran through the corridors to Guiteau's cell and found him on his knees, terror stricken.

"Do they want to murder me?" he asked.

The Warden assured him that he need have no fear.

"But I've been shot at," said the prisoner. Guiteau at the time was standing at the window, and the shot barely missed his head.

The Warden discovered that the ball had not hit the prisoner's body, and he then went outside to see who had fired the shot. It was agreed that it would be best to tell Guiteau that the shooting had been accidental. This announcement was made to him, the explanation being that a soldier in getting out of the wagon had accidentally discharged his gun. It was decided that Guiteau should be removed to another cell, and he was placed in one formerly occupied by Stone, who murdered his wife.

The November elections this year will be held on the 8th, which is the latest date on which those fixed by the peculiarly idiotic formula, "the Tuesday next succeeding the first Monday in November," can be held.

A loud praying "Christian gentleman" and Republican politician of Chicago is charged with having raised $50,000 for the purpose of sending roughs and repeaters to carry the Indiana election last year. Profession may be a dirty rag, consistency is ever a precious jewel.

Daniel Webster is credited with the remark—"The man who serves the public most faithfully receives no adequate reward." There is too much truth in that. Undeserved and copious censure, with but few thanks, is why scores of the very best citizens decline to accept office.

John Bright, of England, says—"It has not been foreign tariffs, or commercial treaties, or what other governments have done which has caused a general falling off in home trade. It is the diminution of the wealth of the country by the reduction of the produce of the soil."

The number of miles of railway completed in Texas during the year ending September 1st, was 1,634, making a total of 4,389 miles now in operation, with hundreds of miles additional rapidly building. A magnificent State is Texas, and it was the Democratic party that made it American territory.

It is officially announced that during the past thirteen years about nineteen million dollars have been appropriated for the support of the different tribes of Sioux Indians. No doubt the money went out of the Treasury, but where did it go? A small per-centage, we fear, only reached the Sioux.

Rev. DeWitt Talmage says—"A pistol is the meanest and most infernal weapon ever invented. It is compact and portable murder. There is some ability about a sword. If you are going to take a man's life with a sword you have to expose your own life, and so some courage is demanded; but a pistol is the weapon of a sneak." Talmage is sound on the pistol question.

In advocacy of Civil-Service Reform and the abolishment of a corrupt spoils system, George William Curtis, of New York, thus speaks—"Like the slight sound amid the frozen silence of the Alps that loosens and brings down the avalanche, the solitary pistol-shot of the 2d of July suddenly started the vast accumulation of public opinion into conviction, and on every side thunders the rush and roar of its overwhelming descent, which will sweep away the host of evils bred of this monstrous abuse."

Proceedings of the Board of Chosen Freeholders of the County of Union, N. J.

[OFFICIAL.]

ELIZABETH, N. J., Sept. 1, 1881.

A communication from Alex. A. Taylor, Clerk of Summit township, in reference to the arrears of taxes due from said township, was read, and on motion received and placed on file.

COMMITTEE REPORTS.

From Committee on Bridge over Robinson's Branch, between Clark township and Rahway.

To the Board of Chosen Freeholders:

Your committee appointed at the last meeting of the Board, to examine the bridge over Robinson Branch, near Hazlewood Cemetery, between Rahway city and Clark township, would report that they met there at the time appointed, August 16, and after a careful examination found the bridge to be in a very dangerous condition—some parts of it entirely rotten and other parts badly smashed up, caused by the ice jam at the breaking up of the river last March; the committee then and there in their judgment considered that the present bridge was no longer safe, and that the interest of the traveling public demanded that it be replaced with a new truss bridge, which for durability and cheapness in the end, should be built of iron. All the masonry needed to be done on the abutment walls was simply pointing up the south wall and rebuilding a small portion of the north wall and pointing up.

All of which is respectfully submitted,

WILLIAM J. THOMPSON,
STEPHEN S. MAPES,
W. R. MELICK,
OWEN SULLIVAN,
W. E. CLARK,
C. W. L. MARTINE,
Committee.

On motion received and placed on file.

RESOLUTIONS.

By Freeholder Randolph:

Resolved, That lunacy bill, amounting to $4,519.37, for quarter commencing Aug. 15, be paid if found to be correct.

On motion adopted by a unanimous vote.

By the Director:

Whereas, A check of the County Collector, No. 85, amounting to $13, payable to A. S. Ryno and mailed to Plainfield, which has never been received, and payment of same being stopped; therefore be it

Resolved, That another check marked "duplicate," be drawn by the County Collector.

On motion adopted by a unanimous vote.

By Freeholder Forsyth:

Resolved, That a committee of five be appointed to report at the next meeting of this Board as to the necessity and probable cost of enlarging the bridge or culvert corner Jersey avenue, Bayway and Murray street, near Bayway avenue.

On motion adopted and the following committee appointed:

Freeholders Forsyth, Sullivan, Thompson, Eller, Newbury.

By the Director:

Whereas, The Collectors or Receivers of Taxes in some of the cities and townships of this county have recently contracted the habit of receiving for taxes, warrants or certificates of indebtedness (which warrants in some cases are drawn payable with interest) to the great prejudice of the State and County taxes, which taxes they certainly have no right to offset by local debts; and

Whereas, Some of them have in recent years diverted or misappropriated the first money collected to other purposes than the payment of the State and County taxes; and

Whereas, The decision in the Bayonne case by the Court of Errors and Appeals, required the first money collected to be paid the State and county, and in a more recent opinion by the Supreme Court in granting a mandamus against a city in this county for a balance of taxes due on the years 1877, 1878, 1879, the same rule was applied; and

Whereas, Some of them (Collectors and Receivers) are now collecting local taxes;

Resolved, That the County Attorney, Collector and Director are hereby empowered to use all legal measures at their command, to stop the receiving of city or township warrants for taxes until the State and county taxes shall have been paid, even to the criminal prosecution of the parties concerned; also,

Resolved, That the County Attorney, Collector and Director be empowered to collect the present tax levy at the earliest moment practicable after it shall be due, and report hereafter at each meeting of the Board the amount due from each delinquent city or township; also

Resolved, That our clerk forward a copy of the above to each Collector or Receiver of Taxes in the county; also to the clerk of each City Council and the clerk of each township, with the request that it be laid before their respective Boards at their first meeting.

After being discussed by the members and the County Attorney having given an opinion in the matter, the resolution was adopted by the following vote:

Affirmative—Director Martine and Freeholders Briant, Clark, Doty, Eller, Forsyth, Isenmann, Melick, Mapes, Newbury, Smith, Sullivan, Thompson—13.

Not voting—Freeholders Hubbard and Randolph.

Absent—Freeholder Runkle.

By Freeholder Thompson:

Resolved, That the Committee on Robinson's Branch Bridge near Hazelwood Cemetery be empowered to proceed and build an iron bridge over said stream at a cost not exceeding eighteen hundred dollars.

On motion adopted by a unanimous vote.

By the Director:

Resolved, That the Collector, Attorney and Director be directed to commence proceedings to have the collecting and receiving officers of the cities and townships in this county, who are accepting warrants for taxes, restrained by injunction from receiving any such warrants until such time as the State and county taxes are paid.

On motion adopted by a unanimous vote.

Jersey Central Affairs.

It is understood that the illness of Judge Lathrop has delayed proceedings for taking Jersey Central out of the hands of the receiver. Judge Lathrop is now, however, convalescent, and some action may be expected in the long delayed proceedings at a comparatively early day. It is rumored that Frederic A. Potts, Esq. will be made President of Jersey Central at the next election.

The centennial main exhibition building, lately purchased by the Central Co., is to be made the Jersey City depot of the Jersey, Wabash through line. The building will make a very fine station, and has been purchased very cheap.

A Gala Day in Elizabeth.

On Tuesday of next week the Eighth Regiment of New York, will visit the Waverley State Fair as the guests of the Third Regiment, N. G. N. J. Some years since the Third were the recipients of the hospitalities of New York City at the hands of the Eighth, and nothing will be left undone to return the compliment in a proper manner. The Eighth will leave New York by the Pennsylvania Railroad at two o'clock, arriving at Waverley, being received by the Third and march thence to the Fair grounds as the guests of the State Agricultural Society. After a short dismissal to give the commands an opportunity to inspect mammoth pumpkins, fruits, domestic culinary art, the races and other sights of the Fair, the Eighth will have a dress parade, after which the two commands will be reviewed by Governor Ludlow, Gen. Mott and perhaps other distinguished Military officers. The line of march will then be taken to Elizabeth, where after a short street parade a bountiful collation will be spread. The Eighth will leave for home at dusk, escorted to the train by the Third. It is understood that Col. Scott, of the Eighth, expects to have out his full command of ten companies, and they can be assured that that their reception will be one of which they may feel proud.—Elizabeth Herald.

The Ocean to Garfield.

Welcome! Thou stricken Chief,
Whose courage is as boundless as my Realm,
Welcome!
How gladly would I take thee
In these briny arms, and wash
The poison from thy aching wounds.
Each wave that breaks upon
Thy country's shores, should scatter
Healing balm upon thy broken frame,
That holds a spirit so unbroken;—
I must not hold thee in my
Spray-fringed robe?—
Then, every breeze that courses o'er my path,
Shall prove to thee a vigor-yielding waft
That bids thee live!

MESSRS. EDITORS:

The judgment in favor of the City for taxes, as reported in the Times, was soon set aside when it was found that Messrs. VanWinkle & Maxson, Counsel for the defendant, had filed a demurrer to the complaint of the Corporation Counsel. It was simply an attempt to take judgment by default. The question as to the liability of the citizens to pay those taxes is yet to be settled by the Supreme Court, and that decision will be of greater value as an authority than the judgment of the Justice of the Peace cited in the circular recently issued by the Corporation Counsel however extensively argued. * * *

A Terrible Accident.

We learn from the Newark Journal that on Friday of last week a horrible accident befell James Picket, a workman in the sawmill of William T. Johnson, Berkeley Heights, near Plainfield. He was sitting on a log that was being cut into boards, when he slipped and fell upon the circular saw. His right arm and part of the shoulder-blade were cut off. His foot was caught in the machinery, producing a compound comminuted fracture above the ankle—the bone was literally broken into splinters. Amputation, it is thought, will be necessary. Were it not for the presence of mind of some of Picket's companions in the sawmill he would have bled to death before medical aid could be brought to him. They performed a neat piece of surgery by catching up the axillary artery and tying it until the arrival of Dr. John B. Probasco, of this city. The messenger for the doctor had to drive seven miles to Plainfield, and seven in return, and during this time Picket had recovered from the shock. After dressing the wound Dr. Probasco brought Picket to St. Michael's Hospital in Newark, whereat the surgeons held a consultation in Picket's case and decided that he had not sufficient strength to bear the amputation of his leg at present. The Sisters say that he has shown no signs of approaching death, and that there is a possibility of his recovery.

The young man has since died.

Settle Up, Before Too Late.

Prof. George H. Cook, State Geologist of New Jersey, has come to the conclusion that the land in Cape May and Cumberland counties is gradually but certainly settling. From knowledge now in his possession he estimates that the surface has settled about eight feet during the last 100 years. During a recent visit he declared it his intention to test the matter by placing stone posts in the ground at certain localities, a record of which should be kept so as to insure their being found at any future time, said stones to be so set and marked with reference to their height above the sea level that it may be positively ascertained whether this portion of the State is becoming lower, and at what rate. Old residents of the lowest portion of Cumberland county, in the neighborhood of the mouth of Maurice river, will show you land that was once considered high land, and contained a light, dry looking, sandy soil, that is now low, black and heavy. The great tide which came up in October of 1878 swept further inland and did greater damage to farms adjoining the meadows, destroyed more timber, and emptied itself into a greater number of surface wells than any of the great tides on record.

AMERICAN INSTITUTE FAIR.

Never were there such great preparations for the great American Institute Exhibition as now. Mr. Charles Wager Hull, the General Superintendent of the fair, is now actively at work and surrounded by a great crowd of decorators, artists and others and is rapidly improving the place and making it ready for the show. Great improvements have been made in every respect on the old institute; visitors will scarcely know the place. The applications for space have been more numerous than ever before and it is doubtful if all can be accommodated. Many will be undoubtedly crowded out for want of room. The show promises to be more interesting than ever and many entirely new inventions, especially in the machinery department, are very curious and have never been seen before. They are all the work of American inventors who are prolific in genius and display many new inventions, which are greatly to their credit.

The Art Gallery will be very complete and filled with gems of art. The music will be furnished by the Ninth Regiment Band, led by Mr. Arbuckle, the celebrated cornet virtuoso, and concerts will be given every afternoon at 2 and evening at 8 o'clock, at which the cornetist will perform. He is considered by all artists in his line as superior to even great Levy, who draws such extravagant pay.

Messrs. H. K. & F. B. Thurber & Co., will make a grand display of tropical fruits and other curiosities from all parts of the world. Mr. Asher S. Mills the Press Agent will extend every courtesy to the members of the press and cheerfully give them every every attention they desire. His room is No. 6 on the main hall, and he is always in attendance.

The fair opened on the 14th inst., and will close November 26. All should attend who can.

The Michigan Fires.

The following appeal for aid has been telegraphed from Port Huron, Mich.:

To the American People:—We have tonight returned from the burnt district of Huron and Sanilac Counties. We have seen the burnt, disfigured and writhing bodies of men, women and children. Rough board coffins contained the dead, followed to the grave by a few blinded, despairing relatives; crowds of half-starved people at some of the stations asking bread for their families and neighbors. We hear of more than 200 victims already buried, and more charred and bloated bodies are daily discovered. Already 1,500 families are found to be utterly destitute and houseless. They huddle in barns, in school houses and in their neighbors' houses, scorched, blinded and hopeless. Some still wander half-crazed around the ruins of their habitations vainly seeking their dead; some in speechless agony, wringing their hands and refusing to be comforted. More than 10,000 people who only a week ago occupied happy, comfortable homes are to-day houseless and homeless sufferers. They are hungry and almost naked when found, and in such numbers and so widely scattered that our best efforts and greatest resources fail to supply their immediate wants. Without speedy aid many will perish and many more will suffer and become exiles. Our people will do their utmost for their relief, but all our resources would fail to meet their necessities.

We appeal to the charity and generosity of the American people. Send help without delay.

SCOTCH PLAINS SCRATCHINGS.

The Scotch Plains M. E. church, which for some time has been closed on account of repairs, will re-open on Sunday morning next. The presiding Elder, L. R. Dunn, not being able to be present, the Rev. Mr. Meeker of Plainfield will preach by request of the Elder.

Mr. Cleaver is building a new house here, Mr. S. Radin doing the work.

SPORTSMEN'S CORNER.

The Annual meeting of the New Jersey Game & Fish Protective Society will be held at the Mansion House, this city, Wednesday afternoon, Sept. 21st, 1881, at 3 o'clock, at which new officers will be elected to serve the ensuing year.

The Essex County Hunt has just added to its pack twenty-seven beautiful foxhounds, uniform in height and all marked black, tan and white. The hounds were imported by Sir Hugh Allen of Montreal and are believed to be the finest in this country. The Hunt will open the season Oct. 1, with a full pack of fifty-two foxhounds.

Corporation Notice.

Notice is hereby given that the following ordinance has been introduced before the Common Council and ordered to a third reading, and that it is the intention of the Council to pass the same.

O. B. LEONARD, City Clerk.

Plainfield, N. J., Sept. 8, 1881.

AN ORDINANCE.

To License and Regulate Peddlers, Hawkers, Cartmen, Hack, Omnibus, Stage and Truck Owners and Drivers.

The Inhabitants of the city of Plainfield, by their Common Council, do enact as follows:

Sec. 1. That a license may be granted by the City Clerk of said city, upon payment to him of the fees therefor as hereinafter provided, to each of such persons as shall apply to him therefor, to carry on, wholly or in part, within the limits of said city, the business of peddler, hawker or cartman, to drive or keep for use a hack, omnibus, stage, truck or other vehicle for the transportation of passengers, baggage or merchandise for hire, according to the provisions of this ordinance; and the said clerk shall keep a detailed record of all licenses so granted.

Sec. 2. That all applications for such license shall be in writing, signed by the applicant, stating his place of residence and the purpose and length of time for which such license is asked.

Sec. 3. That no person shall, after this ordinance shall go into effect, pursue, or in any manner carry on, as owner or as agent for another, within the limits of said city, the business of peddler or hawker without being first licensed therefor, according to the provisions of this ordinance; provided that nothing herein contained shall prevent farmers, gardeners or milkmen from selling the products of their own farms, or butchers from carrying on their business in said city without a license.

Sec. 4. That no person shall, after this ordinance shall go into effect, drive, keep or use for hire or wages, or cause to be driven, kept or used for hire or wages, any cart, truck, hack, omnibus, stage or other carriage or vehicle, for the transportation of passengers, baggage or merchandise of any kind, wholly or in part within the limits of said city, without being first licensed therefor, according to the provisions of this ordinance. One license and only one shall be required for each cart, truck, hack, omnibus, stage or other carriage or vehicle; and no person shall be deemed guilty of a violation of this section for driving a cart, truck, omnibus, stage, or other carriage or vehicle, for which a license has been obtained by its owner.

Sec. 5. Each license granted under the provisions of this ordinance shall expire on the first day of September next following the granting of the same, and shall state the object for which it is given, the name of the person licensed, the number of the license, and the date of its expiration.

Sec. 6. That each and every person so licensed shall, at the time, pay therefor into the hands of said City Clerk, to be by him paid to the City Treasurer for the use of said city, the sum of five dollars for each license for one year, or unexpired portion thereof, and in addition thereto the clerk's fee of fifty cents for issuing such license.

Sec. 7. That no person licensed under this ordinance shall stand upon or along the sidewalks, or in the streets or other public places in said city, with vehicles or otherwise, for the purpose of seeking or securing custom, or for any other purpose, in a way to obstruct travel or cause damage or annoyance to the owners or occupants of premises fronting on the public thoroughfares; and any person believing himself aggrieved by a violation of this section may make complaint thereof before the City Judge, and the offender shall be liable to a fine not to exceed five dollars for each offense.

Sec. 8. That every person so licensed as aforesaid, as soon as licensed, shall cause the number of his license to be conspicuously placed or painted upon the outside of his vehicle, and keep the same so placed or painted, and also wear on his person while engaged in the business for which he is licensed, so as to be easily seen, a badge with the corresponding number thereon, and shall be liable to a fine of three dollars for each violation of this section.

Sec. 9. That every license granted under this ordinance may be suspended or revoked by the Mayor on satisfactory cause, other than offenses specially provided for in this ordinance; and no person during such suspension or revocation, shall carry on his particular line of business, under penalty of ten dollars for each and every offense.

Sec. 10. That for each and every violation of section three or of section four of this ordinance the offender shall be liable to arrest and punishment by a fine not exceeding fifty dollars nor less than ten dollars, or imprisonment for a term not less than ten days nor more than thirty days.

Sec. 11. That the ordinance approved June 17th, 1878, entitled "An Ordinance to license and regulate street venders," &c., and the ordinance entitled "An Ordinance to license cartmen, expressmen and hackmen," approved July 22, 1870, and the amendment thereto approved December 30th, 1878, be and the same are hereby repealed. s9w3

THROUGH the kindness of Captain Dodd, our curiosity was recently satisfied with an examination of the keys that "Chicago" manufactured and with which he opened the locks of the Somerset Co. Jail. They are no doubt ingeniously constructed, but their simplicity is surprising and shows that the locks must have been of the most ancient design and plainness of mechanism.

THE twenty-sixth Annual Fair of the Hunterdon County Agricultural Society will be held at Flemington, on the 27th, 28th and 29th of September. The Society has made arrangements to make this the finest exhibition ever held on their grounds. The trotting schedule is the best ever offered by them. For Catalogue, send to WILLARD C. PARKER, Corresponding Secretary, Flemington, N. J.

OUR streets have been busy this week with boys and girls going to and from school. The long summer vacation is over. The youngsters have had a long play spell and must now get to their books. It will be rather hard work at first, but it will not be long before the little students will be quite as happy in school as they have been out of it. The torrid weather, however, has been against the little folks, as well as their teachers.

OLD clocks of the kind that our ancestors used to have standing in their sitting rooms and kitchens—that tell the days of the months, the movements of the moon and heavenly bodies, and strike with a sound that reverberates through the whole house, are becoming quite fashionable. But a few years ago they used to sell at vendues at one dollar to three dollars and four dollars, but they have now gone up from twelve dollars to fifty dollars.

FROM all parts of the country around us comes up the cry for rain. The mill streams are dwindling fast; springs are sinking, cisterns are exhausted—in short, all nature is clamoring for moisture. We could stand a week's continuous rain now without being set back very materially. The growing corn is suffering, and much inconvenience is being felt owing to the scarcity of water. The drought is wide-spread, embracing other States beyond New Jersey—there being an actual water famine in some sections.

THE latest cure for sprained joints is violent exercise, and testimonials received up to the time of our going to press, speak most enthusiastically in favor of such mode of treatment. One marvelous example is furnished in the case of the "devil" of the Central Times. That fallen angel suffered so terribly from a sprained wrist, one morning recently, as to be unable to work; yet, after an active participation in a game of base ball the same afternoon, no trace of the painful affliction remained in muscle or ligament.

THE total rain fall in this section, during August was 1.48 inches. "W," the weather reporter of the Newark Advertiser, says it is the dryest August since 1843, when his reports began, and the rainfall in Newark was less than a quarter of an inch. The month was also the hottest of all but one (1877) of the series, the mean of the month being more than four degrees above the average. The entire amount of rain falling during the summer (June, July and August) was but a little over six inches, not half the usual average of the past 38 years.

OUT of the disturbances that occurred at the camp meeting during Sunday evening last, grew a challenge to fight without weapons which was offered by a "well-known colored b'hoy of this city to a member of one of the engine companies. The two principals were to meet at the corner of Front and Somerset streets on Monday evening at 7 o'clock, and from there were to proceed across the brook out of Officer Randolph's jurisdiction. The colored warrior was at the rendezvous on time, and with him were enough of the same race to eat all the firemen in Plainfield. As there was no chance for fair play in such a one-sided crowd, the other party did not make his appearance, and a newspaper item was lost. No arrests were made, although the sidewalk was blockaded for some time by a large crowd attracted to the spot by loud talk. The police force of this city (one) failed to disperse the crowd. Pressing (?) business called him in another direction. It was not thus, Robert, when the Second street arrest was made a week or so ago.

UNDER the auspices of the energetic ladies of St. Mary's church of this city, a Lecture will be delivered by the Rev. Clarence E. Woodman, the eloquent young Paulist, on next Sunday evening, Sept. 18th. The subject, "St. Paul at Athens," is one of intense interest. Although but two years a priest, Father Woodman has already made a wide and growing reputation as a pulpit orator. The secret of the Rev. gentleman's success as a preacher seems to lie in earnestness and directness of manner, combined with a clear ringing voice and exceptionally distinct articulation. Father Woodman preached in the new Cathedral, N. Y., on Trinity Sunday. His sermon on that occasion was judged by many competent critics to be one of the best ever delivered within its walls. Not a single word was lost in any part of the vast building. We re-echo the sentiments of the zealous ladies of St. Mary's in hoping they will have a crowded church to hear the Rev. gentleman's Lecture on Sunday evening, the 18th inst. All are invited. Tickets for sale at the hotel and drug stores.

THE Messrs. Weaver Bros. have just completed a very satisfactory job of painting and frescoing the side walls and ceiling of the Presbyterian church at Dunellen.

M. M. THORN, opposite the depot, will receive entries for articles to be placed on exhibition at the approaching Fair of Union & Middlesex Counties until Saturday evening, Sept. 24th.

MR. Becker will shortly rebuild his dye works destroyed by fire last Tuesday morning. Meantime all orders left with him will be promptly filled, he having his work done in New York City.

FOR the first time in our knowledge, the fire well corner of Front and Somerset streets is of no practical use, there being no water in the raceway from which it is fed, in consequence of the low condition of the stream leading to it.

THE regular monthly meeting of Gazelle Eng. Co. No. 1, will be held on Wednesday evening next, Sept. 21st, at their parlors, at 7½ o'clock, "sharp." As business of importance is to be transacted, it is earnestly requested that the members will present themselves on the evening in question.

LITTLE Willis Dunn, a five year old lad, disobeyed orders and started to go fishing on Wednesday. Result—a large fish hook embeded in his little finger. Only for the skillful manipulations of Dr. Tomlinson, the hook would be there still. Willie now has a sore finger and don't want to go fishing again this season.

THE liquid refreshments dealt in at the Camp Meeting grounds, have been referred to by us before, but the managers of the affair have taken no steps towards a suppression of their sale. An indirect result of their existence was a disgraceful fight on Sunday evening, in which white and black engaged promiscuously and numerous.

TURTLE soup and steak were part of the menu at the Mansion House last Wednesday. Ye turtle, which was of the snapper species, was captured by mine host, Ed. Thorn, in the Raritan river, while fishing for the festive Black Bass on Tuesday last. Johnson, the Chief of the culinary department knows just how to make "snapper soup."

ON Friday morning last Hon. Henry C. Kilsey, Secretary of State for New Jersey, telegraphed to Mr. Devany, Manager of his stock farm in Sussex County, to immediately bring down to Elberon in a special car his best Alderney cow, for the use of the President. The choicest cow of the herd was immediately shipped and taken to Elberon on Friday night. The generous offer was accepted by those in charge of the President.

THE little hamlet of Alton (formerly known as "Dog Tavern") situated between this city and Rahway, is making rapid strides toward being a village of importance. Among many other improvements, Mr. Benjamin Connett has built an extension to his Grocery store, making a large hall suitable for holding public meetings or for dancing purposes. "Ben" is one of the most enterprising citizens of Alton, and no doubt will reap the just reward he merits for the improvements made by him.

THIEVES attempted to rob the dwelling of Mr. J. U. Fraley, on the corner of Park avenue and Seventh street last Wednesday morning about three o'clock. From indications left behind them it appeared that three persons were concerned in the affair, who had gained egress to the house through a bay window. The barking of a watch dog aroused Mr. Fraley and son, and as the departing thieves left the vicinity a couple of pistol shots in their direction accelerated their movements. Nothing was taken from the house by the burglars.

MR. THOMAS SMITH, the tonsorial artist of North avenue, has disposed of his prosperous business to Mr. Edward Maynard, and gone to 216 Halsey street Newark, where he has engaged in a new business, that of one of a firm in a Billiard and Lunch Room. His many friends in this city will be heartily welcomed by him and furnished with an elegant lunch at short notice, if they will call upon him at the above number. His successor is a capable person in the tonsorial profession, and will no doubt please all who give him a call.

THE fact that no will was left by the late Fitch Shepard, who died at Sharon Springs on Aug. 22, was made known on Saturday at the Surrogate's office, N. Y., when letters of administration on his large estate, including personalty to the amount of $60,000, were applied for by his sons, Elliott F. Shepard, of New York, and Augustus D. Shepard, of Fanwood, N. J. Bonds for $120,000 were furnished by Francis N. and Robert T. Shepard, of Yonkers, brothers of the deceased. The letters of administration were issued 20 minutes after the filing of the application.

A CASE of considerable interest to the public was tried before Justice Wadsworth last week. In this trial, citizens Honeger and Striley claimed damages of Isaac Pangborn, builder, for injuries sustained to a vehicle in consequence of colliding with a heap of gravel thrown partly on the street, where Mr. Pangborn was erecting a building on the 16th of June last. A jury of twelve men were empanelled, who, after listening to the exhaustive arguments of counsel on each side, sweltering meantime in the sweat box termed a jury room, were given relief by being escorted to the scene of the accident at the lower end of Seventh street. On their return, after a short deliberation they were discharged, being unable to agree on a verdict. A new trial will probably result from the verdict.

Attempted Incendiarism.

Last Monday night a young man, boarding at the residence of Mrs. O. Runyon, on Second street, near Madison avenue, arriving home late, discovered a bunch of waste, wrapped in a paper, on fire in the rear of a barn on the premises of the above mentioned lady. With the assistance of a colored man, who opportunely was at hand, the flames were extinguished. Investigation showed that the sides of the barn had been saturated with kerosene and would have speedily ignited after the flame from the package had burst forth. Information was at once given the Board of Managers of the Fire Department, who placed the matter in the hands of Capt. Dodd for investigation. The party discovering the waste on fire, saw two persons in the vicinity acting in a strange manner. He walked up to them and recognized their countenances, afterward reporting to the Board their names. If these parties are thought to be connected with the finding of the burning waste their arrest should follow, and an investigation of the affair commenced at once by the Board.

Died Among Strangers.

On Monday, Sept. 5, a stranger engaged work on the farm of Mr. Wm. Potter, near Mt. Pleasant, on the road leading from this city to Rahway. On Tuesday he complained of being unwell, and was advised by his employer to come to Plainfield and get some medicine, his trouble apparently being chills. He started off and failed to return as was expected. The next day some children playing about an old and unused barn near Alton, discovered the man lying within it, apparently suffering greatly. Kind neighbors administered to his wants, sent for a physician and notified Mr. Wm. Pangborn, constable, who had the man removed to his own residence, where he died on Thursday night, despite medical attendance and care. His remains were interred the following day by Overseer of the Poor Jacob Coles, of Fanwood Township. From effects left by the stranger, it was ascertained that his name was Henry Belsey, a native of Sussex, England, and was about 27 years of age. From documents found it was apparent that deceased came from a good family and had an excellent education. The clothing contained among his effects, was of a good quality and plentiful. Photographs of himself and other persons were also found. Documents showed that he had been honorably discharged from the English Militia, when at the age of 22. He came to this country in 1877. Mr. Pangborn has written to address in Sussex, England, to gain information of deceased's friends.

Valuable Invention.

John F. Bonnell, of New Vernon, has just completed at Force's machine shop in this place, a machine to be used in ditching. It is now in successful operation on the place of Senator T. F. Randolph, near Morristown. To a sled is attached a scoop shovel similar to a road scraper, which dumps upon a platform at the side, and is worked with a cable about 75 feet long attached to horse or steam power. He has obtained a patent.—Madison Journal.

The Last Picnic.

The members of Zephyr Hook & Ladder Company No. 1, not to be outdone by their fellow firemen, have resolved to hold a picnic in Wooden's Grove, North Plainfield, Thursday Sept. 22d, the proceeds from which they propose to devote toward the receiving of their new apparatus, recently ordered by the Board of Managers. Without doubt our generous hearted citizens will assist them in their undertaking by a liberal purchase of tickets. A fine brass and string Band will furnish music for the occasion. Tickets 25 cents.

Education in New Jersey.

The total school census of New Jersey comprised within its twenty-one counties is 330,285. The school districts number 1,371, and the public school houses 1,585. There are 129 nonsectarian and 107 sectarian schools in the State. The total number of teachers is 3,377, and the average cost of education per pupil is $13.39. The total amount appropriated for school purposes, for the year is $1,872,464.90, of which sum $367,412 is for salaries of teachers. The average monthly salaries paid to males is $55.82, females $32.90.

Our Coming Fair.

We trust our Union County ladies and farmers will not forget the approaching Fair of Union & Middlesex Counties at Plainfield, commencing Sept. 26. They should furnish some exhibit to help make the Fair the success it deserves. Union County should not be behind Middlesex in this respect. Besides the large exhibits of farm produce, cattle, fowls, etc., it is expected that the ladies will present articles of their own manufacture in embroidery, fancy work, paintings, etc., that will command premiums. The speed trials of the Fair promise to be of unusual excellence and interest. A large number of entries have been made, the premiums are large and the horses entered of good repute. Good trotting may be expected, with fair and impartial judges.

The A. O. H. Picnic.

The Ancient Order of Hibernians, No. 4, of Plainfield, gave its Third Annual Picnic in Stelle's Grove on Thursday afternoon and evening of last week. The occasion was most successful, and the unusual coolness of the atmosphere tended to make it the most enjoyable of all the out-door festivities of the season. Frazee's music was perfect, as it always is, and kept the merry dance in progress until long after midnight. The Committee of Arrangements—Messrs. James Conneely, Thomas Walsh and Robert Manning—allowed nothing to occur that might interrupt the continuous pleasure of the affair; and the Floor Managers—Messrs. P. Casey and R. Manning—permitted no one to want for a partner with whom to share the evening's attractive features. The only particular in which the event is to be regretted, is that it should have been so admirable in every way, and hence more disappointing the thought that it was next to the "last of the season."

Another Scholar for the Reform School.

Another of Plainfield's bad youths has been sent to the Reform School of Jamesburg, this State, where he should have been long ago, not only for his own future good, but for the peace of mind of his widowed mother, and lessening of shame felt by his sisters and brothers in consequence of his bad doings. It would seem that the boy alluded to has a kleptomania for stealing, his latest exploit being the robbing of the till in Messrs. D. F. Randolph & Son's Shoe store, on Saturday afternoon last, of some $40. With this amount, the lad, who is only twelve years old, in company with a playmate, and possible accomplice, purchased tickets at the railroad station for Flemington, visited that place and returned to this city, after spending a portion of the money. He was arrested, nonchalantly confessed the theft, and has been sent to the Reform School by the County authorities. It is to be hoped that when he is released from that institution his stealing propensities will be over.

State Fair.

At Waverly Park will commence Monday Sept. 19th and continue until Saturday. All should go for it is expected, if the weather is fine, to surpass any previous Fair. Half rates have been secured on all the railroads, as well as reduction in admission. This will make it a cheap excursion, the Central Railroad have placed tickets to and from the Fair grounds, including admission, at 95 cents for the round trip. Every day will be full of interest. Tuesday at 3 p. m. sharp, the celebrated pacers, "Rowdy Boy," "Mattie Hunter" and "Lucy" will pace, beating 2:15. The 8th Regiment N. Y. S. M. of Albany, with the 3d Reg. of New Jersey, are to be on the ground at 12 M.

Wednesday is to be the great Bicycle day, it is expected to be the largest Tournament ever witnessed in the State, a grand test is to be made on the new track made expressly for them. The same day there will be a series of games of La Crosse by some of the best Clubs in this country.

Thursday Gen. Grant is sure to be present and the Cabinet Ministers are expected to come from Long Branch by special car.

Friday is to be the great Ladies' day, when a fine display of Archery and Lawn Tennis on the handsome mall just completed.

Trotting commences every day at 1 p. m. Up to Monday there were not less than 250 entries for cattle, surpassing any former year, requiring the Society, during the present week, to erect new cattle sheds. We would advise all to go and attend the largest State fair in the country.

Firemen's Relief Association.

The regular quarterly meeting of the Board of Trustees of the above Association was held in the parlor of No. 3 Engine Co's. house on Monday evening, 12th inst. Representatives from all the fire companies were present. President Hubbard in the chair. The chairman of the Relief Committee reported the application for relief of a member of Gazelle Engine Company, and stated that the President of the Board and the Relief Committee had consulted together and appropriated the sum of ten dollars. The action of the committee was sanctioned by the Board.

The subject of who are members of the Association, being inquired into, the Treasurer informed the Board that the various companies, with two exceptions, (Gazelle and Alert) had failed to comply with that portion of Article 8th, Section 2; which says that "The various Companies of the Plainfield Fire Department must make quarterly reports to the Association of the names of such members of their companies, whom they recognize as belonging to the Firemen's Relief Association." He further stated that unless that Section was enforced or another law made, he could not tell who were members. After a free discussion of the subject, it was agreed upon by the representatives present of those Co's. neglecting to comply with said Section, that they would see to it that hereafter a list of names would be sent as required.

An amendment to Article 3, Section 3, of the By-laws was submitted and under the rule laid over for action at next meeting, which says "that one of the two Trustees from each company, shall be elected annually." As it now is, both are elected at the same time, for two years. A very good amendment we think.

In view of the approaching Annual Convention of the State Association, to be held at Burlington, N. J., Sept. ——— the chairman appointed A. D. Jennings and A. L. Force, delegates to attend said convention.

Treasurer Mallinson reported the placing by the Finance Committee of $1,000 on first mortgage, on property in North Plainfield worth three times that amount.

Regarding the question often asked by active and exempt firemen, "how can I become a member of the Association," we will take it upon ourselves to state that if you are an active fireman, you must pay to the Treasurer of your company, every three months, the small sum of twenty-five cents, and he, the Treasurer, will pay the same into the treasury of the Association and hand your name in as a member at the same time. The payments should be made the first week in June, September, December and March of each year. A neglect to make such payments will disqualify you from receiving benefits from the Association in case of sickness or accident. Exempt firemen (not doing active duty) must send their name, accompanied by the yearly dues, $1, to the Board of Trustees, and be by them elected a member of the Association.

With the above explanation, we hope every fireman in our department, will at once become members of the Association, and that the Treasurer of each Company will see to it, that a list of names from his company be sent quarterly as the By-laws direct.

Who Are They.

One night recently, two boys from Plainfield entered the melon patch of Augustus Worden, between this place and Dunellen, with the intention of helping themselves to Mr. W.'s melons. It seems that Mr. Worden was in a small watch house at the time, and seeing the boys, fired at them, wounding one in the head and the other in the leg. He has since been arrested, but we have not heard the result.—Bound Brook Chronicle.

Home Again.

Mr. Caleb Dickinson from Peapack.

Councilman Henry Smith and family from Lake Luzerne.

Miss Annie Guion from Greenwich, Ct.

Mr. John L. Everitt from Pasque Island.

Mr. John M. Whiton and wife from Engelside.

Mr. Augustus Frazee from the "Far West."

Personalia.

Thanks to U. S. Senator Theo. Randolph for Congressional documents.

Mr. George Vincent has been visiting a few of his host of Plainfield friends.

Mr. T. W. Burger, of this city, has been awarded a patent for a sheet-metal can.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph A. Haynes left this city recently for a trip to Annandale and elsewhere in the State.

Hon. E. Wood Perry, Sr., of New Orleans, is visiting his son-in-law, Capt. A. D. Holmes, on Fifth street, near Washington.

Mr. John Roland, in the absence of C. R.R. Station Agent Haynes, attends to the duties of that official in a most thorough and satisfactory manner.

Miss Maggie M. Rocap, who resigned last year her position as a teacher in the Fifth street public school, has taken a position as teacher in Talliman College, Paterson, N. J.

Mr. L. J. Denton, the Prospect avenue Florist has at last committed matrimony, by uniting himself in marriage to Miss Emma Brown, of Dunellen. May their pathway through life be strewn with roses.

Mr. Augustus Frazee, Plainfield's veteran local expressman, has once again resumed business, after a four week's vacation in travel through Western States. "Gus" reports having a "galorious" time.

Mr. C. E. Tyler, who has been the summer at Mt. Desert, is expected to return next Sunday and it is hoped that his class of about 90 scholars, at the Warren Mission, will be present to tender him a cordial welcome.

Miss Phemie Frazee is the possessor of a rare bird in this section of country, a Cardinal, sent her by her aunt, Mrs. James M. Frazee, of Columbus, Ohio. The bird is a fine singer, and "Pheme" is envied by her many friends in her new possession.

A. Saltzman, Esq., foreman of Alert Hose Co., who was appointed by the Board of Managers to represent the Plainfield Fire Department at the approaching Firemen's Convention at Richmond, Va., sailed on Friday last for that city, on the Old Dominion line, in company with some 50 other delegates, among whom was Chief Hendricks, of New Haven.

FIRE MATTERS.

A false alarm of fire about nine o'clock Wednesday night brought out the entire department. Cause—a brush heap on fire near Randolph pond.

The Ninth Annual National Convention of Fire Engineers met at Richmond, Va., on Tuesday last. Mr. A. Saltzman, Foreman of Alert Hose Co., No. 1, represented the department of this city. A telegram from him to President VanWinkle states that the meeting is a large one. G. Watt Taylor, of Richmond, Va., was elected President and A. C. Hendricks, of New Haven, Conn., Treasurer, with Henry A. Hills, of Cincinnati, for Secretary.

An alarm of fire was raised Sunday night last, in consequence of a bright light seen in the direction of Scotch Plains. All the companies turned out and the alarm bell was rung. The fire proved to be on the Johnston Farm, near Scotch Plains, and was a large stack of oat straw, the property of Mr. John Wilson, who has charge of the farm. The fire, of course, was of incendiary origin, and cost Mr. W. about $100 for the incendiaries mischief. Excelsior H. & L. Co. No. 1 of Scotch Plains turned out to the fire.

About four o'clock on Tuesday morning last, flames were discovered issuing from the building used by Mr. C. Becker as a dyeing works, situated in the rear of Perrine's hat factory, nearly opposite Peace street. The fire companies answered promptly to the alarm, which was first given by Mr. Edward Laing, who has charge of Mr. Geo. Pound's Rendering establishment near by the scene of the fire. Night watchman Wright rang the alarm bell. Owing to the inflammable condition of the building in which the fire originated, and the time at which it started, the dye works were pretty nearly consumed by the time the fire companies arrived and got to work. As soon as the difficulties in the way of procuring water was over, however, the flames were quickly mastered. By this time, a large barn, belonging to Mr. Albert Marsh, and occupied by Mr. E. H. Holmes, the expressman, was destroyed, and a portion of the hat factory in flames. Prompt work soon subdued the fire in the latter establishment, and the skeleton frame of the barn stands to-day as a monument in praise of the quick and efficient work of our firemen. The buildings were situated over and alongside of the raceway leading to French Bros. mills, but in consequence of the lowness of the water in it, No. 2 was obliged to take suction from a hole in the brook near by, while Gazelle No. 1 and Warren No. 3 steamers were stationed in the yard adjoining Tier's ice cream saloon, where they took suction from the pond and had plenty of water. No. 2 had the honor of "first water" quickly followed by No. 1 and No. 3. It was a most fortunate circumstance that there was no wind on the occasion, otherwise a large and disastrous conflagration might have occurred. The efficiency of our Fire Department was well proven at this fire. The loss on the dye works will not exceed $400, which is covered by insurance in the Westchester Company represented by Wm. C. Butler. Mr. Holmes' loss consists in hay and feed destroyed, and is fully insured by Messrs. J. C. Pope & Co., in the German American. The Mutual Life Insurance Company of N. Y., held policies on the hat factory. The origin of the fire is a mystery, but from the fact that parties early at the scene, state that steam was blowing off from the boiler of the dye works when they arrived, it is imagined that the fire originated from the furnace of the same, although incendiarism is strongly hinted at.

WESTFIELD WISPS.

Not quite so dry, but dry enough.

Collector Connoly is busy making out the tax bills of '81. Prepare to settle.

Don't forget that notices to delinquent tax payers of 1880 will be posted Oct. 1st.

Quite a lull in the proceedings of the Village Improvement Committee. Why?

Our old friend, John Sebring, visited us on Friday evening last. John is now located in Bound Brook.

Well driver, Wilcox, has been busy at his line, driving the past week at the residence of Dr. J. B. Harrison.

Mr. George Ortleb is entitled to our congratulations, cause a boy, weight 10 pounds, arrived Thursday, Sept. 8th.

Mrs. Albert Wilcox, accompanied by Mr. Cyrus P. Wilcox, left on Wednesday last for a trip to the White Mountains.

The duplicate of assessments was finally approved by the Town Committee on the 5th inst, and is now in the Collector's hands.

Considerable comment is heard relative to the associates selected by several of our young élite as companions for evening promenades.

Westfield is the possessor of an excellent colored quartette. An opportunity should be given our citizens generally to hear them at an early date.

Mr. Joseph Coleman of Bradford Co., Pa., father-in-law of our popular distributor of meat, Wm. Schoonover, has been visiting here during the past week.

Prof. John Knapp has decided that in all cases where he is called, that if there is no work to be done the consultation fee shall be "One drink." This seems reasonable enough. We believe he has collected his first fee. Ask Burt.

The Turf Exchange still continues dull and prices are a trifle lower. One or two exchanges only reported and at even rates. Stock on hand large, Supt. Brockmeir says decidedly so. But as "Jane" is looking to purchase a reduction is probable.

Extensive improvements have been made to the front of store occupied by the Messrs. Welch, on Broad street, corner of Elm. J. N. Wilcox had the contract, and the work justifies his selection. The building is the property of Mrs. Amanda M. Foster.

Mr. Joseph Perry has removed his butcher shop from Hensman's building to the store previously occupied by Mr. F. E. Baker, on Broad street, opposite the Hotel, and assisted by Mr. R. Reake, proposes to furnish the best meats at reasonable prices. Give him a call.

Our celebrated dentist, Dr. C. E. Aguirre, has added to the facilities of his office, a very handsome apparatus for administering gas to those desiring it, when extracting teeth.

Business is rushing at the establishment of our popular O. of the P., Mr. Samuel E. Young. He has lately secured the services in his Blacksmithing department of Mr. Joseph Carver late of Plainfield, whose work certainly gives evidence of his ability in this line.

The particular attention of our citizens is called to the question of water supply. During the late drought in case of fire we fear that little could be done for want of water. Pumps should be kept in order, and wells sank to a depth sufficient to guarantee a certain water supply, without which there can be no security against fire.

The regular monthly meeting of Bucket and Engine Company, No. 1, was held at Hotel Hall on Monday evening last. A committee was appointed to confer with a like committee of Hook & Ladder Co., No. 1, with reference to united action and other matters of importance. The Secretary was requested to so notify the other company.

Owing to the superior driving abilities of Mr. W. H. Edgar that have resulted in bringing to the notice of our citizens the wonderful speed of "Hambletonian Major," his owner has managed to dispose of him. This wonder of horse-flesh, however, failed to appreciate his new owner and refused to travel at his command, but was finally led away.

Prof. W. Henry Elston has introduced a new plan of weekly reports to parents of their children's records for scholarship, attendance and deportment that will undoubtedly add to the efficiency of the school, bringing as it does the principal and parents together in their efforts to improve it. This is only one of the many improvements to our school introduced by Prof. Elston.

Flagman Wm. Applegate, at considerable danger to himself, succeeded in saving the life of a woman, name unknown, at the Broad street crossing, on Thursday night of last week. While crossing the track she caught the heel of her shoe between the rail and the plank directly, in front of an approaching fast freight; Mr. Applegate came promptly to the rescue, and barely released the heel. A cool "thank you" was his reward.

The performance advertised to take place at Lyceum Hall on Wednesday of last week, was postponed to a future date on account of Governor's Proclamation making that date a day of prayer. In order, however, not to disappoint those who had purchased tickets Mlle. Thalbery Lee favored the few present with a piano selection, and Miss June gave three very pleasant recitals. Prof. Gladden in a few very appropriate remarks gave notice of postponement and informed those present that the money received would be refunded at the door. We trust that their next visit will be under more favorable circumstances.

The long continued nuisance to travelers on Central avenue, whether by sidewalk or roadway: The stoppage of the morning freight so as to effectually block the crossing, should be discontinued. There is not the slightest necessity for it. On Wednesday morning last we noticed five vehicles and several citizens delayed for half an hour, and after the repeated requests of the flagman, which were not noticed by the conductor or engineer, it looks like a matter of obstinacy. If necessary, gentlemen, brake your train. The attention of the Railroad officials is called to this matter.

OUR COURTS.

Before Squire Jaques, Saturday, Sept. 10th, at 7 p. m., Caroline Lesher, vs. Wm. McLeod, charge assault with intent to commit rape. The prisoner was brought from Elizabeth, where he had been confined since arrest, by Constable Marsh for examination, and after hearing, was committed to await action of Grand Jury in October.

Before Squire Godfrey, Saturday, Sept. 10th, A. W. Moffett, vs. Thos. Cavalier, Same vs. Charles Perrine, charged in both cases, disorderly conduct. Warrants for arrest issued.

Messrs. E. Millers Sons, met with a serious loss on Monday morning last, the result of a runaway. Their delivery wagon to which was attached a valuable mare, driven by Mr. Theo. Starr, was crossing the railroad at Broad street when the horse became frightened at an approaching train and ran away, turning the corner of Clark street, upsetting the wagon and throwing Mr. Starr out, who fortunately escaped with no more serious injuries than severe bruises. The horse, however, did not fare so well, and probably in kicking to clear herself of the wreck severed the tendon of her right hind leg as well as the main artery completely. Despite these injuries she ran or hobbled through Clark to Union and Prospect to Broad streets, and was then caught. After examination of her injuries it was decided to kill her. Messrs. Miller & Sons refused $200 for this animal last week and valued her at $300.

The Congregationalist Society have at last decided upon a location for their church. At a meeting held Tuesday evening last upon a question of location it was decided to purchase a lot of sufficient size on the south side of Elmer street, between Broad street and North avenue. We understand that out of a poll of 52 votes, 40 were in favor and 12 against the site selected. This is practically unanimous as far as this question is concerned. The following Committee was appointed with power to complete the purchase and secure plans and estimates for the building: Effingham Embree, L. N. Clark, Jas. L. Miller, James S. Irving, Henry F. Alpers, Henry Hosford, W. W. Connoly, John H. Worth, George H. Gray and J. B. Carberry. We understand that subscriptions to the amount of $4,500 have already been received. The site selected is an excellent one and with the above efficient committee to manage the matter, the purchase of property and completion of church can only be a matter of short time.

In compliance with the Governor's proclamation, our citizens to a large number met in Union prayer meeting at Lyceum Hall on Wednesday of last week. The services were opened by the reading of appropriate scripture by the Rev. Dr. Gill. After singing of the 59th hymn, prayer was offered by Prof. W. Henry Elston, and was followed by the singing of the 61st hymn. Rev. Mr. Neill regretted the necessary absence of Rev. Mr. Bronson, who he was sure was heart and soul with those present in supplicating the Almighty to spare our stricken President. Rev. Mr. Hoagland in a few well chosen remarks, referred to the nature of the call for the meeting and its purpose. Rev. Mr. Greaves followed in prayer, and those assembled sang the 62d hymn. Prayers were then offered by Messrs. J. S. Irving, A. F. Campbell and S. R. Beebe. Rev. Dr. Gill followed with a few well chosen remarks. Hymn 369 was then sang, and after prayer by Mr. Edgar R. Pearsall and remarks by Rev.'s Neill and Greaves, and upon the motion upon the part of the latter to hold an evening of prayer at the Presbyterian Sunday School room, Hymn 830 was sung and the meeting ended with the Benediction. The evening meeting was well attended and the exercises very similar in nature. The deepest feeling was evinced on the part of all present at both meetings.

MEETING TOWN COMMITTEE.

Sept. 5th, 1881, 7:30 P. M.

Pursuant to adjournment. Present, H. F. Alpers, chairman, R. R. Sinclair, Jas. Moffett and L. M. Whitaker, Clerk. Minutes of last meeting, Sept. 1st, read and approved. This being the meeting, under the Statutes, to receive bills of damages done to sheep, and there being no bills presented, the Committee proceeded to other business. On motion, the financial reports of School Districts No. 10 and 15, were received and ordered placed on file. Bill of Samuel E. Young, Overseer of the Poor, for board of Stephen Clark for 3 months, to Sept. 1st, 1881, amount $39, was on motion ordered paid. Bill of the Elizabeth Journal for printing tax bills, amount $6.50, was on motion ordered paid when endorsed as correct by the Collector. The committee continued the examination and revision of the duplicate of assessment, and on motion the following alterations were made in the valuation.

L. M. WHITAKER,
Town Clerk.

Mr. Samuel Lockwood for several years assistant at Baylis' store, is in town.

One Year Ago.

The political event of the past week—one year ago—was the "News from Maine," which at that time was as cheering to Democratic expectations as it was discouraging to Republican hopes.—The murder of Sam'l Williams by John Johnson, in Battle Row (4th street) was committed one year ago last Saturday. The safe in Mr. E. A. Vermeule's office on West Front street was robbed by some one whose identity was never discovered, one year ago Wednesday. Mr. J. Wesley Johnson's "Sciola" beat Mr. Wm. Moore's "Carbolic" and "Peralto" at Morristown. The final games of the Plainfield Athletic Club took place at its former grounds. The New Jersey team won the Inter-state Match at Creedmoor. The Hon. George C. Ludlow accepted the unanimous nomination as Governor given him by the Democratic Convention at Trenton.

MISCELLANY.

A Testimonial.

DUNHAM & MILLER, GENTLEMEN:—I have been troubled with corns for over 30 years and have used many remedies advertised for relief of the same, but without any good results, until I tried "Miller's 20 cent Corn Killer," which has entirely removed my corns and relieved me of pain and suffering. This is the first time I have been able to walk without limping for many years.

I take pleasure in recommending your remedy as being the best and only sure corn remover. Respectfully,

JACOB FINDER.

Princeton College re-opened on Wednesday afternoon at 3 o'clock.

IT IS A FOOLISH MISTAKE to confound a remedy of merit with quack medicines. We have used Parker's Ginger Tonic with the happiest results for Dyspepsia and Debility, and know it to be a sterling health restorative.—Times.

TO ACCOMMODATE THE PUBLIC.

The proprietors of that immensely popular remedy, Kidney Wort in recognition of the claims of the public which has so liberally patronized them, have prepared a liquid preparation of that remedy for the special accommodation of those who from any reason dislike to prepare it for themselves. It is very concentrated and, as the dose is small, it is more easily taken by many. It has the same effectual action in all diseases of the Kidneys, liver or bowels.—Home and Farm.

ITS ACTION IS SURE AND SAFE.

The celebrated remedy Kidney Wort can now be obtained in the usual dry vegetable form, or in liquid form. It is put in the latter way for the especial convenience of those who cannot readily prepare it. It will be found very concentrated and will act with equal efficiency in either case. Be sure and read the new advertisement for particulars.—South and West.

WITH the buckwheat and corn crops all gone; farmers feeding up their winter provender and selling stock to get clear of it; people carting water for miles; forests burning up; the thermometer up to 106 degrees; upland pasture burned out; fruits tasteless, and all humanity sweltering, we surely have ample cause to long remember the drought of 1881.

HURRAH FOR OUR SIDE!

Many people have lost their interest in politics and in amusements because they are so out of sorts and run down that they cannot enjoy anything. If such persons would only be wise enough to try that Celebrated remedy Kidney-Wort and experience its tonic and renovating effects they would soon be hurrahing with the loudest. In either dry or liquid form it is a perfect remedy for torpid liver, kidneys or bowels.—Exchange.

HAY FEVER.

MESSRS. WHITE & BURDICK, Druggists, Ithaca, N. Y.—I can recommend Ely's Cream Balm to relieve all persons suffering with Rose Cold and Hay Fever. I have been a sufferer from the same complaint; have had great relief by using the Balm. I have recommended it to many of my friends for Catarrh, and in all cases where they have used the Balm freely have been cured. T. KENNEY, Dry Goods Merchant, Ithaca, N. Y. Sept. 6, 1880.

MR. A. L. AVERY, Pharmacist, Newark, N. J.—Having been severely afflicted for eleven years with Hay Fever, after trying almost everything without avail, I gave up all hopes of being cured, when I purchased of you a box of Ely's Cream Balm. To my surprise, after a few applications, I was entirely relieved. H. WATSON HARRIS, Letter Carrier, No. 14, New P. O., Newark, N. J. Price 50 cents.

IT is said that Rowell has leased the Morristown track to use for training purposes, in view of a great match to come off in New York City, this fall.

NEARLY ALL THE ILLS THAT AFFLICT US can be prevented and cured by keeping the stomach, liver and kidneys in working order. There is no medicine known that will do this as surely as Parker's Ginger Tonic. See adv.

SHILOH'S CONSUMPTION CURE.

This is beyond question the most successful Cough Medicine we have ever sold, a few doses invariably cure the worst cases of Cough, Croup and Bronchitis, while its wonderful success in the cure of Consumption is without a parallel in the history of medicine. Since its first discovery it has been sold on a guarantee, a test which no other medicine can stand. If you have a Cough we earnestly ask you to try it. Price 10 cts., 50 cts. and $1. If your Lungs are sore, Chest or Back, lame, use Shiloh's Porous Plaster. Price 25 cts. Sold by R. M. Steele. 6ag6m

ANSWER THIS QUESTION.

Why do so many people we see around us, seem to prefer to suffer and be made miserable by Indigestion, Constipation, Dizziness, Loss of Appetite, Coming up of the Food, Yellow Skin, when for 75 cts. we will sell them Shiloh's Vitalizer, guaranteed to cure them. Sold by R. M. Steele.

SHILOH'S CATARRH REMEDY, a marvelous cure for Catarrh, Diptheria, Canker Mouth and Headache. With each bottle there is an ingenious Nasal Injector for the more successful treatment of these complaints without extra charge. Price 50 cts. Sold by R. M. Steele.

The consecration of Rev. Father Wigger as Bishop of the vacant diocese of Newark, comprising the counties of Essex, Hudson, Bergen, Passaic, Morris and Sussex, will take place on the 18th of October; and that of Rev. Father O'Farrell, as Bishop of the new diocese of Trenton, comprising all the other counties of the State, will take place on the 1st of November.

HERE IS GOING TO TRY IT.

A correspondent writes from way down East, in Lisbon, Me., to Dr. David Kennedy, Rondout, N. Y.: "I called on you about six weeks ago, sick with Bilious Disease. I bought a bottle of 'Favorite Remedy,' and it cured me. What I want is some more of your medicine. My daughter is going to try it." Sensible man. He will not regret it, and when his daughter has tried it she will be satisfied too. "Favorite Remedy" is just the thing for the ills that afflict womankind.

HOW TO SECURE HEALTH.

It seems strange that anyone will suffer from the many derangements brought on by an impure condition of the blood when SCOVILL'S SARSAPARILLA AND STILLINGIA, or BLOOD AND LIVER SYRUP will restore perfect health to the physical organization. It is indeed a strengthening syrup, pleasant to take, and has proven itself to be the BEST BLOOD PURIFIER ever discovered, effectually curing Scrofula, Syphilitic disorders, Weakness of the Kidneys, Erysipelas, Malaria; all Nervous disorders and Debility, Bilious complaints and all diseases indicating an impure Condition of the Blood, Liver, Kidneys, Stomach, skin, etc. It corrects indigestion. A single bottle will prove to you its merits as a health renewer, for it ACTS LIKE A CHARM, especially when the complaint is of an exhaustive nature, having a tendency to lessen the natural vigor of the brain and nervous system.

BAKER'S PAIN PANACEA cures pain in Man and Beast. For use externally and internally.

DR. ROGERS'S VEGETABLE WORM SYRUP instantly destroys worms and removes the Secretions which cause them.

VELVET is to form a very important factor of the Autumn fashions. Nothing succeeds it as a trimming for richness and elegance. Plush, although exceedingly effective and elegant, is less durable and really more expensive than velvet, as the dampness quickly affects the downy texture of the pile, giving it a flattened, soiled look, destroying the fresh appearance of the most costly toilet.

Women with pale, colorless faces who feel weak and discouraged, will receive both mental and bodily vigor by using Carter's Iron Pills, which are made for the blood, nerves and complexion.

THE CARRIER PIGEON.

Before the days of steam navigation, railroad communication and the electric telegraph, the carrier pigeon was an important agent in the rapid delivery of important messages. Its use in peace and war, diplomacy and intrigue, business and finance, speculation and trade, in the gathering of news or in the securing of private advance information gave the carrier pigeon a usefulness in former times far beyond its service at the present day. Now the electric current far outstrips the wings of the bird, distancing even the light of the sun in its speed. The carrier pigeon is now rarely used for the purpose for which it was formerly required. The last important event of which we are advised, in which this bird was engaged in its regular legitimate work, was at the time of the siege of Paris, by the Germans. The most common use of this bird today is in trials of speed between given points, affording those persons interested in the sport an opportunity to bet or gamble upon the results.

Its instinctive aptitude for domesticity has always marked the carrier pigeon, and it is this love of home, added to its attachment to its offspring, which has imparted the capability of training the birds as carriers. On long distances such birds are selected, if possible, as have young ones in their nests. Their rate of flight is speeded at about thirty miles per hour, though some have even better records. These pigeons are a little better than the common breed, though they are surpassed in beauty by many other varieties. They are noted for their extreme length, also for the fact their wings extend nearly to the tip of their tails. The average carrier pigeon is fifteen inches in length and weighs one and one-half pounds. The neck is long, and the pectoral muscles very large indicating a power of vigorous and long-continued flight. An appendage of naked skin hangs across its bill, continuing down on either side of the lower mandible, from the size and shape of which the value of the bird is estimated. Those with wide circlets destitute of feathers around the eyes are considered the best.

As soon as the birds have acquired their full strength of wing the training may commence. The bird is taken in a covered basket to the distance of a mile or so at first, the distances increasing as the training progresses. Flights of immense distances and surprising speed are recorded, but many such stories have an air of romance about them which suggest a flight of thought rather than the journey of a bird.

An ingenious method of taking the passenger pigeon is practised in Italy particularly in those romantic defiles which separate the rocky heights through which the vast flights of these birds direct their course in their migration. Nets are spread in some mountain pass under the course of the flight of the pigeons, extending from tree to tree or from one abutting rocky point to another; but as the birds would fly much above the net were not some contrivance resorted to by the wily natives to force them to descend, they practice the following expedient: Masses of stone are here and there raised, on which the slingers station themselves with a quantity of small-sized stones. Other persons also concerned being placed on the summit of these mountain passes, give notice of the approach of the pigeon flights by sounding a horn, hearing which those stationed on the piles commence slinging their white stones among the birds, which so attracts their attention that they descend in pursuit of the stones, and in doing so numbers of them become ensnared.—American Cultivator.

THE MAN WITH THE FLAIL.

It carried the beholder back to thirty years ago, when the threshing machine was heard only at rare intervals, and the honest farmer spread his golden stalks on the clean barn floor, and flailed away with such tempered blows that not a kernel was broken. The man who had it sat down on one of the benches in the West Circus Park. The rare sight of such an article halted every pedestrian, and the man had to keep explaining over and over:

"Well, I'll have some beans to shell this fall, and I kinder thought 'twould be easier to flail 'em out. The hardware man told me he had to send to Vermont for it."

Pretty soon along came a gray-headed alderman, and when he saw that flail he looked ten years younger all at once.

"I handled that for over ten years," he said, as he picked it up and spit on his hands. "Seems like old times to get hold of this hickory again."

He stepped out one side to give the crowd an exhibition on the grass, and his success was great. At the second blow the flail end hesitated in mid-air, wobbled about and finally came down with a whack on the patriot's head, making him see more stars than a winter's night ever brought out. He dropped the weapon with the remark that he was already ten minutes late in keeping an appointment, and he was rubbing his skull as far down the street as he could be seen. The next man to try it was one who got off a passing car under the idea that a dog fight was in progress.

"A flail! Ha! ha! Why I haven't seen a flail since I was married," he chuckled as he reached for it. "I presume I have flailed a thousand bushels of wheat in my time. You boys stand back there."

The boys retreated, and the man lifted the flail on high and patted the grass in a vigorous manner.

"Yes, my stint used to be twenty bushels a day," he continued, "and though I do say it myself, I—"

Something happened. He dropped the flail, seized his jaw, and danced off as if he had springs under him, and although a dozen voices asked what hit him he refused to tell.

By-and-bye a third man came sailing along, and when he saw the flail he remarked that his father had used one like it nearly all his life, and was called the smartest flailer in New Hampshire.

"Can't you use it?" inquired one of the crowd.

"Why, of course. If you boys want to see how our fathers got their wheat to mill I'll give you a little exhibition. Here, Bub, hold my hat."

He buttoned his coat, moistened his hands, and began work. The first blow nearly broke a man's knee; the second cracked against a boy's elbow, and at the third the flailer grabbed the top of his head and sat down with a subdued look in the corners of his mouth.

"Well, I guess I'll be jogging along," said the owner of the flail as he rose up. "It's all in getting the kink of it. A feller who makes twists and wobbles a special study won't get his head broke over twice a day, but a green hand might as well sit down under a brick kiln durin' a tornader. Day, gentlemen."—Free Press.

HINTS ABOUT AUTUMN DRESSES.

The first information from abroad, says Harper's Bazar, confirms the hope that short dresses will continue in vogue for nearly all occasions, and that there will be no very decided changes in the next season's dresses. Pleated skirts will display stripes advantageously, and pleated flounces will be retained on account of stripes, though gathered flounces are suggested for soft satin stuffs, moires and woolens. Basques of watered silk are being made for skirts of plain satin Surah that are trimmed with moire. This fashion was introduced by the Princess of Wales during the summer in a dress with white moire corsage and skirts of tulle. Short over-skirts with bouffant draperies are shown in the designs for new costumes. Corselets or wide girdles of moire or of velvet are worn over soft wool basques that may be either plain or pleated. Moire collars of Byron shape and flat cuffs to match are a neat finish for camels' hair and cashmere dresses. This moire may be shaded, or else changeable, and it is used in the lower skirt, while the over-skirt is of the woolen goods. Florentine bronze shades of mixed green and gold, mort dore (golden brown), and dull red will be popular colors for wool and for silk costumes. Satin Surahs and Rhadzimir silks with satin lustre are largely imported for black dresses. Plushes and velvets are chosen for trimmings of wool and of satin stuffs. For over-garments there are long cloaks not adjusted to the figures, and also close fitting jaunty jackets. The rich satin brocades in new designs of chains, linked rings, plush diamonds, and velvet figures will be used for elegant wraps. A great deal of color will, it is said, be seen in the imported cloaks, but black will remain the standard choice for garments to be worn in the streets during the day, while colored wraps will be reserved for driving, for receptions, and for evening toilets. The beauty of the black mantles will consist of rich linings of plush, and of moires and changeable Surahs.

FISH THAT FLY.

An old sailor said there was nothing on land not to be found in the sea. There are sea cucumbers and carrots, and many other sea vegetables that look very much like those whose names they bear. Some of the fish even have names like those of land animals. There are hog-fish, sea-horses, toad-fishes and sea-cows. One very lovely fish is the angel-fish. But the most curious of all is the flying-fish, which has broad fins like wings.

This fish is shaped and colored something like a mackerel. Its back is blue and its under parts are white. When it flies it takes short flights from the top of one wave to the top of another. The flying squirrel can fly, in this way, from a high point up on a tree to one lower down. They are plentiful near the West Indies, where the water is warm. In the morning the sailor may find a dead fish on the deck. It had seen seen the lights that the vessel carries at night and flown toward them. It could fly high enough to reach the vessel's deck, but could not fly across it. It may have struck a boom or sail and fallen dead from the blow. After this they grow more numerous, and you will see them in the daytime.

They will fly out of the water in front of the ship in little groups, looking like flocks of swallows. Their white sides will gleam like silver in the sun. They cannot fly far, perhaps a hundred yards. After wetting their wings or fins they then can fly farther on. They look as if they enjoyed their life in the air, but they do not always fly for pleasure. The dolphin, a very fierce and fast swimming fish, hunts them in the water. When the poor flying-fish tries to escape him, the great sea-birds, the gulls and pelicans, seize them as they fly out. They are very good to eat. The people in the islands about which they live catch them in dip nets and fry them.

* * *

It is whispered in certain select circles that Mr. Blaine has secured ample proofs that Mr. Arthur was not born in the United States, and is therefore ineligible to the office of President, or even that of Vice President. And it is further intimated that, should Mr. Garfield die, Mr. Arthur will have to face an alternative he would like exceedingly to dodge, viz.: to keep Mr. Blaine in office as Secretary of State or take the consequences of his political disability. The situation is evidently complicated, with exciting possibilities.

* * *

The Republican State Committee which met Wednesday of last week in New York, forgot that the stricken President was at the threshold of death, and passed him by in silence. Tammany, at its meeting Friday night, condemned the dastardly crime by which he was prostrated, and expressed the heartiest sympathy with Mr Garfield and his sorrowing family, and the hope that his life may be spared. The people will note the difference, and form their own conclusion as to the patriotism of the two organizations.

PEACHES AND HAY FEVER.

People who are troubled with that singular affection known as hay fever report an unusual exception from its annoyance this year. The period at which its symptoms usually begin to assert themselves is the 25th of August, and that date has passed by without any unpleasant sensations being felt by a number of former sufferers who have not been able to get out of the city. Richards Muckle, business manager of the Philadelphia Ledger, who is the great hay fever authority in that city, is at Bethlehem, N. H., attending the convention of hay fever sufferers, which meets there every year, and of which, on account of the regularity and antiquity of his attacks, he has been elected President. Mr. Muckle noticed before he went away that the usual hay fever attacks had not shown themselves as early as usual, and he evidently suspected, what is now reported to be the case, that they might not show themselves at all. He has a theory of his own upon this subject which he will probably advance before the assembled association. He believes that the fever is caused by eating peaches. He is confirmed in this impression by the fact that in his own case and in the case of all with whom he has compared notes the violence and duration of the fever has been an exact proportion to the extent of indulgence and invariably occurs simultaneously with the peach season, and when peach time is over hay fever departs. Besides, he has noticed that in seasons when peaches are scarce and, therefore, little eaten, there is an almost utter absence of the fever. The scarcity of peaches this year and the absence of the affection seems to confirm the theory. To add emphasis to the peculiar exemption of Mr. Muckle from the fever this year the intelligence comes that the Rev. Henry Ward Beecher, who has been a confirmed sufferer, is entirely free from the affection this year and therefore expects that he will not have to take the usual mountain trip.

BIRDS PREPARING TO GO SOUTH.

That merry inhabitant of the meadow, the bobolink, has, in accordance with his annual custom, changed the color of his coat from "buff and black and white" to one of plain brown, and is preparing for his Autumnal flight southward. The fields are no longer vocal with his "constant rattle, joyous as my children's prattle." And if one did not know of the change that comes over the bird at this time of year, it would be supposed on visiting his usual haunts that he had already started on his Autumnal migration. But a visit to the right locality will show that Robert is still here, but so changed that it is hard to recognize him. The bobolinks are now congregating in flocks instead of living in pairs and on suitable fields, notably where Hungarian grass is ripening, they can be found by the hundred feeding on the grass seed. They now resemble sparrows more than the bobolink of Spring and early Summer. Early this month they go South, and after crossing into Pennsylvania and the Southern States, are called rice buntings, ortolans, and reed birds. They grow much fatter on the marshes and rice-fields of the South than they do in this part of the country, and are hunted as eagerly by shooters as real game birds are by the sportsmen of this state, who pay little attention to the bobolink when out shooting.—Exchange.

PAYING FOR POLLUTING THE WATER.

Messrs. Kingsland, paper manufacturers, whose factory is above Newark, were tried and found guilty last spring in the Newark courts of Polluting the Passaic River by throwing carbolic acid and refuse into it. They were sentenced to pay a fine of $500 and costs. They took exception to some points in the trial, the Judge's charge, etc., and announced their determination to carry the case on appeal to the Supreme Court of New Jersey. The necessary writ was made out, but within a few days they appeared before the Sheriff, paid the fine and costs, and thereby announced the fact that they had abandoned the contest and had acknowledged the soundness of the judgment of the lower court. This is regarded as a great victory for the people of Newark, who were threatened with a legal war on the part of a league of wealthy manufacturers who, it was given out, would make the Kingslands a test case, and strive to obtain a decision authorizing them to use the Passaic as a common sewer, whereas the Newark people claim it as their natural God-given water supply.

SOMETHING FOR THE LADIES.

Lady readers who have not tested the magic properties of borax have been losing a great help and comfort. If once used, you will never be without a bottle on your toilet table. It removes stains and dirt from the hands better than soap, and at the same time softens and smoothes the skin. It is splendid for washing the hair, and will without injury cleanse brushes and combs in a few moments. For washing purposes it saves both soap and labor. It will extract the dirt from articles of delicate texture without rubbing, it being only necessary to put the articles to soak with a solution of borax, over night, needing only to be rinsed in the morning. Two tablespoonful of pulverized borax dissolved in a quart of water, to which water enough is added to cover a pair of blankets, will cleanse them beautifully. It also saves great labor in washing paint. It is said to drive away ants and roaches, if sprinkled on the shelves of safes and pantries.

The best way to discourage a boil is to seek a right slippery place on the pavement, and then when the boil isn't looking, come down on it—flop.

READ THE EVIDENCE

Which will Remove All Your Doubts—A Good Investment—One that Yields "AN HUNDRED FOLD."

The world is full of charlatans asking public attention to patent inventions for the mitigation of suffering. Everything claiming the power to do good should be from a reputable source, otherwise it is open to suspicion. Dr. David Kennedy, of Rondout, N. Y., affirms that his medicine, "Kennedy's Favorite Remedy," is the best article of its kind ever produced. Hence it is only just to the public that he refer to his record as a physician and surgeon. Among the capital operations performed by him are: Amputation of the thigh-bone in the case of Abraham Elsworth, Port Ewen, Ulster Co., N. Y.; amputation of the arm, case of Mrs. Edward Meyers, of Rondout, N. Y., and the operation of lithotomy (removal of stone from the bladder), in the case of Simon Tistedt, of Kingston, and the removal of the eye for Oscar Craigg, of Rosendale, Ulster Co., N. Y. These are a few of many. All these persons fully recovered—some Dr. Kennedy prescribed "Favorite Remedy" (which has unequaled powers of purifying the blood). Owing to the use of "Favorite Remedy" in the after-treatment of his surgical cases, not one has died; all are living to this day in the bloom of health. Dr. Kennedy's "Favorite Remedy," for sale by all druggists. $1.00 per bottle.

ELY'S
CREAM BALM
CATARRH
COLD IN HEAD
HAY FEVER
HEADACHE

DIRECTIONS. For Catarrh, Hay Fever, Cold in the Head, &c., insert with little finger, a particle of the Balm into the nostrils; draw strong breaths through the nose. It will be absorbed, cleansing, and healing the diseased membrane. For Deafness, apply a particle into the ear.

ELY'S CREAM BALM

Effectually cleanses the nasal passages of Catarrhal virus, causing healthy secretions, allays inflammation and irritation, protects the membranal linings of the head from additional colds, completely heals the sores and restores the sense of taste and smell. Beneficial results are realized by a few applications. A thorough treatment as directed will cure Catarrh. As a household remedy for cold in the head it is unequaled. The Balm is easy to use and agreeable. Sold by druggists at 50 cents. On receipt of 50 cents will mail a package. Send for circular with full information. ELY'S CREAM BALM CO., Owego, N. Y.

"MERIT MUST REAP ITS JUST REWARD."

Of the many Catarrh and Hay Fever remedies we keep in stock there is none of which our customers speak more highly than of Ely's Cream Balm. A comparatively new discovery, but one which, from the many reports and evidences of cures produced, is destined to be a leading article. We have never handled a remedy which has increased so rapidly in sales, or that has given such universal satisfaction. Price, 50 cents.

Kidney Wort.

Does Wonderful Cures!

WHY?

Because it acts on the LIVER, BOWELS and KIDNEYS at the same time.

Because it cleanses the system of the poisonous humors that develope in Kidney Disease, Biliousness, Jaundice, Constipation, Piles, or in Rheumatism, Neuralgia and Nervous Disorders.

SEE WHAT PEOPLE SAY:

Eugene B. Stork, of Junction City, Kansas, says, Kidney-Wort cured him after regular Physicians had been trying for four years.

Mrs. John Arnall, of Washington, Ohio, says, her boy was given up to die by four prominent physicians and that he was afterwards cured by Kidney-Wort.

M. M. B. Goodwin, an editor in Chardon, Ohio, says, he was not expected to live, being bloated beyond belief, but Kidney-Wort cured him.

Anna L. Jarrett, of South Salem, N. Y., says, that seven years suffering from kidney troubles and other complications was ended by the use of Kidney-Wort.

John B. Lawrence of Jackson, Tenn., suffered for years from liver and kidney troubles and after taking "barrels of other medicines," Kidney-Wort made him well.

Michael Coto of Montgomery Center, Vt., suffered eight years with kidney difficulty and was unable to work. Kidney-Wort made him "well as ever."

POETRY.

AUTUMN.

Whence comes this soft, sweet music,
Floating on the evening breeze?
From leaves above us dying
Upon the sorrowing trees.
Whence comes this wondrous fragrance,
That makes the whole air sweet?
From leaves the winds have scattered,
And flung beneath our feet.
O leaves that perfume even
The winds that bring the death,
And give out only sweetness,
Even with your dying breath;
O leaves that grow more golden
Each hour ye fade away,
That becomes more like the sunlight
As ye hear your dying day!
Ye, compared with whose bright glory,
The beauty of the Spring
And the Summer is but shadowy,
And a yet unfinished thing;
May I not grow in beauty,
Become more like thy sun,
Each day as I am waning,
When life is nearly done?
May I too be a censer
When in death a fall to rise,
Wafting incense fitly fitted
For in the altar of the skies!
Ay, and so I will not utter
One word of faithless grief;
But will trust that I in fading,
Shall, indeed, be "as a leaf."

MISCELLANEOUS READING.

BLANCHE'S LOVER.

"Give me joy, dear mamma, for I have won the prize!" cried pretty Blanche Merlyn, as she burst into her stepmother's boudoir, with a laughing imitation of Claude Melnotte's "first entrance," and a slight misquotation of that love-lorn hero's words.

Evelyn Merlyn raised her head from the crimson satin cushion of the couch on which she had been reclining, with a look of pleased surprise on her beautiful, pale face.

She had been six months the wife of Gerald Merlyn, and this was the first time his golden-haired daughter had addressed her by any term of endearment and only God and herself knew how often her lonely heart had yearned for some token of affection from the laughing, merry hearted maiden and treasured evey word of kindness that had fallen from the lips now wreathed in bright smiles. She half extended her arms, as if to clasp the petite form to her breast, but Blanche's eyes were turned away from her and she dropped her hands with a sigh at her own temerity.

"What has occurred to please you so, Blanche? You are very happy," she said, simply, and Blanche blushed and dropped her blue eyes in shy confusion, as she gaily responded:

"Vane Trevor has asked me to be his wife; have I not indeed won the highest prize in the matrimonial market?"

Mrs. Merlyn paid no attention to the laughing query; she had risen slowly to her feet, and approached her husband's daughter, with a pale grieved face.

"Blanche, what answer have you given this man?" she asked, firmly, and wondering at the tone in which the words were spoken. Blanche held up her left hand, upon the first finger of which a magnificent diamond sparkled—the seal of her betrothal. "You have done wrong, Blanche Merlyn; in the absence of your father, you should have consulted me before deciding such a momentous question; I have not even seen the man whom you have promised to marry; I know nothing whatever of his antecedents, beyond the fact that he is English, and boasts of being heir presumptive to a baronet—"

Blanche interrupted her before she could proceed further; the girl's small figure was drawn to its fullest heighth, her face was flushed and her blue eyes kindling with anger.

"I do not acknowledge your right to decide on any matter concerning my future welfare, Mrs. Merlyn," she said, bitterly. "You forget that I am nearly twenty-one, only three years your junior. My father married you without concerning my wishes, although I had been his confidant and companion from early childhood. From the hour that you became mistress of my home, I have considered myself mistress of my own actions, and now that the brilliant future is before me, I shall not allow you to interfere between me and the man I have promised to marry. That you have not met him is no fault of mine. Your are an invalid, confined almost constantly to your appartments, and had it not been for the kindness of Aunt Martha, I would have no one to chaperone me during my father's absence. I will write to papa, and tell him all; he will exonerate you from all blame in the matter, never fear."

The last words were spoken in a coldly sarcastic tone, as Blanche turned to leave the room.

"Some day, Blanche Merlyn, you will regret your unkindness to me." Evelyn said, and they were uttered in the tone of a prophecy.

Long after Blanche had left her, and when the girls sweet voice was borne to her ears from the parlors below, singing a gay French chansom, the young stepmother lay with face buried in the sofa cushions, living over again the weary months she had spent in her husband's home.

She was an orphan, eking out a scanty living by teaching music in the city of London, where Gerald Merlyn met her and won, by the beauty of her face, wooed her persistently, and asked her to be his wife. Despite his forty-five years, and the silver threads just gathering in his brown hair, the lonely orphan girl learned to love him, and they were married. Then followed two months of supreme happiness. Mr. Merlyn was fondly devoted to his beautiful young bride and traveled with her from place to place, proud of her beauty and the admiration she excited in circles in which he delighted to introduce her. At the end of this time he announced his intention of returning to his home in New York and Evelyn's heart filled with delight at the thought of this home-coming, for from her husband's manner of speaking of his "golden little one," she had formed the idea that Blanche was a child upon whom she might lavish her affection and whom she would teach to love her. How different was the reality!

When the news of her father's marriage reached Blanche, she carried the letter containing the announcement to Aunt Martha, who was a sister of her dead mother, and acted in the capacity of house-keeper to her wealthy brother-in-law. The news of the latter's marriage was bitter as gall and wormwood to Martha, for she had ruled the household and wanted no new mistress to reign. Blanche who was naturally a sweet-tempered and affectionate girl, but weak and easily led, was taught by her aunt to regard her father's wife as an interloper, who would usurp her place in her father's heart and rob his child of his affection.

The beautiful face and gentle, winning ways of Evelyn would have won the girl's love, had not Aunt Martha been ever near to poison her mind against "the interloper." Poor Evelyn was chilled by the welcome she received on her entrance into her new home and from that hour her tender heart was continually receiving wounds that seemed barbed, and she attempted to draw them out by reasoning and patience. It needed all her Christian heroism to forbear, yet no word of complaint escaped her lips, although her fair face paled, the roses faded from her cheeks with the secret tears she shed, and when her husband, whose love alone had sustained her, was called away to Florida on business connected with property to which he had fallen heir, Evelyn could no longer endure her loneliness and from the hour of departure, she sank into a state of nervous depression that bade fair to assume more dangerous symptoms.

Blanche's communication startled and alarmed her, for she knew her husband would blame her for not acquainting him with the fact of Trevor's visits to his daughter and she ventured to remonstrate, with what success we have already seen.

"I will write to Gerald to-night; I will beg him to come home. Oh, if he knew how I have suffered, would he pity me?" she murmured, raising her sad eyes to heaven where her wrongs were known.

It was a glorious summer evening, and Evelyn drew her writing desk before one of the open windows and prepared to begin her task, but her hand trembled so that she could not hold her pen, and her head ached and throbbed painfully. Mechanically her eyes wandered out of the window, to where the twilight shadows were falling over the smoothed shaven lawn and fragrant flower parterres and she caught a glimpse of a white dress and blue ribbons disappearing among the trees, where Blanche was walking with her lover.

A sudden desire seized her to see this Vane Trever, whom Blanche had promised to wed, and on the impulse of the moment she sang for her maid and startled the girl by the abrupt manner in which she announced her intention of going out on the lawn.

"Mais, madame—" the French girl began, Evelyn silenced her.

"I understand Marie, you would say I am too ill to venture out; do not fear me, the air will be beneficial," she said in Marie's own language, and Marie only shrugged her shoulders as she wrapped a soft white shawl about her mistress and watched the graceful, willowy form gliding slowly down the lawn.

Guided by the sound of Blanche's merry voice and frequent ripples of silver laughter, Evelyn approached the arbor in which the lovers were seated side by side. Her light footfall made no sound on the velvet grass and the lovers, absorbed in their own conversation were not aware of her presence.

She was about to call Blanche's name, when the gentleman raised his head and glanced straight toward the spot where she stood, looking like some beautiful statue in the glittering mists of the twilight.

An awful, grayish pallor overspread the face of Blanche's lover, and the name of "Eve" escaped his lips in a hoarse whisper, while Evelyn gave utterance to a low, inarticulate cry and fell senseless at his feet.

Blanche's cry of alarm brought the servants to the spot, and during the scene that followed Van Trever disappeared. Evelyn was soon restored to consciousness, but was evidently very ill; her beautiful dark eyes were burning with fever fire, and the small restless hands would burn one with their lightest touch.

"I must not give way to this dreadful weakness—I must see him! Oh, Heaven give me strength to do my duty!" she whispered, as she paced the floor of her chamber with unsteady, faltering steps.

A doctor had been sent for, and Marie, in a fever of impatience was waiting for him at the gate, when Blanche's lover approached her cautiously and entrusted to her keeping a note, to be delivered at once to her mistress.

"This is for yourself, Marie," he said, as he placed a ten-dollar note in her hand; "and remember, on no consideration give this letter in other hands than those of your mistress."

"Oui monsieur," Marie answered demurely, as she pocketed the gift and hurried toward the house. "Monsieur mistakes me for the maid of Mademoiselle Blanche," she thought, and made haste to hand the note to Blanche without a suspicion that it was intended for Evelyn.

With face flushing and paling by turns, Blanche opened the envelope and read as follows:

"EVELYN:—If you ever loved me come to me to-night, before you have spoken to Blanche. I will linger about the old oak, just outside the west gate. Do not fail to come to me—remember the ties that bind to— O. V."

Every vestige of color faded from Blanche's pearl-fair face, as she read the words, and Martha, who had read the note over her niece's shoulder, laughed mockingly.

"I told you so! I always knew she was a hypocrite! She couldn't impose on me, with her smooth face and saintly ways," the woman exclaimed, exultantly, but Blanche silenced her with a gesture of command.

"Hush, Aunt Martha! I do not wish you to interfere in this; I shall see that this precious epistle reaches the person it was intended for, and then—I shall endeavor to learn what is the tie that binds my father's wife to this gay deceiver."

She had left the room before Aunt Martha recovered from the astonishment into which her niece's words had thrown her, and in less than half an hour Evelyn found the note beneath a book on her dressing table.

Thinking Marie had placed it there while she was in that death-like swoon, Evelyn made no inquiries, but, weak and ill as she was, stole quietly from the house, in the direction of the west gate. The man was impatiently awaiting her and came from under the shadows of the old oak to meet her, with hands outstretched as if to clasp her own, but she shrank from contact with him and spoke in a low, tremulous voice:

"You must go away, Oscar Vane, you must never meet Blanche Merlyn again. Oh, Oscar! I believed you dead—why are you here, and under a false name? Whence comes the money you spend so freely? What new crime have you committed?"

"By George! how many questions you women can ask in a breath. Well, in the first place you believed me dead. I was willing to have that report circulated, when London became too hot to hold me and the officers from Scotland yard were on my track for the forging of that infernal check. The reason that I am here and under a false name, is easily explained. I am about to marry a rich wife, and it would never do to have my intended father-in-law searching up the antecedents of Oscar Vane. As to my money—well, I make it easily, by a little trick of sleight of hand; but luck may change, you know, and before it does I must have the handling of Blanche's fortune. By George! how strange it is that you should be her stepmother."

The last words were followed by a light laugh, and Oscar Vane lighted a cigar with provoking nonchalance.—Evelyn Merlyn was trembling like a leaf, but she leaned against the old oak, and faced him, with eyes gleaming angrily.

"You shall never marry Blanche! The girl shall not be sacrificed; I will save her from you—"

He interrupted her—his cigar fell from his hand unheeded—his face a trifle pale.

"You dare not put forth a hand to foil me! Your proud husband would cast you from his door; he would no longer shelter the sister of a thief and a forger. You deceived him, I'll warrant; you told him nothing of me or my crimes before you married him; I will find a means of turning his wrath on you; I will even swear that you have been supplying me with money since your marriage—he never knew you had a brother, ah! dare you deny me now, my proud sister?"

Evelyn dropped her face in her hands, with a piteous cry.

"Heaven help me! You are right; I believed you dead and told Gerald nothing of the fact," she moaned, and Oscar Vane, thinking he had triumphed, approached a step nearer, but did not venture to touch her, as he said:

"He need never learn the story.—Blanche will be my wife. I'll be a better man for her sake, and everything will be well."

"Never—never your wife! She shall not be sacrificed! No, not if I be driven from these grounds penniless and homeless. Oh, Oscar! be merciful; go away from here and leave my husband's child for my sake; do you forget the past, how cheerfully I toiled to supply you with money, that you might not be driven to steal? Do you forget our dead mother and how she begged you to watch over me and care for me in my lonely childhood? How did you obey her last wishes? Oscar, spare the girl whose heart you would break! see, I will kneel to you—"

"You shall not kneel to him! Blanche has heard all!" cried the girl for whom she pleaded, and the little blue-eyed maiden sprang to her step-mother's side, and with one arm around her waist, addressed the man who had been her lover:

"Go, Mr. Vane! for your noble sister's sake, I will not send for the officers of the law to remove you. Go! and do not think you have any power to make Evelyn Merlyn unhappy. I have heard every word you have uttered, and when my father learns the truth he will have no anger in his heart for the brave woman who has the misfortune to be your sister!"

Completely bewildered by the coolness of the timid little maiden he had wooed, Oscar Vane strode away, with a forced laugh, and an attempt at bravado, calling back to her:

"By-by, petite Blanche, I must seek further for the future Lady Trevor."

When he had gone Blanche dropped her head on Evelyn's breast, sobbing softly:

"Will you ever forgive me, dear, brave, long suffering Evelyn? will you ever forgive my neglect and coldness?" she faltered, and Evelyn answered, falteringly:

"There is nothing to forgive, my darling; only love me a little—my heart has so long craved for your love."

A few minutes later, and Martha, watching with eager eyes to see the hated mistress coming back in disgrace, was horrified to see her approaching with Blanche's blue eyes fixed lovingly on her pale face. Martha who was never made acquainted with the true state of affairs, soon left the house in disgust, unable to bear the sight of her niece's devotion to her young step-mother.

Blanche did not grieve for her lover's loss, as she had never really loved him, and for the first time Evelyn was quietly happy in her husband's home. When Mr. Merlyn returned, he was rejoiced to see how Blanche clung to his wife, and laughingly exclaimed:

"Ah, Goldie, I knew you could not long resist your beautiful mamma; how glad I am to see you united!"

When he learned the story of Oscar Vane he looked very grave for a moment, but seeing Evelyn's lips quiver, he caught her to his heart, kissing her tears away, as he whispered:

"My noble wife! My darling, now and always!"

"That is all very nice, but where is my title? Ah, mamma, I won the prize, but 'what was it worth,' indeed?" cried merry Blanche, dancing out of the room, with her blue eyes sparkling, and her sweet face all aglow.

NERVE.

A tall lady with a saturnine countenance came into the Chronicle office the other day and demanded of one of the reporters if Virginia offered a good field for a series of a dozen lectures on Woman Suffrage.

"I don't think the Comstockers have thought much about female suffrage," replied the reporter frankly.

"Don't say female," said the tall lady sharply.

"Why not?" asked the reporter, in innocent surprise.

"Because, sir, a term that is used to describe sex in animals should not be applied to woman."

The reporter admitted, in great humiliation, that the point was well taken, and looked up in some alarm at the severe countenance of the lady, who was a head taller than himself and manifestly able to thrash him in the interest of progress if so disposed. The stern countenance softened somewhat at these signs of confessed inferiority, however, and the lady continued:

"The cause of Woman is the cause of Humanity. The cause of Humanity embraces all Progress. Why, then, should the people of Virginia be indifferent to Woman?"

"They are not," cried the small reporter, hastily. "Far from it. Woman is the boss in this camp: Everything she wants she gets, and not one in a hundred has to do a lick of work."

"Mere toys," said the Tall One, with deep scorn. "Playthings for an idle hour. You would cover woman with silks and gauds, and sink her soul into insignificance by circumscribing her sphere and allowing her no mission in life."

"Well," admitted the small reporter, "that's about the way we look at it up here, that's a fact. Women haven't got the nerve to rustle for themselves like men."

"N-e-r-v-e!"

She uttered this word in a terrific tone, so terrific that the small reporter half rose from his chair.

"Nerve! What is there requiring nerve that you do that I am incapable of?"

"No offense, madam, no offense; I meant nothing personal, I assure you."

"Am I not stronger than you?" she demanded, scorning the apology. "Am I not gifted with as great a brain? Why do you despise my sex? We can bear more pain, and are therefore your superiors in courage."

The small reporter was gazing fixedly at a dark corner of the room and made no reply.

"Nerve, indeed!" continued the tall lady, "why, women have infinitely more nerve than men. Only yesterday I saw a woman——"

"That's the biggest rat I ever saw in the office," said the small reporter, staring intently at the dark corner.

The scream that rent the air brought in all the printers and several citizens from the street. When they arrived the Tall One was standing on a chair with one hand covering her eyes and the other convulsively clutching at her skirts as she gathered them close around her.

The small reporter wisely took advantage of the crowd to slip out, and he telegraphed from Gold Hill that he was going down to Carson to work up a big item.—Virginia (Nev.) Chronicle.

HE WAS JUST OUT.

Some of our stores are constantly annoyed by children coming to the door and asking for cards, empty boxes and that sort of things. The clerks are, of course, down on the youngsters, and the warfare never ends. The other day a little girl opened a store door, and sticking her head in, called out:

"Say, mister, have you got any empty boxes?"

"No," said the clerk, not very politely.

"Got any cards?"

"No."

"Got any almanacs?"

"No."

"Got any empty bottles?"

"No."

"Got any pictures?"

"No."

"Got any sense?"

"No—yes—no—yes—you miserable little wretch," and the clerk flew out the door, but the youngster was up in the next alley making faces at him, and he came back madder than he had been since his salary was reduced.

PROCLAMATION BY THE GOVERNOR.

STATE OF NEW JERSEY.

Executive Department.

The deplorable event against whose coming the people of this country have so earnestly hoped has reached us. James A. Garfield, the President of the United States, is dead.

He died, not as have so many of his predecessors, in the fullness of years, with his labors completed, but at the very threshold of the proudest era of his life, in the prime of his manhood, and at the hands of an assassin who struck but to gratify the basest personal malice and the most desperate personal hopes.

Such a death is a national calamity, and must cause universal grief.

In detestation of the crime; in admiration of the heroism with which the stricken President met his fate; in the earnest hope that the Ruler of the Universe may, in His goodness and mercy, avert from us any repetition of so terrible a misfortune, and in manifestation of the sorrow which now fills all hearts—

I, GEORGE C. LUDLOW, Governor of the State of New Jersey, do hereby recommend that the people of this State do observe MONDAY, THE TWENTY-SIXTH OF SEPTEMBER, INSTANT, the day appointed for the obsequies of the late President of the United States, by draping the public buildings in mourning; by the closing of places of business throughout the day, and by the assembling for prayer and other appropriate religious services in their usual places of worship at the hour of eleven o'clock in the forenoon of that day.

[L. S.] Given under my hand and privy seal at Trenton, this twenty-first day of September, A. D. 1881.

G. C. LUDLOW,
Governor.

Attest:
JNO. L. NAAR,
Private Secretary.

JAMES A. GARFIELD.

The life of the President has reached its close. The tragedy of the second of July has culminated fatally, as was anticipated at the time. The assassin's bullet was too well aimed to fail of its deadly purpose. And so the curtain falls slowly and sadly on a remarkable career. Whatever may be thought of Mr. Garfield as a man or as a politician, his life is a truly American product. He began at the bottom, and has worked his way, through favoring circumstances indeed, to the highest position in the nation. What he has done and become and attained show the brilliant possibilities made for every young man by our institutions. He was everywhere regarded as one of the people, a growth of the American soil, a child of our institutions. He belonged in a remarkable way to the home life of the country, and this fact strengthens public sympathy for him now. There is something terribly sad and pathetic in the closing of a career like Mr. Garfield's, just as he had crossed the threshold of the White House and entered on the duties of the highest official position. What a cruel disappointment to all his hopes! What a sad, tragical dashing of great expectations! Less than seven months have passed since the magnificent pageant of Inauguration Day! Politics cannot make any heart that feels, any mind that thinks, insensible to the awful contrast between the hopes raised on that occasion and the grief and gloom which have eclipsed them all. The people of the whole country feel this contrast if they do not express it in words, and it deepens their sympathy.

After his removal to Elberon he lost ground. The change was made too late to be of any service to him. That he suffered from blood-poisoning, for which there was no cure, and that his death was merely a question of days, as we have steadily maintained for weeks, is now proven. All that medical skill, that the care and affection of a devoted family, that the sympathies and prayers of fifty millions of people could do was done to save that one life to the nation of which he was the chosen head. When he fell the country received the sad intelligence with bowed and chastened hearts. Human rulers rise and fall, and the generations come and go, but over all and forever the Lord omnipotent reigneth.

HONOR THE DEFENDERS.

The sixty-seventh anniversary of the battle of North Point was appropriately observed in Baltimore last week.

Nearly forty years ago a patriotic Association was formed under the title of "Old Defenders," its purpose being to annually commemorate the repulse of the British in their attack on the fortifications of Baltimore, and to link together as an organization those citizens who were participants in the gallant affair of September 12th, 1814, when the unconquered flag of freedom, waving above the smoke of battle, inspired Francis S. Key to compose the beautiful national song of "The Star-Spangled Banner:"—

"O! say, can you see by the dawn's early light
What so proudly we hailed at the twilight's last gleaming—
Whose broad stripes and bright stars through the perilous fight,
O'er the ramparts we watched, were so gallantly streaming!
And the rocket's red glare, the bombs bursting in air
Gave proof through the night that our flag was still there;
O! say, does that star-spangled banner yet wave
O'er the land of the free, and the home of the brave?"

The Association of Old Defenders originally numbered about one thousand members, but death has steadily thinned their ranks, until now a meagre remnant remains to partake of the annual festivities offered by the grateful people of a city their valor saved from a mercenary foreign foe.

At the recent celebration only eleven of the Defenders appeared in public and their ages averaged eighty-six years. Soon they will all be gone from earth, but, we trust, not from memory.

A pleasing incident connected with this year's parade of the Old Guard was the drummer-boy of 1814, Henry Lightner, marching at their head and dexterously beating the accompaniment to "Yankee Doodle."

Honor to our country's brave defenders, and when they have passed away to join their comrades beyond the scenes of time, may each coming generation of Americans live increasingly worthy of the deeds they wrought and blessings they bequeathed, and may the closing stanza of Key's illustrious verse be an established truth forever:—

"O! thus be it ever, when freemen shall stand
Between their loved homes and the war's desolation!
Blest with victory and peace, may the heaven-rescued land
Praise the power that hath made and preserved us a nation.
Then conquer we must, for our cause it is just;
And this be our motto—"In God is our trust"—
And the star-spangled banner in triumph shall wave
O'er the land of the free and the home of the brave."

THE DEAD PRESIDENT.

After eighty days of prostrate suffering, braved with heroic fortitude, the wounded President has passed to that "bourn whose sands bear no returning footprints."

James A. Garfield is dead.

It seems like years instead of weeks since the miscreant Guiteau fired his assassin shot, so intense has been the public anxiety for the President's recovery and so fluctuating the prospect between hope and fear—life and death.

That President Garfield should die and not live has been by Infinite Wisdom decreed, and for a purpose beyond the comprehension of mortal man. "Not our will but Thine be done" continues to be the essence of true prayer. At that shrine of submission to an Almighty Power it becomes us all to reverentially bow.

The ball fired at the President was aimed at the Republic whose chosen representative he stood, and the people, rightly denouncing the dastardly act as such an outrage, and entirely forgetting political differences, with one accord surrounded the fallen Chief Magistrate with heart-felt sympathy and regard. It was a noble tribute.

May even the dark shadow of death melt away into the brightness of national fraternity.

Our country is in mourning, but let the people remember that God remains the Supreme Ruler and can sanctify the rod.

THE TRUTH.

"No man, so far as I know, ever made a charge of corruption against General Hancock. I never did myself, nor did I ever have any reason to do so."

So spake General Grant the other day, and speaking so, truthfully did he bear testimony to the character of an illustrious fellow soldier and citizen.

Corruption belongs not to General Hancock. He and it are enemies. After lengthened public service and the intelligent discharge of great responsibilities, he stands before the people to-day without spot or blemish.

He is a model American and emphatically an honest man.

It is as though every house in the land had a dear dead one in it.

The life-blood of Lincoln and of Garfield has been shed for the American people.

God's ways are not our ways, and it is an infinite mercy to us that they are not.

OUR MURDERED PRESIDENT.

Garfield's sudden death—The scene at the bedside—Announcing the terrible tidings—The new President's oath—Result of the Autopsy—The funeral arrangements—Transportation to Washington—Telegrams of sympathy—Guiteau told of his victim's fate.

The sad announcement was sent over the whole World at 11 o'clock of Tuesday night that President Garfield had breathed his last at 10:35, thus putting an end to the long weeks of suffering he has suffered. His condition that day, aside from a slight rigor in the early morning, was apparently more favorable than it had been on Sunday, and his surgeons and attendants, though realizing the fact that he was in an extremely critical state, were inclined to hope that he might grow better after all. At a few minutes after 10 o'clock that night, however, the sufferer complained of a severe pain in the region of the heart and almost immediately became unconscious. Dr. Bliss, who was hastily called, at once announced that he was dying, and Mrs. Garfield and the consulting surgeons were summoned. Within 15 minutes President Garfield had drawn his last breath and the sorrowful intelligence was being sent with lightning speed throughout the country.

THE HOUR OF DEATH.

The servants had closed the cottage for the night and strolled over to the Elberon piazza for a chat before retiring. Mrs. Garfield, who had spent a good portion of the evening in the sick room, had gone to her own chamber for the night. Dr. Bliss was in his room, next to hers, writing up his daily notes of the case. Dr. Agnew was reading in Private Secretary Brown's cottage. Dr. Hamilton was in his room in the hotel. Dr. Boynton was seated in the hotel office talking to three newspaper men. The majority of the correspondents had returned to the West End Hotel and were busy writing up the information they had gathered during the day. Reassured by the latest reports, nobody thought of impending dissolution. Gen. Swaim and Col. Rockwell were on duty in the sick room.

The President, who had been sleeping peacefully, suddenly lifted his hand to his heart and gasped: "Oh, Swaim I am in terrible pain here. Can't you do something for me? Oh, Swaim!" These were his last words. Col. Rockwell darted across the hall and summoned Dr. Bliss, who the moment he entered the room exclaimed: "My God! he is dying; call Mrs. Garfield." The President was then seemingly unconscious. Dr. Bliss felt his pulse and listened to the beating of his heart. Both were so faint as to be almost imperceptible. A hypodermic injection of stimulants was administered and mustard was sent for, but the latter arrived too late to be applied, and the injections were given without effect. Dr. Bliss seeing that the end was inevitable, ordered that the other physicians and members of the household be sent for, and in a few minutes they all had arrived, except Dr. Hamilton, who could not be found.

The dying man did not appear to recognize any of them until Mrs. Garfield approached. Then his partly closed eyes were seen to fasten upon her, moving as she moved, until she stopped on the left side of the bed, and, bending over, placed one hand upon his forehead and the other upon his breast. Col. Rockwell stood behind the head of the bed. Gen. Swaim, the dying President's most intimate friend, was near him on one side of the stricken wife, and Col. Rockwell on the other. On the opposite side of the bed were Drs. Boynton, Agnew and Bliss. Private Secretary Brown stooped at the foot, and the three servants remained near the end of the room. Mrs. Rockwell, her daughter, and Miss Mollie Garfield sat in the hall looking tearfully upon the scene through the open door. Dr. Boynton fanned the President's face, and occasionally placed his ear against his breast. Dr. Agnew every now and then felt of his pulse. Not a word was spoken. The dying man lay as still as death, but for a convulsive tremor in his hands and limbs and a deep drawn gasp at intervals, which became more widely separated. His face was free from any expression of pain, but he grew more ghastly every moment. This had lasted 20 minutes, when, with a final gasp, the President stiffened out and all was over.

SENDING THE NEWS.

The last official bulletin was issued announcing the President's death at 11:30 p. m. This was followed by the following summons to General Arthur:

The Hon. Chester A. Arthur, No. 123 Lexington avenue, New York:

It becomes our painful duty to inform you of the death of President Garfield and advise you to take the oath of office as President of the United States without delay. If it concur with your judgment we will be very glad if you will come here on the earliest train to-morrow morning.

WILLIAM WINDOM,
Secretary of the Treasury.
WILLIAM H. HUNT,
Secretary of the Navy.
THOMAS L. JAMES,
Postmaster-General.
WAYNE MACVEAGH,
Attorney-General.
S. J. KIRKWOOD,
Secretary of the Interior.

THE NEW PRESIDENT.

The news of the death of President Garfield was first conveyed General Arthur through newspaper sources a short time before he received any special dispatch on the subject, and while he was conversing with some friends in his parlor on the probability of the news being true, a telegraph messenger brought the above dispatch from Elberon informing him of the fatal end of the long struggle between life and death in the President. His friends said that General Arthur was painfully affected by the news, and it was a long time before he could recover from his emotion, which was again excited when the official notification was received from the members of the Cabinet.

After some little time had passed in sad contemplation of the sad event it was suggested by some of his friends that the advice of the Cabinet be heeded, and that he should take the oath of office. Accordingly a messenger went in search of Judge Blatchford, of United States Circuit Court, but found that he was out of town. Several friends then went in different directions to find a Supreme Court Judge in order to administer the oath. The object of this was the doubt as to what Judge was in town. The first Supreme Court Judge found and taken to the Vice President's residence was Judge J. R. Brady, and soon after another one of General Arthur's friends brought Judge Charles Donohue. A third had called at the house of Judge Lawrence; but although it was supposed he was in town, as he was sitting Monday in Chambers, his presence at the Vice President's house could not be obtained.

When the two Judges had assembled in the parlor of General Arthur's residence, there were also present in the room Commissioner Stephen B. French, President of the Board of Police; Daniel G. Rollins, District Attorney; Counsellor Elihu Root, Pierre C. Van Wyck, John C. Reed (General Arthur's private secretary), and a son of General Arthur. The General himself was in the extension off the parlor, from which he was summoned.

TAKING THE OATH.

Judge Brady, in order to have the oath properly administered, read the same from a copy of the Constitution of the United States, General Arthur repeating the words, sentence by sentence, and with uplifted hand. The form of the oath was as follows:

"I, Chester A. Arthur, do solemnly swear that I will faithfully execute the office of President of the United States, and will, to the best of my ability, preserve, protect, and defend the Constitution of the United States."

At the close of the repetition of these words, Judge Brady asked General Arthur, solemnly whether he swore to all the provisions before recited, whereupon General Arthur slowly, firmly, and with solemn tones, said distinctly:

"I do, so help me God."

The legal form was then made out by Judge Brady attesting to the fact that the oath of office had been administered to Chester A. Arthur as President of the United States, to which the Judge affixed his signature and the seal of the Supreme Court.

Following the ceremony, which took place between 2 and 3 o'clock on Tuesday morning, this dispatch was sent to the Cabinet:

I have your message announcing the death of President Garfield. Permit me to renew through you the expression of sorrow and sympathy which I have already telegraphed to Attorney-General MacVeagh. In accordance with your suggestion I have taken the oath of office as President before the Honorable John R. Brady, Justice of the Supreme Court of the State of New York. I will soon advise you further in regard to the other suggestions in your telegram.

(Signed,) C. A. ARTHUR.

AT ELBERON.

At 10 o'clock on Tuesday morning, at a cottage adjoining that in which the dead was lying, the members of the Cabinet awaited the coming of the President of the United States. He arrived some time later accompanied by Secretaries Blaine and Lincoln.

The people left the rear porches of the Elberon and flocked across the lawn until a crowd had gathered on one side of the house which sheltered the distinguished party. The Attorney-General summoned a guard, who began to pace between them and the cottage. Seeing that the crowd was increasing he afterward came out and requested the people to withdraw, declaring that their presence was disagreeable. This had the desired effect, for in a short time some of the Cabinet officers could be seen on the porch. But the first formal meeting of the Cabinet, under President Arthur, soon began, and the watchers outside turned their attention to Elberon and the Francklyn cottage.

At 4 o'clock the President prepared to return to New York. He agreed to come down again in the morning, and accompany the body to Washington. He took leave of the Cabinet upon the porch of the cottage and entered his carriage. As it passed beyond the guards and came nearer to the people, who had been watching the party with so much interest, it could be seen that upon the rear seat sat President Arthur and ex-President Grant, while upon the front seats were the sons of those two gentlemen, who had been with them during the afternoon. The carriage soon disappeared, and the visit of the new President was at an end.

No word of a business or political nature passed between President Arthur and the members of the Cabinet at this meeting. Informally, Gen. Arthur said he expected their aid and co-operation toward bearing the heavy burden that had fallen upon him. After the funeral is over the Cabinet Ministers all intend formally to tender their resignations, but whether any of them will be accepted or not is a matter within the breast of the President.

Very soon after President Arthur's departure Surgeon-General Barnes appeared, in conversation with Dr. Bliss. The other surgeons had not arrived and it was feared that they had been delayed, but they all reached the private secretary's cottage a few minutes later. They passed into the Francklyn, and the autopsy was soon begun.

THE DOCTOR'S DIAGNOSES.

The autopsy was begun about 4 o'clock of Tuesday afternoon, and it was nearly 11:30 before the statement was ready. It was read aloud in the office of the hotel to the waiting crowd, among the interested auditors being a number of women. It showed that the ball had taken an entirely opposite direction from that which the surgeons had supposed. After striking the eleventh rib, it was deflected to the left, passing beneath the back-bone and chipping off a number of fragments from one of the vertebræ. It then took a curve upward, and lodged just below the pancreas, about two and a half inches to the left of the spine and behind the covering of the stomach. It was completely encysted. The supposed track of the wound along the right side of the body which the surgeons had been probing was found to be a long cavity burrowed out by pus. The diagnosis of the lung trouble made by Dr. Bliss and Hamilton was found to be correct. A pus cavity 6 by 4 inches was discovered between the liver and large intestine, near the gall bladder, and another small one on the surface of the left kidney. It was these that poisoned the President's blood. The liver was enlarged and fatty. The immediate cause of death was a rupture of the mesenteric artery, from which nearly a pint of blood escaped into the abdominal cavity. This is what caused the intense pain in the chest which the President complained of just previous to death. The body, though emaciated, was by no means a skeleton. Immediately after the announcement of the result the crowd dispersed, and only the soldiers and the members of the household kept watch over the dead chief of the Nation.

ARRANGEMENTS FOR THE FUNERAL.

The coffin in which the President's remains will be interred arrived on Tuesday, and the body was deposited in it. It is a very rich one, covered with black cloth, and ornamented with solid silver handles and a plate. On the latter is the following inscription:

JAMES ABRAM GARFIELD.
Born November 19th, 1831.
Died, President of the United States,
September 19th, 1881.

The remains of the late President of the United States were removed to Washington by special train on Wednesday, Sept. 21, leaving Elberon at 10 a. m. and reaching Washington about 4 p. m. Detachments from the United States Army and from the marines of the Navy were in attendance on arrival at Washington to perform escort duty. The remains will lie in state in the Rotunda of the Capitol on Thursday and Friday, and will be guarded by deputations from the executive departments and by officers of the Senate and House of Representatives. Religious ceremonies will be observed in the Rotunda at 3 o'clock on Friday afternoon. At 5 o'clock the remains will be transferred to the funeral car and be removed to Cleveland, Ohio, via the Pennsylvania Railroad, arriving there Saturday at 2 p. m. In Cleveland the remains will lie in state until Monday at 2 p. m., and be then interred in Lake View Cemetery. No ceremonies are expected in the cities and towns along the route of the funeral train beyond the tolling of bells. Detailed arrangements for final sepulture are committed to the municipal authorities of Cleveland, under the direction of the Executive of the State of Ohio.

CEREMONIES AT ELBERON.

In accordance with subsequent orders the body of the President dressed in the same suit it wore on Inauguration Day, was placed in the casket on Wednesday morning, and carried down stairs and deposited in the hallway of the cottage with the head toward the south. The right hand lay by the side and the left hand was placed across the heart—a favorite position of his. From 8:30 to 9:30 the doors were thrown open and the public allowed to take a last look at the dead face. The crowd moved through rapidly, and a quick glance was all that was permitted by the attendants, who cautioned all to move along faster. Those who knew the President when alive could see little resemblance in the features in the coffin, to him who but a few months ago was the picture of health and strength. The face was pinched and unnatural, the lines sharply drawn, the hair more gray, and the general contour of the face wholly unlike what it was such a little time ago. The skin was dark colored and mottled. Few persons passed through with eyes undimmed, and suppressed sobs broke in on the stillness of the scene.

At 9:30 o'clock Chief Justice Waite, Secretary and Mrs. Blaine, Secretary and Mrs. Windom, Secretary and Mrs. Hunt, Postmaster General and Mrs. James, and Secretaries Lincoln and Kirkwood, and Attorney General MacVeagh arrived at the Francklyn Cottage, and the doors were closed to visitors. The religious services were conducted by request of Mrs. Garfield by the Rev. Charles J. Young, of Long Branch. There were present besides the family and attendants the members of the Cabinet and their wives and a few personal friends, numbering in all not more than fifty individuals. When the moment for the solemnities was announced the windows and doors were closed and all sounds were hushed. Owing to the necessity of starting the train promptly on time Colonel Rockwell had requested the officiating clergyman to occupy but five minutes.

THE TRANSPORTATION TO WASHINGTON.

The train left the Francklyn cottage promptly at 10 o'clock. At Elberon station 10 minutes after it took President Arthur and General Grant on board, who came down from N. Y. on a special. As the train passed along the road, men stood with uncovered heads, absolutely silent. Princeton Junction was passed at 11:44, at which point were assembled about 300 of the College students who had the track strewn for a hundred yards with beautiful flowers, quantities of which were also thrown on the train as it slowed up.

ARRIVAL AT THE CAPITOL.

At 4:29 the special train was seen rounding the curve below the station at Washington and almost immediately afterward it slowly entered the depot. The engine was the one which had drawn the suffering President to Elberon. The widow of the President, heavily veiled and in deep mourning, descended from one of the cars assisted by Secretary Blaine, whose pale face and heavy eyes betoken the suffering through which he has been passing. Then came the President's son Harry. Supported by these two, one upon each side, the noble woman walked slowly toward the exit. These three were followed by Gen. Swaim, Col. Rockwell, Mrs. Rockwell, Mollie Garfield, Lulu Rockwell, and other members of the little band of relatives and friends whose untiring devotion to the suffering President has become known to all the world. The coffin containing the body of the President was taken from the car and placed upon the shoulders of eight United States artillerymen, who bore it slowly toward the gate. Just before reaching the street, they halted, and then from the band in waiting outside came the strains of "Nearer, My God, to Thee," played with rare tenderness. The occasion was one that brought tears into many eyes. When the last note had died away, the coffin was placed in the hearse.

The route taken by the procession to the Capitol was the same as taken by the inauguration party in March last. Upon arriving at the main entrance the coffin was carried to the centre of the rotunda and placed upon the catafalque prepared to receive it, the gentlemen who accompanied it standing beside the catafalque until the lid that covered the face was removed, when they passed around the head of the coffin, each lingering a moment to take a last look at the emaciated face of the late Chief Magistrate, and then passing out to their carriages by the east door. The catafalque used in this case is the same one that was used for Thaddeus Stevens, President Lincoln, Senator Sumner, Chief-Justice Chase, and Vice President Wilson. On Wednesday night the rotunda was open for the admission of the public, and several hundred persons passed in and gazed upon the features of the dead Executive. The body will lie in state until noon to-day, when it will be removed to Cleveland by way of Harrisburg and Pittsburg, and without making any stops.

ENGLISH SYMPATHY.

Telegrams of Condolence from all over the World were received on Tuesday, of which the two following are specimens of the appreciation of all for America's loss:

Mrs. Garfield, Long Branch:—Words cannot express the deep sympathy I feel with you at this terrible moment. May God support and comfort you as He alone can.

(Signed) THE QUEEN, Balmoral Court.

Mrs. Garfield, Long Branch:—The citizens of London feel the deepest sympathy with you and America in the sad loss sustained.

(Signed) LORD MAYOR LONDON.

GUITEAU HEARS THE NEWS.

The warden of the jail tells how the assassin received the news of Garfield's death, thus: "When I entered the cell, after the usual morning greeting, Guiteau's question to me was, 'How is the President?' I replied that I did not know. I answered him thus in order to find out if he had gained knowledge of his death. Guiteau replied, 'You ought to know. Have you not read the morning papers?' I said that I had, but could not rely on the various statements in the papers. He the said he had felt very anxious about the President the past few days, and he feared that he was nearing his end. I then informed him, watching his expression carefully, that the President was dead. He instantly sank down on his bed and appeared very much agitated. After remaining in this position for a few moments, he arose and paced the floor, muttering something to himself as if praying. He the inquired at what time he had died, and after being informed said that he was glad the President had at last been relieved from his sufferings, as he would not have committed the deed if he had known that he was to suffer as he did. Guiteau did not appear so nervous and alarmed as I supposed he would when the news was broken to him, and I do not think he knew the President was dead until I so informed him; at least, he said he did not. He does not manifest any increased fear this morning, but he has been in constant dread all along that he would be dealt with by a mob, and earnestly prays that we will protect him."

THE County fairs come to the front for attention immediately after the State Fair, and while the competitions are not as great in some departments, the programmes give encouragement that they will be no less attractive than in former years. The fixtures at present are Union & Middlesex Counties' at Plainfield Sept. 26 to 30 inclusive; Hunterdon County, Sept. 27, 28 and 29, at Flemington, and Somerset County, October 4, 5 and 6. The Central Railroad of New Jersey will sell special reduced excursion tickets to the several points of holding on the dates thereof.

New Jersey's Constitution.

The commission to prepare and suggest amendments to the Constitution of the State of New Jersey, will meet in the City Hall, Jersey City, Friday, the 23d inst (to day). There will be a hearing in regard to the judiciary, and a combined hearing on Mr. Abbett's proposed amendment in regard to taxation.

Walking Under Difficulties.

The girls dress well, and they look well too, in their close fitting Loomers(?) fitting like a glove, and their waists without a wrinkle and their gaiters just one size too small. It does embellish the promenade, but it takes from the charm when one thinks of the outlay of the strength required to wear all these tight dresses. Strength? Yes. To walk a mile thus covered up, squeezed up, pressed up, muscle cribbed and pore clogged by pressure uses up the strength which in looser and now entirely unfashionable clothing would with a little practice foot it easily ten miles. Putting on a style costs something besides money.

Sent up for Larceny.

Before Justice Wadsworth at the City Jail on Wednesday afternoon, were arraigned Mr. "Ab" Cook a well-known character of this city and Mr. James King, a half-breed from Albany. The two were charged with purloining a piece of red flannel from White's, at the corner of Peace and Front streets; and although the property was not found upon the prisoners, a resident of North Plainfield identified them as having offered to sell her the goods described since they were stolen. The accused couple were sent to the County Jail to await the action of the Grand Jury. The culprits, when they found how strong was the evidence against them, confessed to Capt. Dodd the name of the party to whom the goods were sold. The latter will consequently have further trouble by giving the flannel

The County Fair.

Our home Fair, which commences next Tuesday at the grounds of the Union & Middlesex Counties' Mutual Agricultural Association, promises this year to far surpass in interest any previous exhibition and will present many features attractive by their newness and unusual charm. The entries for competition in the different trotting contests are large, and the presence of numerous well-known horses is a sufficient assurance that exciting competitions of speed will result. In the home and farm departments a long list of products exhibited is expected, while the display of live stock and ladies' work will undoubtedly be a fine one. Monday will be devoted to receiving entries of all kinds, and exhibitors may avail themselves of the services of stages to and from the grounds, at 10 cents each way, starting from the office of M. M. Thorn, opposite the railroad depot.

New Jersey Game and Fish Protective Society.

The Third Annual meeting of the above Society was held at the Mansion House, this city, on Wednesday, Sept. 21, 1881. Considerable business of importance was transacted. The Secretary reported that the membership of the Society was rapidly increasing. The following named gentlemen were elected Board of Directors to serve for one year:

James S. Vosseller, Isaac Brokaw, M. W. Schenck, J. W. King, W. L. Force, Roderick Robertson, Wm. B. Dunn, Israel D. TenEyck, E. P. Thorn.

The President, Secretary and Treasurer will be elected at a meeting of the Board of Directors next Saturday evening.

The following named gentlemen were also elected Vice Presidents: Geo. P. Suydam, John I. Holly, Percy C. Ohl. Honorary Vice Presidents: Fred. Voichman, of New York city; Gen. Wm. H. Sterling, of Plainfield, N. J.; James English, of Elizabeth, N. J. Counsel: Wm. B. Maxson, of Plainfield.

Somerset Courts.

The September term of Court opened on Tuesday at 10 o'clock, with Justice Van Syckle presiding, in place of Judge Magie, who is absent on a trip for his health. The following gentlemen were sworn as

GRAND JURORS:

Foreman—John G. Schenck, John Van Nest, Wm. P. Williamson, Wm. B. McMurtry, Samuel B. Tunison, J. DeWitt Boice, Jacob W. Nevius, Nelson J. Rouser, John Q. Weart, James K. Arnold, Isaiah Coriell, John Able, Benj. Runyon, S. C. Blackwell, Job C. Klavon, D. Webster Veghte, John F. Hall, Wm. Opie, Fred. P. Voorhees, Moses H. French, Jacob Long.

On account of the death of the President the Court adjourned until Wednesday when a saloon license was granted Mr. Geo. Hartfelder of North Plainfield and the applications of Messrs. Chas. Greader and Merwin Hughson were laid over.

Mr. Jackson, of Suydam & Jackson, asked to have re-assessment for damaging street in North Plainfield confirmed, which was objected to by Mr. Lewis. Court took papers and ordered new rule be given.

The elevation of Mr. Arthur to the Presidency is one of the contingencies the Half-breed managers did not take sufficiently into account last summer at Albany.

There will be State elections in ten States this year, in only six of which Governors will be chosen, viz.: In Massachusetts, Minnesota, Mississippi, Ohio, Virginia, and Wisconsin.

Ex-Congressman Isaac W. Scudder died at 10 o'clock last Tuesday night at his residence in Jersey City, from congestion of the lungs. Mr. Scudder was born in Elizabeth in 1817 and was 63 years old.

It seems that New Jersey has a statute, which has been pronounced constitutional, under which Guiteau can be taken to that State and tried for the murder of the President. And there is just enough of uncertainty in New Jersey justice to render such a trial as that of Guiteau singularly interesting.

ALTHOUGH we had a refreshing rain on Friday and Saturday of last week, the drought may be said to continue. It was not sufficient to wet the parched earth so as to start vegetation. IN our account of the "Council Proceedings" will be found in full a communication to that body from the City Treasurer, in which he refuses—in spite of the Council's demands and the Corporation Counsel's instruction—to pay out any portion of money now in his hands that has been received on account of City Taxes. Mr. VanWinkle probably adopts such a course entirely from a sense of self-protection, but we are, after a careful consideration of the state of the case, satisfied that he is mistaken in his views and his action is unfortunate for the city.

Mourning in Plainfield.

The news of the President's death, which was not known in this city until the morning following, was received as elsewhere with the most intense sorrow. Flags on all the principal buildings and at many residences were raised at half-mast, and the church, school and fire alarm bells tolled for nearly an hour. The draping in black of the store fronts and houses of the city was universal, and an air of gloom settled upon the faces, the business transactions and the conversation of the public.

The Somerville Fair.

On Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday, Oct. 4th, 5th and 6th, the Somerset Co. Agricultural Society will hold its Third Annual Exhibition on its grounds at Somerville, N. J. The occasion is to be a most successful one, as unusual efforts for its good have been exerted and new features and attractions secured. The track has received much attention and been greatly improved, so that good races in every particular are assured. If any of the above days prove stormy the Fair will be continued over Friday.

Another Church Building.

The Congregational Society of this city have been so successful since its organization and feels so encouraged by its prospects of future advancement, that it proposes to begin very soon the erection of a chapel on the lot recently presented the Society at the corner of Seventh street and Madison avenue. A Finance Committee consisting of Messrs. Samuel C. Roney, Jacob Kirkner, George W. Rockfellow, William B. Wadsworth and Thomas J. Tilney, has been appointed, which has in charge the raising of a fund of $10,000 necessary to carry out the intention. Since the organization was consummated it has been one of its principles to contract no debt, however small, and the same strict adherence to such action will be continued in relation to the proposed outlay. The plans of the building have been approved, and the desired amount is being so rapidly subscribed as to promise the immediate beginning of the structure. It will be of brick and so situated on the grounds that the addition, in a year or so, of a commodious church, may be made adjoining it. When the latter project shall be completed the chapel spoken of will be used as a Sunday School.

The Crane Family.

The descendants of Judge Benjamin Crane lately held their thirty-second annual reunion near Pine Brook, Morris County, upon the anniversary of his birthday, the number being increased from forty in 1850 to over one hundred. Only about a dozen deaths have occurred in that time. The entire number reside within the bounds of the two contiguous counties of Essex and Morris, save one grandson and family, who, contrary to the custom of the family, migrated from the State years ago. Thus they seem to inherit the tastes of their common ancestor, who passed all his days within the same circuit, having been born in Essex and dying in Morris County. He was of the fifth generation from Jasper Crane, one of the first settlers of Newark, and whose remains are interred in the grounds surrounding the First Presbyterian Church of Newark.

A grand re-union of the family will be held under the auspices of the Crane Genealogical Association at Chickering Hall on Wednesday, Oct. 5th. Addresses by members of the family, vocal and instrumental music and a dinner at Martinelli's will be the features of the occasion. The descendants of Jasper Crane of New-[illegible]

By Mr. Gilbert, from Finance Com., the following report in reference to the payment of interest-bearing warrants, and a com'n from City Treasurer Van Winkle upon the same question:

PLAINFIELD, Sept. 19th, 1881.

To the Hon. Common Council of the city of Plainfield:

GENTLEMEN:—At your last meeting a resolution was adopted requesting the Finance Committee to take the necessary steps to call in and redeem as many of the outstanding city warrants as the funds in the hands of the City Treasurer, derived from city taxes of 1881, would permit. Your Committee have had a meeting with the Treasurer and have served him with a written notice, requesting him to carry out the wishes of the Council, as expressed in the resolution aforesaid. The Treasurer asked for and received the written opinion of the Corporation Counsel with reference to his duty in the primary, which opinion was favorable to a compliance on his part with the resolution. Yet, notwithstanding, he has informed your Committee of his intention to ignore the authority of the Common Council, and refuses to pay out any of the funds in his possession or that may come into his hands from city taxes of 1881, until the full amount of State and County taxes for 1881 have been collected, thus blocking the wheels of government and making it impossible for the city to avail itself of its legitimate resources for the liquidation of its current expenses. When it is considered that the bills for the State and County taxes of 1881 have not yet issued from the Collector's hands, and that said tax is not due until December 20th, and that there is no legal process or restriction to prevent the payment by the Treasurer of the city funds as authorized by the Charter. It is difficult to find a reasonable excuse for his action.

Very Respectfully,
A. GILBERT.
E. L. FRENCH.
Finance Com.

Messrs. Darling, Gilbert and Finch, Finance Committee:

GENTLEMEN:—Your communication of Sept. 15th, 1881, is at hand, containing a copy of the resolution to take the necessary steps to call in and redeem all the outstanding warrants or so many of them as can be redeemed with the funds in the City Treasurer's hands, derived from the taxes of 1881, under and in pursuance of Sec. 2 of an ordinance, &c., approved April 19th, 1881.

Also, in accordance with the resolution, your request that I, the City Treasurer, will call in and redeem interest-bearing warrants that have been drawn against the general city fund to the amount of $3,600, or thereabouts, and outstanding interest-bearing warrants that have been drawn against the poor fund to the amount of $1,400, or thereabouts; having regard to the provisions of the ordinance, &c., and that you are informed by the Corporation Counsel that the funds received by you on account of city taxes of 1881, may be legally applied to the payment of these warrants, and that he has so advised you.

Gentlemen, it is unpleasant in the extreme to me that I cannot comply with your request, or the plain wording of the city charter—"that the Treasurer pay out the funds of the city on account of warrants, per order of the Council"—and in the face of the opinion of the Corporation Counsel, of whom I asked advice, and gave me as reference—"Freeholders of Ocean Co. vs. Lacy, 13 Vr., 536, 539, which reads, the section of the statute which directs that the State and County taxes shall be paid out of the first moneys collected, must be construed as applying to the first moneys received in the year when the State and County taxes to be paid, become due. It does not mean that the first moneys received this year, raised for special purposes, shall be taken to pay State and County taxes of former years."

The section above referred to directs that the State and County taxes shall be paid out of the first moneys collected. The taxes of 1880-1881, or any years, shall only apply on the years in which they are collected; if the taxes of 1880 (special or otherwise) must be applied to the paying of 1880 State and County taxes, certainly the first moneys received from the taxes of 1881 (special or otherwise) must be paid over to the County Collector in payment of the amount due the State and County for the year 1881. In the case of the State, P. Sheridan, Coll. vs. Jeremiah VanWinkle, Treasurer of the City of Plainfield, Judge Dixon says, "as to the Treasurer, it is claimed that although he has received for all purposes money enough to pay the State and County taxes, yet he has not received of these specific taxes any more than he has paid, and it is insisted that he is bound to pay State and County taxes, only so far as the same may be collected." In the case of the city of Bayonne, the charter of that city contains a clause precisely similar, and the Court of Errors has decided that the city nevertheless was required to pay the State and County quota out of the first moneys collected, according to the general law. The General Law, revision, page 1,159, says "that it shall be the duty of the collector of townships, cities or wards in this State, out of the first moneys which shall be collected by them to pay to the county collector of the county in which they hold office, the State and County taxes required to be assessed, &c.

If there were any assurance that the State and County taxes for 1881, would be paid in full by Dec. 22, 1881, then I might take the risk to disobey a plain demand of the statute which requires that I shall pay with the first moneys in hand, and also a decision of the Supreme Court. If the quota was satisfied then there would not be any demand on me by State or County; nevertheless, it would be breaking the law to which it seems our city charter is at variance.

Having the above views deeply impressed upon my mind, and the fear of disobeying the law, (not saying anything about the personal risk I would take in doing so) I must, against my own feeling in the matter, respectfully decline to pay out any moneys I now hold in my hands on account of City, Poor, Library and Judgment collected account 1881, until I know the State and County quota has been satisfied for the year 1881, or an opinion of the Supreme Court should be obtained favorable to the city, which shall justify me in not using the city funds for the payment of State and County taxes.

Yours, with respect,
J. VANWINKLE,
City Treasurer.

On motion, the report was received and ordered filed, and the com'n ordered tabled for action at a later stage of the proceedings.

By Mr. Tyler, from Law & Ord. Com., a claim of Bridget Quass, which she will accept the face of the bill without interest. Ref'd to Corporation Counsel. Also as correct, claim of J. O. Nodyne, court costs, 6.60. Ref'd to Aud. Com.

St. Paul at Athens.

At St. Mary's Church on last Sunday evening, the Rev. Clarence E. Woodman, C. S. P., delivered the first of a series of lectures on "St. Paul at Athens." The audience was large and evidently appreciative of what was certainly the finest exhibition of oratory ever delivered in that church. The lecturer commenced by a description of the journey of St. Paul from Syria to Greece, and then launched into an eloquent comparison of the nobility of its early history; with its monuments of Athenian glory, the amazing display of beauty, of opulence, and of art; with her Parthenon, her proud Acropolis, her Hill of Mars, her columned temples, elegantly grand, her speaking statues, and her sculptured halls, once trod by Socrates, Plato "The Divine," and by the attic sages of past times. Passing through the beauteous capital, once the centre of the world, it presented itself to the apostle with an altar "to the unknown God;" such he said met my astonished gaze. The Rev. lecturer told of the apostle's wonderful reasoning, of the restless longing for a divinity. This God whom they worshipped without knowing it, St. Paul came to preach to them. Apparently his teachings produced little effect; he entered the city despised and he left it as miserable. But like the mustard seed, the smallest of all seeds, the words of the great apostle bore fruit, and Athens again became dignified with Christianity. The Rev. speaker ended by drawing the attention of his audience to the similarity between the condition of Athens at that time and our country at present. There are Atheists like Ingersoll, and creeds innumerable, founded on the silliest misconceptions of the truth. Our age abounds in learning, well diffused, and science brought home to the people through a thousand channels. But learning and science are not faith, and the sin of our age lies in failing to see that no knowledge, however extended or profound, can be incompatible with simple, obedient, bowing down of the intelligence to divine truth, and to the voice of its messenger.

Home Again.

The Miss Everitts from Lake Luzerne.

Mr. and Mrs. Corydon Tyler from Mt. Desert.

Mr. R. H. Davies and family from Byram Point.

Mr. Russel O. Howell, from the Delaware Water Gap.

Dr. Chas. F. Hart and family from Montauk Point.

Mr. Warren Randolph from the Delaware Water Gap.

Miss Kate Matthews from the Catskills and Ocean Grove.

Personalia.

Congressman Miles Ross, of New Jersey, is at the Astor House.

The little daughter of Mr. Auguste Saltzman held a most pleasant party on Thursday, the anniversary of her birthday.

We are indebted to Hon. Theo. F. Randolph, late U. S. Senator, for a set of the Congressional Record of the 46th Congress.

The public cannot appreciate too fully the kindness of Mr. Chas. Schermerhorn in posting, for its inspection, bulletins regarding the President's condition.

Mr. John Hughes of the Somerset House numbers among his guests a 14 pound girl that arrived recently with the intention of staying for life. Her name has not yet been registered.

Mr. Dennis S. Van Liew, the well-known hotel keeper at Liberty Corner, died at an early hour Wednesday morning, after a brief illness, and his wife's death of typhoid fever occurred the same night.

Mr. C. M. Fine has recently received from his son at Santa Fe, New Mexico, a beautiful collection of photographic views of scenes in that country taken by the Smithsonian, Institution, Bureau of Ethnology. They are a most valuable series and decidedly of interest.

Mr. Henry E. Bowen of Netherwood has the sympathy of a large number of friends in this and other cities, with him in the loss of an eldest daughter, on Wednesday of last week. The funeral was held in the Netherwood Chapel on Friday last.

It is with regret that we are called upon to announce the death at Perth Amboy, yesterday, of a child of Mr. Edgar Sofield, Station Agent at that place. The little one's bright smiles and happy spirits will be greatly missed from the family circle.

Mrs. Anna L. Spencer, one of the oldest inhabitants of the city, died at her residence, No. 4 East Seventh street, on Wednesday last. The deceased, about a week ago, slipped upon the polished floor of the kitchen, sustaining a severe fracture of the hip which was the immediate cause of her death.

Mr. F. Willetts Runyon of this city and one of the editors of the Cornell Era, announces the policy of that paper to be to postpone any condemnation of Mr. Shinkel as a traitor to the interests of the College crew in Europe, until such guilt is conclusively proven to the satisfaction of a Committee on inquiry.

Fire Chief Frank W. Vail was most appropriately favored on Thursday evening of last week, by the presentation of a handsome badge of office. The gift was made by the members of the Gazelle Engine and Hose companies, and presented in their behalf by Foreman Johnson of the latter association. The recipient accepted the token of regard with words of thanks and appreciation.

Resolutions of Regret.

WHEREAS, In the providence of God Adam Craig, our late associate in the Board of Directors of the Somerset County Agricultural Society, has been removed by death.

Resolved, That we remember his gentlemanly deportment, his sterling integrity, his genial disposition and kindness of heart and manner.

Resolved, That by his death this Society has lost an efficient member and the community a valuable citizen.

Resolved, That this preamble and these resolutions be entered upon our book of minutes, that a copy thereof be sent to the family of the deceased and to the publishers of the county papers for publication.

By order of the Board of Directors,

WESTFIELD WISPS.

Fair.

Dry again.

Dust Plenty.

Buckets are here.

Watering carts none.

Frankie appears to truly enjoy the society of Wittke's geese.

Don't forget to attend to your wells, citizens. There might be a fire.

Flags at half-mast, mourning decorations, heartfelt sorrow universal.

Messrs. Sparkman and Seagur have the contract for demolishing the Hanaman building.

Mr. Jonas Miller proves to be the owner of the finest team, both for speed and action, in our township.

A goat race is contemplated. The number driven in Westfield should insure an interesting contest.

Don't forget that our local is anxiously seeking for Job printing, advertising, subscriptions, &c.

Mr. Chas. E. Vail, our jeweler, increases in popularity as his work becomes better known to our residents.

At the sale of lands for Taxes held by our Collector on Wednesday last, all but those advertised in this issue were disposed of.

Don't forget that the Union & Middlesex Fair begins next Monday. Entries from Westfield we trust will prove large and creditable.

Our eminent physician and surgeon, Dr. Sherman Cooper, was called to Baltimore, Md., on professional business on Friday last and returned Sunday night.

Mr. Peter Roe, a popular summer resident, made a trip in pursuit of the Blue fish on Monday last, but reports poor success. No wind! No fish! "Sorry."

Your local's attention has been called several times lately to the crowded condition of Mr. P. Traynor's store. We notice this prospect of prosperity with pleasure.

The "Turf Exchange" seems to increase in popular estimation. It is certain that its popular proprietor, Mr. John Roulston, leaves nothing undone in order to please its patrons.

Our friend Mr. Rob. Woodruff Jr., with Burt's stage has been soliciting the patronage of visitors to the Fair at Waverly during the past week, his route being from Newark to the grounds. If not fully patronized Bob ought to be.

While not desiring to record the slightest objection to the dissemination of news relative to our township, your local considers that he had a just complaint against "Old Hickory" or the editors of the paper who copied his notes last week, without giving him just credit.

The distribution of blotting pads of the Fidelity and Casuality Insurance Co. of N. Y., call to the attention of our citizens the necessity of proper Insurance. Our esteemed friend and citizen Mr. John M. Crane is Secretary of the Co., a fact in [illegible]

Turf exchange, dull, prices unchanged, stock large. Call and examine.

Our citizens are warned against two men, who leaving their coats and hats in secure places solicit these articles. Their prompt arrest should follow their appearance here. A duped citizen states that he saw them divide their plunder and pursued them with loaded revolver. At last accounts they were on their way to Cranford.

Returning from church last Sunday night the horse attached to a Phaeton, the property of Mr. Lansing, stumbled and in his endeavors to regain an upright position succeeded in doing considerable injury to the wagon, such as broken shafts, whiffletree &c. Parties in the vicinity succeeded in preventing a runaway and fortunately no one was injured.

Albert Bridges, one of our best known and a highly respected citizen, died Thursday morning. He has been in failing health for several months, and while his death was anticipated, it was nevertheless a shock to our citizens who could hardly realize that his familiar face would not again be seen on our streets. The greatest possible sympathy was expressed for the family in their bereavement.

Our local proved to be one of the recipients of an invitation to visit the residence of our popular dispenser of leather and other goods of equine interest on Monday night last, to witness the blooming of a Night Blooming Cereus. Three perfect blossoms with fragrance beyond expression fully repaid him aside from the kind attentions of host and hostess. The plant is a particularly fine one.

Mr. Chas. H. Daniels, the well known and popular occupant of the position of Purser on the P. M. S. S. Co's. steamer Colon, left us on Tuesday last for the regular trip, after a sojourn of several weeks at home, on account of operations necessarily performed on his eyes. The well wishes of his many friends follow him, a number of whom deemed it proper to visit the vessel and bid him adieu. Pleasant voyage "Charley" and safe return.

We regret to note the serious injury of Mr. D. J. Fink on Tuesday last, while endeavouring to fasten a favorite and valuable bull, his bullship became enraged and tossed his owner several times besides trampling on him. Mr. Fink's injuries were of a very serious nature and the only wonder is that the animal did not kill him. Dr. J. B. Harrison was immediately summoned and found it necessary to sew up several of the cuts about the head and face. At last accounts the sufferer was doing well.

The news of the death of President Garfield was first announced to our citizens about 12 o'clock Monday night by the tolling of the Presbyterian church bell. Although official, but few could believe it, and everyone evinced the deepest feelings in the matter. Your local proceeded at once to the depot and securing confirmation of the dire news, announced it to those present and posted a bulletin at Post Office. Everyone seems to feel it almost as a personal bereavement, and our village is draped in mourning.

It is a subject of congratulation to our citizens that they are to be afforded the opportunity to hear that unrivalled troupe of Jubilee singers and the Tennessee Cabin Band, who will give one of their pleasing entertainments at Lyceum Hall on Thursday evening next (the 29th inst). All the talent of this troupe were originally slaves, and their rendering of the melodies peculiar to their race is favorably commented upon by all who have heard them. We predict in advance a full house. Popular prices of admission. Reserved seats 35 cents. General admission 25 cents.

The purchase of what is known as the Hanaman property on Broad street, by our popular dealer in papers, stationery, jewelry, cigars, tobacco, toys, insurance property, &c., &c., Mr. Chas. F. W. Wittke, excited considerable but universal favorable comment among our citizens. While not intending to tear down the entire buildings the larger part will be, in fact are already in process of demolishing, and in their stead the purchaser proposes to erect a substantial brick structure. Everybody glories in Charley's advancement, and he has certainly secured a splendid piece of property at fair figures. Its improvement is a matter of the greatest interest to all our property owners.

Atlas Lodge, No. 125, F. and A. M., held their regular communication on Monday evening last, when the third degree was conferred on Wm. H. Hurst of Clark Township. Among the visitors present we note R. W. D. D. G. M., Edward L. Tillow of the 5th Masonic district; W. H. Elston, Trilluminary Lodge, No. 112, of Newark; Rev. Bro. Drumm, Rochester, No. 664, of Rochester, N. Y.; John Ulrich, Joseph H. Edwards, Jr., and Chas. Carpenter of Jerusalem Lodge, No. 26, of Plainfield; W. M. W. J. Hamilton and M. Munson of Azure Lodge, No. 129, of Roselle, N. J.; P. M. J. W. Shepard and Bro., Walter Chandler and P. J. Demarest, of Orient Lodge, No. 126, of Elizabeth; E. E. Brennin, of Asbury Lodge, No. 142, of Asbury Park, N. J.; S. J. Warden, of Oriental Lodge, No. 51, of Elizabeth. The business of importance reported was from the Trustees was the securing of a lease of the present Lodge rooms for a period of 5 years with a privilege of a renewal of 5 years, provided the rooms are not needed for school purposes. Following the adjournment of the Lodge the following gentlemen at the request of Mr. Hurst partook of a substantial collation at our popular hotel: Thomas Love, Wm. G. Barton, L. M. Whitaker, A. H. Shopland, A. Chambers, Addison S. Clark, Melford M. Scudder, F. C. Pennington, Chas. H. French, Edw. Brennin, Chas. E. Smith, Chas. Haberley and Erastus Dolbier. The occasion proved a particularly pleasant one and was unfortunately dispersed by the announcement of the President's death.

Application being made to our Overseer of the Poor to take charge of and care for Lewis Carll, makes the particulars of his life a matter of interest to our readers as he was and is one of the well known characters of our village. His father a slave, was the property of a party by the name of Carll, residing on the Passaic river, who sold him to Sam'l Downer, his mother also a slave, was the property of Wm. Baker. Lewis himself was never a slave, but was bound out to Dr. Cory Orsborne, then and for many years afterwards, the leading medical practitioner of this township. If truth is told by those who ought to know, Lewis' present crippled condition is largely due to the Doctor, as it is stated that in a fit of passion he lamed him for life by sticking him with a pitchfork. It is also stated that in order as far as possible to make amends for this, that the Doctor requested in his will that his heirs take care of his servant Lewis, during his life. If this is true the heirs have failed to carry out this request or the application above spoken of would not be made. Lewis was certainly a faithful servant and would willingly do any work to-day, that his infirmities will permit of. Over 70 years of age, crippled and afflicted with rheumatism his abilities are limited. Both young and old in Westfield know old Lew and respect him. Is it not possible that his many friends can provide means for his support? Are there not those in our midst that will prove as liberal as his late employer who has given him home and clothes for the past year for such services as he was capable of rendering.

The following verse received together with a very handsome and lifelike portrait, by the parents of the late Miss Lizzie Stitt, will prove of interest to our readers.

TO MR. AND MRS. WM. STITT.

2 Sam.-12:23—I shall go to her; but she shall not return to me.

2 Kings 4:26—It is well with the child? It is well.

I cannot tell what form is hers, what look she weareth now,
Nor guess how bright a glory crowns her shining seraph brow.
The thoughts that fill her sinless soul, the bliss which she doth feel
Are numbered with the secret things, which God will not reveal.
But I know for God doth tell me this, that now she is at rest
Where other blessed maidens are, upon their Savior's breast.
I know her spirit feels no more, the weary load of flesh,
But her sleep is blest with endless dreams of joy forever fresh.
I know the angels fold her close beneath their glittering wings
And sooth her with a song that breathes of Heaven's eternal things.
And I know that we shall meet again that precious child and I,
When God for Aye, shall wipe away all tears from every eye.
When I think of what my darling is, and what I hope to be;
When I muse on that World's perfect bliss, and this world's misery;
When I groan beneath this weight of sin and feel this grief and pain,
Oh! I'd rather die, to be with her than have her back again.
Bear up bereaved Mother, strong in faith, bear Father [illegible]
Your little one is housed and [illegible] what could you wish her more.
The voice that is almost here, is longing gladly there,

A Testimonial.

DUNHAM & MILLER. GENTLEMEN:—I have been troubled with corns for over 20 years and have used many remedies advertised for relief of the same, but without any good results, until I tried "Miller's 20 cent Corn Killer," which has entirely removed my corns and relieved me of pain and suffering. This is the first time I have been able to walk without limping for many years.

I take pleasure in recommending your remedy as being the best and only sure corn remover.

Respectfully,

A LITTLE OF EVERYTHING.

CARD.

The undersigned begs leave to announce to the property owners of Plainfield and surrounding country that having been practically connected with the Painting Business in all its several branches for many years past, in New York and vicinity, also Bound Brook, New Brunswick and Summit, that he will be glad to furnish estimates for any or all branches of the trade, at the lowest possible figures, and insure first-class work. Hoping for a share of your patronage, I remain,

Yours,
WILLIAM G. HAY,

"I'M ALL PLAYED OUT,"

is a common complaint. If you feel so, get a package of Kidney-Wort and take it and you will at once feel its tonic power. It renews the healthy action of the kidneys, bowels and liver, and thus restores the natural life and strength to the weary body. It can now be had in either dry or liquid form, and in either way is always prompt and efficient in action.—New Bedford Standard.

The only laws a man cannot break with impunity are the laws of nature.

IT IS A FOOLISH MISTAKE to confound a remedy of merit with quack medicines. We have used Parker's Ginger Tonic with the happiest results for Dyspepsia and Debility, and know it to be a sterling health restorative.—Times.

THE POPULAR DEMAND.

So great has been the popular demand for the celebrated remedy Kidney-Wort, that it is having an immense sale from Maine to California. Some have found it inconvenient to prepare it from the dry compound. For such the proprietors now prepare it in liquid form. This can be procured at the druggists. It has precisely the same effect as the dry, but is very concentrated so that the dose is much smaller.—Lowell Mail.

"WHO GRASPS MUCH HOLDS LITTLE." The proprietors of Ely's Cream Balm do not claim it to be a cure-all, but a sure remedy for Catarrh and Catarrhal Deafness, Colds in the head and Hay Fever.

Cream Balm effectually cleanses the nasal passages of catarrhal virus, causing healthy secretions, allays inflammation and irritation, protects the membranal linings of the head from additional colds, completely heals the sores and restores the sense of taste and smell. Beneficial results are realized by a few applications. A thorough treatment as directed will cure catarrh. The Balm is easy to use and agreeable. Sold by druggists at 50 cents. On receipt of 50 cents will mail a package. Send for circular with full information.

"Pop goes the weasel," read a young gentleman contemplatively, as he perused the list of dances at a country ball. If my pop goes, remarked he, with a chuckle, he'll go the whole hog. That's the kind of a weasel pop is.

NEARLY ALL THE ILLS THAT AFFLICT US can be prevented and cured by keeping the stomach, liver and kidneys in working order. There is no medicine known that will do this as surely as Parker's Ginger Tonic. See adv.

There are times when girls are not sorry if they have big hands, as for instance, when they are playing copenhagen.

BRACE UP.

There is serious meaning in this expression. That weary step, languid eye and general feeling of lassitude, come from "sickness." Be assured, a serious and perhaps fatal disease is close in the wake. The system wants cleansing of impurities, the sluggish blood needs to be sent in swift and clear currents through the veins. Dr. Kennedy's "Favorite Remedy" will do this; it will give new vigor to the body, brightness to the eye, a glow to the countenance and elasticity to the step. One Dollar a bottle. Every druggist has it. Dr. David Kennedy, Proprietor, Rondout, N. Y.

No, sir; rat-holes are not puss-cavities.

OH, WHAT A COUGH!

Will you heed the warning. The signal perhaps of the sure approach of that more terrible disease Consumption. Ask yourselves if you can afford for the sake of 50 cts., to run the risk and do nothing for it. We know from experience that Shiloh's Cure will Cure your Cough. It never fails. This explains why more than a Million Bottles were sold the past year. It relieves Croup and Whooping Cough at once. Mothers do not be without it. For Lame Back, Side, or Chest, use Shiloh's Porous Plaster. Sold by R. M. Steele.

DYSPEPSIA & LIVER COMPLAINT.

Is it not worth the small price of 75 cents to free yourself of every symptom of these distressing complaints, if you think so call at our store and get a bottle of Shiloh's Vitalizer, every bottle has a printed guarantee on it, use accordingly and if it does you no good it will cost you nothing. Sold by R. M. Steele.

We have a speedy and positive Cure for Catarrh, Diphtheria, Canker Mouth and Head Ache, in SHILOH'S CATARRH REMEDY. A nasal Injector free with each bottle. Use it if you desire health and sweet breath. Price 50 cts. Sold by R. M. Steele.

An old bald-headed ruffian says he don't exactly know which is worst, love or cucumbers. He's had both, and he thinks, if his memory serves him aright, that love was rather the worst, when it got the true grip on him.

"WAIT A LITTLE LONGER."

So we are told sometimes. Things will come out all right, people say, if we will wait a while. That don't do with disease. The longer you wait the worse it is. It's no use to plant corn in November. Do you "feel a little bad?" Strike the trouble right away. Dr. David Kennedy's "Favorite Remedy" is what you want. It will at once relieve the bowels, eliminate the liver and cool the skin. Take One Dollar in your hand and stop at your druggists, or write to the Doctor at Rondout, N. Y.

Carter's Little Liver Pills are free from all crude and irritating matter. Concentrated medicine only; very small; very easy to take; no pain; no griping; no purging.

RESCUED FROM DEATH.

The following statement of William J. Coughlin, of Somerville, Mass., is so remarkable that we beg to ask for it the attention of our readers. He says: "In the fall of 1876 I was taken with a violent BLEEDING OF THE LUNGS followed by a severe cough. I soon began to lose my appetite and flesh. I was so weak at one time that I could not leave my bed. In the summer of 1877 I was admitted to the City Hospital. While there the doctors said I had a hole in my left lung as big as a half dollar. I expended over a hundred dollars in doctors and medicines. I was so far gone at one time a report went around that I was dead. I gave up hope, but a friend told me of DR. WM. HALL'S BALSAM FOR THE LUNGS. I laughed at my friends, thinking that my case was incurable, but I got a bottle to satisfy them, when to my surprise and gratification, I commenced to feel better. My hope, once dead, began to revive, and to-day I feel in better spirits than I have the past three years.

"I write this hoping you will publish it, so that every one afflicted with Diseased Lungs will be induced to take DR. WM. HALL'S BALSAM FOR THE LUNGS, and be convinced that CONSUMPTION CAN BE CURED. I have taken two bottles and can positively say that it has done more good than all the other medicines I have taken since my sickness. My cough has almost entirely [illegible]

MISCELLANEOUS READING.

A MATTER OF TRUTH.

He was an elderly appearing man, a stout, substantial looking man, with a ruddy face, perfect teeth, and a head which, when he took off his hat, was totally bald, all except a halo—if so I may call it—of gray-black hair, which was just about half an inch in length, all around his head.

A neat gold chain ornamented his somewhat portly stomach, and a gold-headed cane was in his hand, while a pair of eye-glasses, suspended by a black cord, dangled from the topmost button-hole of his vest.

In short, he was a perfect type of the well-to-do family man and successful merchant, one of those well-preserved old fellows who go down town at nine A. M., walk up Broadway at four, and dine, wine, play whist, and go to bed by clock-work.

I met him by chance at our club, and after an introduction by a mutual friend, who after the introduction glided away, as mutual friends generally do in such cases, leaving us to glare at each other at our leisure, he remarked:

"You're a writer, are you not?"

I confessed that I was, half apologetically, adding that I couldn't help it, for I was born so.

Contrary to my expectations, he did not look at me scornfully. Your average business man generally regards a poet or an author as a sort of social excrescence, a useless and totally uncalled-for nuisance, and tries to crush him in a business-like, commercial way. But this gentleman did nothing of the sort.

"I'm glad to have met you, sir," he remarked, "for I want to see you upon a matter of justice. I want you to disabuse the public of a very common error."

"With pleasure, sir; what is it?"

"Are you a father?"

I blushed and said I wasn't; I could not afford it. Instead of being a father, I was a philosopher.

"Then, of course," said he, "you have no grown up daughters?"

"No, sir."

"Well, sir, I am a father—in fact, I am very much of a father. I have six daughters between the ages of fourteen and twenty-five—all unmarried, too. They are good looking, virtuous, honest girls, and each of them, I am proud to say, will have a neat little amount of money given her as a dowry by me when she marries. Naturally, my girls are much sought after."

"Presumably so, sir."

"Well, now I am about to get at the gist of my remarks. How is the average father considered in romance? As a brute, isn't he?"

I confessed he was; the average father of romance is, generally alleging, depicted as a brute.

"He is nearly always opposed to the young man of his daughter's choice?"

"Invariably."

"He threatens to paralyze said young man if he catches him around his daughters?"

"He does."

"He keeps a bull dog, a fierce, vicious bull dog, with double teeth, to sic at the young man, and, if possible, to bite out the bosom of the young man when he attempts to elude the canine by vaulting over the back fence?"

"That is generally accepted as a fact."

He hovers around in dark corners of the front stoop, when the moonlight is gilding valley and hill, to surprise the young man a-kissing his daughter?"

"Yes, sir."

"And when he catches the young man performing the osculatory act, he swoops down upon the young man, in fiendish glee and malice, and proceeds to waft the young man into the air with his boot?"

"Always, sir—in stories."

"And when the young man comes to ask him for his daughter's hand, he tells him, scornfully, she is reserved for an iceman or a marquis, and proceeds to brain the young man with a gore stained club?"

"That is generally the finale."

"It's a lie—a lie! All of the statements are lies; and I am bound on behalf of the fathers of the land, to correct them. As I mentioned before, I have six daughters. I ought to be considered a typical father, a representative of the mass of fathers, hadn't I?"

"Yes, sir."

"Now, sir, I am not a brute. I defy anybody to prove it. In the second place I am not opposed to my daughter's—any particular daughter's—young man. And they all have young men. Elizabeth's young man—she is the oldest—is a clergyman, and Mary Ann's young man deals in a faro bank. The other four of my daughter's young men are respectively a plumber, a banker, a broker, and a hod-carrier. Yes I don't oppose any of them; first, because I don't want to, and second, because I do not believe it would do any good if I did. Our American girls have a habit of making their own choice of husbands, regardless of parental consent or dissent."

"Neither do I want to paralyze any young man, for I do not want to live in jail; and the act of paralyzing a young man, I have been legally advised, is a felony in law."

"Nor do I keep a bull dog. I never knew but one father who did, and that bull dog got mad one day and chewed up the old man himself, which, in my opinion, served him right."

"I never hover about my front stoop either, to wait for any one of my daughters to kiss their young men. 'Tisn't any of my business, anyway. Do you suppose when I was courting their dead mother that I asked anybody if I could kiss her when I wanted to? Well, I guess not."

"As for booting any of the young men, why, I wouldn't dare. They're all good healthy, muscular young men, and if I should boot them, I know that they would proceed to wipe up the front stoop with me, and relieve themselves of a father-in-law."

"Last of all: I don't bring out any clubs when my wish-to-be sons-in-law pop me the question. I open a bottle of wine, hand out a cigar, clap them on the shoulder, and remark: Take her my boy! God bless you! May you both be happy. If you can, elope. 'Twill be romantic, and save me a 'wedding bill.' That's the sort of a fatherly hair pin I am."

Here my newly found friend stopped and looked at his watch.

"Ten o'clock, by Jove!" said he. "Got to go home. But you'll put down in the papers what I told you?"

"Yes, sir."

"Thanks. I simply want you to do it as an act of justice to my fellow fathers and myself. Sorry I haven't a disengaged daughter for you, but I haven't."

"Good bye."

FLASHES OF FASHION.

The following Flashes of Fashion, selected from advance sheets of Ehrichs' Fashion Quarterly, have been placed at our disposal by Messrs. Ehrich Bros., of Eighth avenue and Twenty-fourth street, New York, the publishers of that magazine. The Fashion Quarterly occupies a deservedly high position among the Fashion periodicals of the day, and we heartily commend it to our readers. The Fall number, now ready, is the largest ever issued, and contains a complete resume of the fashions of the season, copiously illustrated, and accompanied with full quotations of prices. The moderate subscription price, only 50 cents a year, brings it within the reach of all:

Stripes run lengthwise.

The rage for beads is on the wane.

White toilets will be worn until frost.

Crinolets are bustles, with a new name.

Dolmans will be the leading fall wraps.

Basques and jackets are still fashionable.

Shoulder capes and fichus will be much worn.

Great latitude is permitted in the shapes of sleeves.

Loose-wristed long gloves will be more worn than ever.

Ombre plushes will be used as trimmings on costumes.

Flowers are used on evening toilets to an unlimited extent.

Striped moire ribbons will trim many of the early fall bonnets.

All costumes and suits are composed of two or several fabrics.

There will be a rapid demand for dolmans and dolman-sacques this fall.

Some of the new trimming silks have stripes, moire and damasse.

Quantities of Spanish lace, white, black, cream, and colored, is a feature in fall toilets.

Dolmans in the sacque-visite shape, and dolman mantles will lead the styles for early fall.

Some of the new plush goods have immensely long pile cut in irregular depths to form the figures.

Horse-hair cloth, mohair, steel and whalebone-stiffened crinolets, will be worn until cold weather.

Low quartered buttoned half boots will be worn until the middle of September or first of October.

Lawn tennis suiting in gay stripes will be worn as skirts for fatigue suits until the middle of November.

Rhine-crystal clasps, buckles, medallions and slides, ornament various parts of the most fashionable evening toilets.

Chenille plush stripes, on satin merveilleux grounds, are seen among some of the new trimming stuffs.

The popular out-door sports for the months of September, October, and November, will be archery and lawn tennis.

Sleeves are long, demi-long, or three-quarter lengths, according to fancy; tight, shirred, or puffed, as the wearer prefers.

The hair is most fashionable when dressed low and close, but women with large necks and fat faces should wear it high or off the neck.

Pleated collarettes of mull, plain white, dotted, embroidered, and polka-dotted in black and colors, are much worn, with scarf-bows to match.

Some of the striped goods, in bright colors, with gold and silver hair-lines, are crossed diagonally with stripes formed by the weaving of the cloth.

The Princess of Wales wore a toilet of silver-gray tulle, much puffed, pleated and draped, and brightened with diamond ornaments, at the Queen's last ball.

Terra cotta shades combine well with porcelain-blue, peacock-green, black, maroon and white, especially in stripes outlined with gold and silver threads shot in.

Dresses composed entirely of tulle, puffed, pleated, shirred and gathered, are not, at the moment, considered too youthful for young married ladies for ball-room wear.

White and cream-colored mull scarfs, with the ends edged with fine cream-colored (imitation), Mechlin, Valenciennes, and Breton laces trim English straws for early fall wear.

Plush chenille fringes, with each small strand tipped with one fine cut jet bead, are brought out to be used with the plush bands, shirrings, and pleatings that trim cloaks and costumes.

White Surah, combined with white satin merveilleux, and trimmed with white Spanish lace, white satin bows, and Rhine-crystal ornaments, makes the handsomest of all white evening toilets.

Flowers of the fall season, particularly ox-eye daisies, small sunflowers, goldenrod and yellow roses, will trim many of the rough-and-ready straw hats and bonnets for September and October.

The most popular fatigue suit for fall wear is a box-pleated hunting jacket and looped tunic, of blue, dark green or maroon flannel serge, drawn up high on the hips over a skirt of lawn tennis striped suiting, made plain as a rule, but sometimes trimmed with a two-inch wide box-pleated ruche around the bottom. The collar, cuffs, belt, and pocket pouch are of the striped stuff.

A STRAIGHT TEMPERANCE DRINK.

Among the thirsty ones the other day hunting up and down Woodward avenue for something to quench thirst, was a man in rusty black, who entered the drug store and inquired:

'Have you a temperance drink?'

'Two or three of 'em. Will you take soda water or ginger ale?'

'Well, now, our society does not regard either of these as strictly temperance drinks. Both are associated with stronger liquors.'

'How would root beer answer?'

'Suspicious, suspicious,' was the whispered reply.

'Ah! I've got it now!'

'Ah?'

'I can give you a straight temperance drink as cool as ice, but it comes high.'

'How much?'

'Ten cents a glass.'

'Very well,' said the old man, as he put down his dime.

The druggist was absent only a minute and then returned and placed a glass of liquid before him. The old man drank half of it, smacked his lips and asked:

'May I ask what you call it?'

'Certainly; it is called water. I just drew it from the hydrant.'

The excursionist set the glass down much harder than he needed to, buttoned his coat, and with a glare made to reduce the druggist's weight to 120 pounds in five seconds, marched out as stiff as a bean pole, and crossed the street after a lemonade flavored with peppermint essence.—Free Press.

CONSECRATION OF BISHOP WIGGER.

The Bishop-elect will be consecrated in St. Patrick's Cathedral, Newark, on the Feast of St. Luke, Tuesday, October 18th, by the Most Rev. Michael A. Corrigan, D. D., Archbishop of Petra, assisted by Bishops McQuaid, of Rochester, and Waddams, of Ogdensburg. His Eminence, the Cardinal, will be present. A week day has been chosen for the important event, so as to permit the Reverend Clergy to witness the ceremony without interfering with their duties in their respective parishes. Like his illustrious predecessor, the next Bishop of Newark will subscribe himself "† Michael." Dr. Wigger's parents desired to have him christened "Winand," the name of his uncle; but the good old priest in New York to whom he was taken to be baptized, searched the calendar in vain for "St. Winand." The "young heathen" was given the name of a Saint. The Christian name of one of the sponsors was Michael, and to this accident the future Bishop is indebted for having the Archangel Michael for his titular Saint. His parents were under the impression that he was christened "Winand" as well, but in after years an examination of the baptismal register revealed the fact that the name had been omitted—at least it was not recorded there.—Exchange.

GOOD NEWS FOR SOLDIERS.

The Commissioner of Pensions is considering the advisibility of recommending to Congress the passage of a new pension act. The law contemplated will provide for the pensioning of all Union soldiers who were in rebel prisons for any length of time and suffering the horrors of Andersonville, Belle Isle and Saulsbury. The Commissioner holds that the constitutions of many men were wrecked, and that more injury to their usefulness was inflicted in thousands of cases by the starvation of the prison pens than by service in the field or wounds in battle. He is now making an investigation to determine approximately how many names such an act would add to the pension rolls, and what it would cost the Government annually should it go in o effect. Upon the result of this inquiry will depend somewhat the nature of his recommendation.

THE WORLD'S FAIR.

Those earnest workers into whose hands of late the prospects of the proposed International Exhibition of 1883 in New York, have rested, are steadily carrying the project towards an establishment upon a footing calculated to insure success. The adverse criticisms of those outsiders who were unable to secure such control of the scheme as would allow of its manipulation to their private advantage, have failed in their intended effect and a World's Fair is assured that will be managed for the best interests of the American Nation and against any design of personal speculation or aggrandizement.

The animus of such sentiments as are expressed in a late letter of Judge Hilton to L. M. Bates, Esq., is apparent to those acquainted with the former's plans regarding the Fair when first proposed. Had Garden City been selected as a site for the erection of the buildings and the holding of the exhibition, we feel safe in asserting that the worthy Hilton would have remained among its managers, entertained only the most favorable prospects of its completion and expressed naught but the sincerest belief in its immense success. This real estate speculation on the part of Judge Hilton was, by his more honorable associates, "nipped in the bud," since which time that gentleman has lost no opportunity of giving way to the same spiteful elements of his character as impelled his late attack upon the Hebrew race, which has resulted so disastrously to his business.

FISH CULTURE.

The work of the New Jersey Board of Fish Commissioners has been very extensive. About 100,000 young shad, which had been hatched out in the breeding ponds owned by the State, were placed in the Raritan river. There were 2,000,000 of the young shad placed in the Delaware river. The distribution of young black bass in the lakes and fresh water streams of the State—one of the most successful branches of the work of the Commissioners—is being pushed forward vigorously. When it was first decided to stock the Delaware river with black bass it was claimed that they would ruin the shad fisheries. During the last three years the Delaware shad fisheries have been unusually successful, thus justifying the action of the Commissioners. The young California salmon, 5,500,000 in number, which were placed in the Delaware river last Spring, and the 200,000 brook trout placed in the streams in the northern portion of the State, are thriving finely.

MRS. VANATTA'S WILL.

The will of the late Mrs. Jacob Vanatta gives to the Presbyterian Home Missions, $5,000; Presbyterian Foreign Missions, $4,000; Female Charitable Society of Morristown, $3,000; American Bible Society, $1,000; First Presbyterian church, Morristown, $1,500; Presbyterian church Freedman's Fund, $500; Orphan Asylum of Newark, $1,000; two sisters and two neices of Mrs. Vanatta, $13,000; servants, $900. The balance of the estate is given to her own relatives, and will probably amount to over $100,000. Alfred Mills, Esq., is sole executor.

If you grasp a rattlesnake firmly about the neck he cannot hurt you, says a Western paper. To be perfectly safe it would be well to let the hired man do the grasping.

◆

Mathew S. Gregory, of Madison, has been appointed Fish Warden for Morris County. He expects soon a supply of black bass for stocking purposes, and will communicate with any parties interested in the subject.

◆

Newton, N. J., papers tell of a party of three gentlemen from that place, who recently caught 48 pounds of black bass in Swartswood Lake, in Sussex County, the largest of which weighed 4½ pounds and the others 4 pounds. This lake was stocked with the black bass some years ago by the State Fishery Commission, but few of them have been caught until recently. Small black crickets were used as bait. It is gratifying to know that the efforts of the Commission to stock streams and ponds of the State with such gamey and toothsome fish as the black bass has met with so great success.

Which will Remove All Your Doubts—A Good Investment—One that Yields "AN HUNDRED FOLD."

The world is full of charlatans asking public attention to patent inventions for the mitigation of suffering. Everything claiming the power to do good should be from a reputable source, otherwise it is open to suspicion. Dr. David Kennedy, of Rondout, N. Y., affirms that his medicine, "Kennedy's Favorite Remedy," is the best article of the kind ever produced. Hence it is only just to the public that he refer to his record as a physician and surgeon. Among the capital operations performed by him are: Amputation of the thigh-bone in the case of Abraham Stewart, Port Benn, Ulster Co., N. Y.; amputation of the arm, case of Mrs. Edward Meyers, of Rondout, N. Y., and the operation of lithotomy (removal of stone from the bladder), in the case of Simon Tietsell, of Kingston, and the removal of the eye for Oscar Craig, of Rosendale, Ulster Co., N. Y. These are a few of many. All these persons fully recovered. [illegible] Dr. Kennedy prescribed "Favorite Remedy" (which has unequaled powers of purifying the blood). Owing to the use of "Favorite Remedy" in the after-treatment of the surgical cases not one has died; all are living to this day in the bloom of health. Dr. Kennedy's "Favorite Remedy," for sale by all druggists. $1.00 per bottle.

Kidney Wort.

Does Wonderful Cures!

WHY?

Because it acts on the LIVER, BOWELS and KIDNEYS at the same time.

Because it cleanses the system of the poisonous humors that develope in Kidney Disease, Biliousness, Jaundice, Constipation, Piles, or in Rheumatism, Neuralgia and Nervous Disorders.

SEE WHAT PEOPLE SAY:

Eugene B. Stork, of Junction City, Kansas, says, Kidney-Wort cured him after regular Physicians had been trying for four years.

Mrs. John Arnall, of Washington, Ohio, says, her boy was given up to die by four prominent physicians and that he was afterwards cured by Kidney-Wort.

M. M. B. Goodwin, an editor in Chardon, Ohio, says, he was not expected to live, being bloated beyond belief, but Kidney-Wort cured him.

Anna L. Jarrett, of South Salem, N. Y., says that seven years suffering from kidney troubles and other complications was ended by the use of Kidney-Wort.

John B. Lawrence of Jackson, Tenn., suffered for years from liver and kidney troubles and after taking "barrels of other medicines," Kidney-Wort made him well.

Michael Coto of Montgomery Center, Vt., suffered eight years with kidney difficulty and was unable to work. Kidney-Wort made him "well as ever."

KIDNEY-WORT
PERMANENTLY CURES
KIDNEY DISEASES,
LIVER COMPLAINTS,
CONSTIPATION AND PILES.

POETRY.

SOMEBODY'S MOTHER.

The woman was old and ragged and gray
And bent with the chill of the winter's day

The street was wet with a recent snow
And the woman's feet were aged and slow.

She stood at the crossing, and waited long,
Alone, uncared for, amid the throng

Of human beings who passed her by,
None heeded the glance of her anxious eye.

Down the street, with laughter and shout,
Glad in the freedom of "school let out,"

Came the boys, like a flock of sheep,
Hailing the snow piled white and deep.

Past the woman so old and gray,
Hastened the children on their way,

Nor offered a helping hand to her,
So meek, so timid, afraid to stir,

Lest the carriage wheels or the horses' feet
Should crowd her down on the slippery street.

At last came out of the merry troop
The gayest laddie of all the group;

He paused beside her, and whispered low,
"I'll help you cross, if you wish to go."

Her aged hand on his strong young arm
She placed, and so, without hurt or harm,

He guided the trembling feet along,
Proud that his own were firm and strong.

Then back again to his friends he went,
His young heart happy and well content.

"She's somebody's mother, boys you know,
For all she's aged and poor and slow;

And I hope some fellow will lend a hand
To help my mother, you understand,

If ever she's poor and old and gray,
When her own dear boy is far away."

And 'somebody's mother' bowed low her head
In her home that night, and the prayer she said

Was, "God, be kind to the noble boy,
Who is somebody's son and pride and joy!"

BARBARA'S GUEST.

"Company for dinner!" cried little Barbara, in despair. "Oh, Lisette, what shall we do?"

It was a sunshiny day in early July with the great clusters of tiger-lilies all in blossom in the garden, the cherries beginning to turn crimson on the trees, and the roses flinging their subtle fragrance on the air, as if they fancied themselves blooming in some Persian vale. The thermometer stood at eighty in the shade. Squire Dulcimer's haymakers were dotting the sides of the distant upland, and all the windows of the little cottage were wide open, to admit whatever stray whiffs of cool wind might be roaming athwart the blue air. And little Barbara had ripped her muslin dress apart, and was sitting, Turk-fashion, on the floor, considering how best she might combine the breadths into something more modern, when Lisette, her sister, came flying tumultuously upstairs, like the wind little spirit that she was.

Barbara was small and dark, with blue-black braids of hair, large, solemn eyes, a crimson dot of a mouth, and the prettiest of round, dimpled chins. Lisette was tall and slender—a sort of human lilly, violet-eyed and transparent-skinned, with shining yellow curls, gathered into a net, and a sweet, bird-like voice, not unlike that of a linnet. And these two girls, with their little brother Benny, were all that the old doctor had.

He had married late in life, this odd, eccentric disciple of Galen, and lost his wife when Benny was a baby; and ever since the young things had grown up by themselves, like the wild roses on the edge of the woods.

"Do!" repeated Lisette. "We must go down and set the table, that's what we must do."

"But there's nothing in the house for dinner!" cried Barbara, tragically, clasping her hands, as she rose out of the whirlpool of pink muslin on the floor. "Oh, dear! oh, dear! Why don't people stay at home when they aren't wanted. Who is it, Lisette, anybow?"

"I'm sure I don't know," answered Lisette. "Some travelling book agent, I suppose, or some shabby genteel medical man, from nobody knows where, who thinks he is entitled to come here just because papa is a M. D. I only caught sight of the back of his coat, but it had a dreadfully seedy look."

"I do think papa is to bad," sighed Barbara. "I was going to have the whole day for dressmaking, so as to look decent at church next Sunday, for Mr. Dulcimer and his sister are coming back, and one doesn't want to look like a native Patagonian. And I was going to give papa bread and cheese, and a glass of home-made root beer. Papa don't care what he eats. But he's so particular about his guests. And I sent the last dozen of eggs to the store to exchange for three spools of sewing silk and a paper of needles, and told Benny to carry the pot of chicken soup to poor old Mrs. Gumbo, who is sick and poor, and all alone in the world!"

"Charity begins at home," dolorously quoted Lisette. "Couldn't we catch a fowl?"

"As well try to catch a savage zebra of the wilderness," said Barbara. "One would think they were every one of 'em trained racers, by the way they run."

"A meat pie," suggested Lisette.

"There is no meat to make it of," said Barbara, brusquely.

"There's the remains of day before yesterday's steak," said Lisette. "We might mince it up fine, and—"

"Oh, Lisette—dear Lisette!" cried Barbara. "I'm sorry, but I gave the steak to a tramp yesterday, between two slices of bread and butter. He looked so hungry and he said he had had nothing but raw turnips to eat for two days. And when I was looking for white roses this morning, I saw the two slices, with only one mouthful bitten out of each, flung into the bushes. And, oh, Lisette, there was a black bottle beside them. And I'm afraid he wasn't a nice honest tramp!"

"Then that settles the meat pie business," said poor Lisette. "Couldn't we make the white pigeons into a fricassee?"

"My white doves into a fricassee!" almost shrieked Barbara. "Oh, you cruel, cruel, heartless, marble souled thing! Why don't you talk of making me into a fricassee, and done with it?"

"Barbara, don't speak so loud!" said Lisette, energetically. "We'll send to Widow Millett's and borrow her dinner!"

"What?" said Barbara, fairly astounded by the magnitude and originality of her young sister's idea.

"Send Benny," said Lisette. "Tell her we'll return in next week. Write a note and say that papa has invited a gentleman to dinner, and that we haven't a mouthful fit to eat in the house except bread and cheese. Mrs. Millett is an excellent cook; she always has something nice. And you will see that this will help us out of our dilemma."

"Yes!" sighed Barbara; "but there's my muslin dress. Why couldn't the man stay away until I had modelled it over, like the plate in the fashion magazine?"

"Never mind the fashion magazine," said Lisette; "but run and set the table as fast as you can. And be sure that you put on the very best cups, and remember to turn the cloth so that the darned spot will come under the tea-tray!"

And down stairs sped little Barbara, with cheeks as rosy red as cherries, and black braids breaking loose from their pins in a confusion of shining jet while the guest sitting composedly out upon the porch, had had full time and opportunity to comprehend the entire situation.

"I seem to have arrived at an inopportune season," said he to himself. "I am sorry now that I accepted good old Dr. Bloom's cordially-proffered hospitality. But I am rather too substantial to vanish down into a crack and too real to float up in a puff of vapor, like the genii in the children's story-books; so I must abide until the end of it. But I'm glad they aren't going to make little Miss Barbara's pigeons into fricassee."

Three minutes afterward, when little Ben, the youngest of the family, rushed whistling out with a covered basket, he was deftly intercepted by the stranger.

"Where are you going, young man?" questioned he, in a low voice.

"To the Widow Millett's," said Benny, "with a note."

"Don't go there," said the stranger. "Go across the woods to the hall, instead—it is but a few steps farther—and give this card to the old housekeeper there. And hark ye, Tommy—"

"Benny, sir, please," explained the lad.

"Benny, then—don't let the young ladies know that you haven't obeyed their orders. I'll make it all right with them, and here's a silver dollar for you."

Ben darted away with his face all smiles; and just then in came the old doctor himself, apologizing for having been so long in finding the dusty old volume which he carried under his arm.

"But I always lose track of time when I get among my books," said he.

Barbara had just come down stairs, after a hurried toilet, which had added a pink ribbon bow to her dress and a cream colored rose to the heavy black braids of her hair, when she found Lisette in the little dining-room.

"Barbara," said Lisette, "just look here. Is it enchantment that has been to work?"

For upon the table was spread a collation of cold boiled ham, sardines glistening with their fragrant oil, chicken salad, iced sponge cake, white grapes and strawberries as large as lady apples. And a slender roll of French bread was cut in slices on a napkin in the centre of the board, while half a dozen petes de foie gras, in their little metallic cans, stood opposite.

Benny's big eyes, watching them from behind the lilac bush that shaded the window, grew preternaturally bright as he noted their amazement and at the same moment the doctor shuffled in, all unconscious of his carpet slippers and carelessly buttoned dressing gown, and ushered his guest into the presence of his daughters.

"Here's Mr. Dulcimer, Lisette," said he. "Barbara, little girl, here's our neighbor, the young squire. Dulcimer, let me present you to my girls—Blonde and Brunette, as we sometimes call 'em, ha, ha, ha!"

And in the midst of their consternation and perplexity, Lisette and Barbara were obliged to assume the part of gracious and undisturbed young hostesses.

They all enjoyed their impromptu lunch in spite of the mystery that surrounded it; and when Mr. Dulcimer returned to the hall, they all walked half-way through the woods with him.

"Do you know Mr. Dulcimer," said Barbara, with sparkling eyes, "I fancied you a haughty aristocrat, who wouldn't notice his humble neighbors at all!"

"I hope you are disabused of the idea now," said the young squire, smiling.

"Oh, entirely!" said Lisette.

"And, believe me," said Mr. Dulcimer, holding Barbara's slim brown hand in his a second or so longer than was absolutely necessary. "I should never have forgiven myself, if, through any law of stern necessity, I had eaten up your white doves in the shape of a fricassee."

And he disappeared in the woods, leaving Barbara and Lisette looking in amazement into one another's eyes.

"Lisette!" cried Barbara, breathlessly, "is it possible that he could have heard what we said?"

"He certainly has," Lisette made answer, with a comic gesture of despair.

And then Benny was called into the witness box, and made to own up that the elegant luncheon came direct from Dulcimer Hall, and things seemed worse than ever.

"We are rightly punished," said Barbara, bursting into tears, "for our inhospitality. And I never—never shall forgive either myself or Mr. Dulcimer."

But she did. She forgave both the criminals before the young moon, now hanging over the hills like a thread of silver, had widened into its full shield of luminous pearl.

"We are friends," she smilingly acknowledged to Mr. Dulcimer.

"So far so good," said the young squire. "But may I not hope that one day we may be something more?"

And Barbara blushed celestial red, and said "she did not know!"

So Mr. Dulcimer leaves the solution of that problem to time. But it is more than probable that the question will be settled to suit him.

MORALITIES.

Short retirement urges sweet return.

Heaven trims our lamps while we sleep.

Smiles are smiles only when the heart pulls the wire.

Adversity borrows its sharpest sting from our impatience.

For the noblest man that lives there still remains a conflict.

Growth is better than permanence, and permanent growth is better than all.

It is one of the precious mysteries of sorrow that finds solace in unselfish thought.

Beauty is a power without a plan, a success without a scheme, a problem without a proof.

Ideas are the great warriors of the world, and a war that has no ideas behind it is simply brutality.

A couplet of verse, a period of prose, may cling to the rock of ages as a shell that survives a deluge.

You need not tell all the truth unless to those who have a right to know it. But let all you tell be the truth.

Poetry is the sister of sorrow. Every man that suffers and weeps is a poet; every tear is a verse and every heart a poem.

The best way to apologize is to do such a kindness to the offended one that he will forget that you ever attempted to injure him.

Throughout the whole web of national existence we trace the golden thread of human progress toward a higher and better estate.

Occasion may be the bugle call that summons an army to battle, but the blast of a bugle can never make soldiers or win victories.

Whoever is an imitator by nature, choice or necessity, has nothing stable; the flexibility which affords this aptitude is inconsistent with strength.

The reformer's chief business always is to destroy falsehood, to drag down the temple of impostors where idols hold the place of the Almighty.

There are truths which some men despise because they have not examined them, and which they will not examine because they despise them.

Never confide your secrets to paper; it is like throwing a stone into the air, and if you know who throws the stone you do not know where it may fall.

No truer lines were ever written than those of Horace Greeley; "Fame is a vapor; popularity an accident; riches take wings; the only earthly certainty is oblivion."

If there be one thing upon this earth that mankind love and admire better than another, it is a brave man; it is a man who dares to look the devil in the face and tell him he is a devil.

Science is a first-rate piece of furniture for a man's upper chamber, if he has common sense on the ground floor. But if a man hasn't got plenty of good common sense the more science he has the worse for his patient.

A FEW "HOWS."

How many more things there happen to be that we want, than we need?

How many pecks of dirt does a 10 cent restaurant customer eat ere he dies?

How much of the old-fashioned faith which "can remove mountains" is to be found in a wealthy congregation?

How much of the scientific opinion of to-day is to be known as nonsense 100 years hence?

How many revolutions per minute will a lively kitten make in pursuit of its own tail?

How can a born rich man ever enter into sympathy with a poor one?

How many people really live up to the golden rule, "Do unto others as ye would be done by?"

How many try to live up to it?

How many never try to try?

How many "do" others at every opportunity?

How much better a man's appetite is when he has no money to buy a breakfast?

How many men were ever convinced by argument?

How many men fail to be convinced through bitter experience?

How many people find themselves good company for themselves?

How many people really believe that death is only a step into another condition of conscious existence?

How many people think they've got money enough?

How many men who borrow money are certain they'll never pay it within the specified time?

How many seventeen-year-old girls be*lieve they'll become old maids?*

How many want to?

How much easier it is to spend most dollars than to make them?

How many people are there who think their luck has been the worst luck of all the luck in the world?

How many women will own up to their true age?

How many like to so own up?

How many grocers will say they have poor butter when they do have it?

How could any of us endure a man who never committed a sin of any sort in all his life?

How much real profit to humanity is there in seeing a crowd of miserable beasts and birds suffering by deprivation from their natural conditions and climates, and dying by inches while being hauled about the country for "a great moral show?"

How old Ben Franklin lied when he said "Early to bed and early to rise makes a man healthy, wealthy and wise."

THE TRAMP'S DRINK.

A dilapidated-looking tramp, with sixteen distinct patches on his clothes, and a plaster on his eye, yesterday, went into a Main street saloon, slapped down a worn-out dime, and bawled out in a voice loud enough to be heard in Ogden:

"Give me a soda-water cocktail with the North Pole in it."

A crowd outside, thinking free drinks were to be set up, crowded into the saloon and watched and waited. The man of rags, who had ordered the North Pole in his drink, ate up all the lunch he could find, chewed up the coffee and cloves, and was tackling the mint, when the bartender quietly asked:

"What did you say you wanted in your drink, Mr. Gould?"

Mr. Gould steadied himself a moment, grinned on the crowd and at himself in the looking-glass, and replied:

"If you please, sir, I'll have the North Pole in it."

The bar-tender remembered an old piece of gas-tubing, about three feet in length, which had been left around; he got it and blew some cayenne pepper down the inside, put one end of it in the cocktail, and smilingly handed it to Mr. Gould. Mr. Gould took it, gave a first preliminary pull, and then a hurricane arose. It seemed as though the combined tornadoes of eight Eastern States had broken loose. An immense conglomeration of legs, arms, hats, canes and bodies was observed piling out of the saloon a few moments after; and to-day, when the saloon-keeper reckons up the losses of a broken head, cracked mirror, scratched and stained counter, and liability of being sued, he will easily remember the last words of the tramp as he closed the door and shot up the street.

DETERMINED NOT TO RUN.

About a month ago a gentleman was walking by the side of a railroad near Hartford, Connecticut, when he saw a bumblebee's nest in a clump of bushes. He wondered whether the warm April sun had caused the occupants of the nest to stir, and by way of experiment, he thrust his walking-stick into the odd looking globe.

Instantly the bees began to rush out, and tossing the nest upon the railroad, the gentleman took to his heels. While he was yet running he was met by a friend.

"What's the matter?" asked the friend. "Is your house burning down, that you should dash along in such a mad way?"

"Oh, no," replied the gentleman, I'm just taking exercise. When I get on this road I must spring into a run."

"Nonsense!" said the friend. "I've walked along here many a time and never felt like running."

"Well," said the gentleman, "a new hat to a new hat that you can't go from this point to that bridge down there, without springing into a trot, if not into a galop."

The gentleman walked ahead of his companion, and when he reached the bumblebees' nest he gave it a savage thrust with his cane and run.

Just as the bees swarmed out the friend came walking along. He saw the trap that had been set for him, but determined not to run.

The bees attacked him in the face first but he brushed them away with his hands. Then they flew at the back of his neck.

The harder he fought the more fiercely did the bees fly at him. His arms and legs were waving wildly, when suddenly a big bee got down on his back.

That decided the battle, for the victim of the joke started in a mad run toward the bridge, nor did he stop until he reached a drug store, a half a mile away.

ABOUT EDITORS.

An editor without a backbone don't amount to much. It's his principle column, you know.

To write for a newspaper is one thing; to edit a paper is another; and to make a paper pay still another.

"Scissors and lightning!" shouted an irate subscriber who could find nothing but miscellany and telegraphic news in his paper.

A New York editor has given $35,000 for the promotion of a German school system. Out this way it takes all an editor can make to promote his own system.

"It's a useless waste of money to go to Europe for pleasure," says a levelheaded exchange. And, besides, it's a miserable long, sloppy walk for an editor.

In one spot in the ruins of Pompeii a stack of eighty-one skeletons was found. Future research will perhaps develop the fact that the window of an editor's sanctum overlooked the spot.

The census office states that the people in the United States pay annually $26,259,100 for their daily newspapers. Leaving in the neighborhood of $999,111,999,111 that they don't pay.

In addition to his other trials a Western editor's wealth was increased by a baby weighing only four pounds. Whereupon a heartless contemporary mentioned the arrival, and called it "a supplement."

We warn newspaper men against a counterfeit $100 bill now in circulation. Probably no professional men handle so many bills of that denomination as the pencil pushers, and we hope our timely warning will prevent any from getting caught.

"There is something very good in your paper to-day," remarked a chap last week to a daily reporter. "Eh, do you think so? what was it?" was the gratifying response. "Here it is;" and the fellow drew from his pocket a copy of the paper wrapped about a savory ham sandwich.

A trunk brought over in the Mayflower was being cut up for firewood by a Norristown man the other day when out rolled $500,000 in gold, two silk hats, a diamond inlaid clock, four pairs of new boots, a camel's-hair shawl, a set of solid silverware, a costly mirror, a suit of parlor furniture and a file of newspapers. The man who was demolishing the trunk said it formally belonged to an editor.

A TRUE HOME.

The following beautiful gem is floating around the press as a waif:

The most perfect home I ever saw was a little home into the sweet incense of whose altar fires went no costly things. A thousand dollars a year served as a living for father, mother, and three children. But the mother was the creator of the home. Her relations with her children were the most beautiful I have ever seen. Even the dull and commonplace man was lifted up and enabled to work for souls by the atmosphere which this woman created. Every inmate of her house involuntarily looked into her face for the key note of the day, and it always rang clear. From the rosebud or clover leaf, which in spite of her hard housework she always found time to put beside our plates at breakfast, down to the story she had on hand to be read in the evening, there was no interruption of her influence. She has been, and always will be, my ideal of a wife, mother and home maker. If to her quick brain, loving heart and exquisite face had been added the appliances of wealth and the enlargement of wide culture, hers would have been the ideal of home. As it was, it was the best I have ever seen.

The Constitutionalist.

THE SENATE CONVENED.

The President, on Friday, issued the following proclamation, calling an extra session of the United States Senate, to be convened at Washington on Monday, October 10th:

By the President of the United States:

A PROCLAMATION.

Whereas, Objects of interest to the United States require that the Senate should be convened at an early day to receive and act upon such communications as may be made to it on the part of the Executive. Now, therefore, I, Chester A. Arthur, President of the United States, have considered it to be my duty to issue this, my proclamation, declaring that an extraordinary occasion requires the Senate of the United States to convene for the transaction of business, at the Capitol in the City of Washington, on Monday, the tenth day of October next, at noon on that day, of which all who shall at that time be entitled to act as members of that body are hereby required to take notice.

Given under my hand and the seal of the United States, at Washington, the twenty-third day of September, in the year of our Lord One Thousand Eight Hundred and Eighty-one, and of the Independence of the United States the One Hundred and Sixth.

CHESTER A. ARTHUR.

By the President:
JAMES G. BLAINE, Secretary of State.

PRESIDENT ARTHUR.

Chester A. Arthur is now, in consequence of a mournful event, and by virtue of the Constitution, President of the United States. The people are disposed to treat him fairly, but with watchful eyes. If he wisely resolves to be a patriotic Chief Magistrate, aiming to advance the welfare of all the people, and shuns the entanglement of faction, the pathway is open for him to achieve high and lasting renown. Otherwise, his official career will prove unfortunate. We wish President Arthur well, and hope his administration of government will be solely for the public good, and in no way moulded to promote the schemes of venal and ambitious politicians. They are his worst enemies and constitute his greatest danger.

VICE PRESIDENT ARTHUR.

President Arthur has convened the Senate to meet in executive session on the tenth of October. Had Vice President Arthur been less zealous for mere party advantage he would have followed precedent and vacated the chair a day or two previous to adjournment, thereby affording the Senate an opportunity to elect a President pro-tem, in view of a possible contingency and one which has since arisen. If that proper and customary action had been taken by him the trouble and expense of an extraordinary session might have been saved. The reason why he played the part of an extreme partisan at that time was plainly visible. The resignations of Senators Conkling and Platt left the Democrats in a positive majority, and to prevent their placing Senator Bayard or some other Democrat in the chair, is why Mr. Arthur ignored the prudent example of predecessors and held on to the closing moment. The same political condition will likely exist when the Senate organizes next month, as new members cannot take their seats until there is a regular presiding officer to receive their credentials and swear them in.

THE COUNTY SENATORSHIP.

There being such a general desire manifested to know whether our esteemed fellow-citizen, Hon. Joseph W. Yates, would accept the nomination for State Senator, a position he is so well qualified to fill, we sought a personal interview with that gentleman and regret to say that his declination is positive, as the following truthfully reported conversation attests:—

"Mr. Yates, your name having been mentioned to us by so many citizens as the one most proper to be presented for the Democratic nomination as Senator from this County, we have thought best to call upon you and ask directly your views touching such proposed action."

To which Mr. Yates responded thus—"In answer to your inquiry: First—I will not accept the nomination under any consideration whatever. Second—In coming to this conclusion I cannot but feel my gratitude to those who have solicited and are anxious for me to accept this position, and my declining to be a candidate before the approaching County Convention is, especially for private reasons, and not from want of interest in serving my party or any other interest that might revert to the benefit of Union County."

"Then, Mr. Yates, we are to understand that your determination in regard to declining the nomination for Senator has been made after mature thought and that you cannot be induced to change it."

"Yes, that is my position so far as I am individually a thought of candidate before the coming Convention."

LAID AT REST.

President Garfield's Obsequies—Impressive funeral services at Washington—Mrs. Garfield's last look—The Ceremonies at Cleveland—Dust to Dust.

Less than seven months ago the representative men of the Nation assembled to participate in the glory of James A. Garfield's inauguration on the same spot where Friday last they gathered together to participate in the dead President's obsequies. Under the dome of the Capitol at Washington the deceased's record was closed in the presence of the official representatives of the American people and of those of all civilized nations.

The ceremonies were brief and simple, but the surroundings were of that imposing character that befitted the deceased's exalted station, and to which he was justly entitled by his great personal worth. Surrounding his bier were his successor in office, bowed with grief that could not be concealed; his two immediate predecessors, his chosen associates in charge of the executive departments of the Government, the Chief Justice, and several of the Associate Justices of the Supreme Court of the United States, Senators and members of the House of Representatives, Governors of several States, the chief officers of the Army and Navy, and the accredited representatives of foreign Governments.

The funeral services were appointed for 3 o'clock of Friday. At 11 o'clock that morning the Capitol was closed to the public that proper arrangements might be made for the religious ceremonies. All through the night and up to the hour of closing the people continued to pass through the Rotunda to gaze upon the closed coffin. They knew that the face of the dead President was effectually hidden from view, but this fact seemed to make no difference in the numbers of those who demanded permission to approach near to the remains of the late Chief Magistrate. A few minutes after 11 o'clock Mrs. Garfield, accompanied by her son Harry, her daughter Mollie, Col. and Mrs. Rockwell and daughter, Gen. Swaim, and Attorney-General and Mrs. MacVeagh, drove to the Senate wing of the Capitol, and, repairing to the President's room, sent for Col. Bright, who was informed that Mrs. Garfield desired to look for the last time on the face of her deceased husband. Col. Bright immediately proceeded to the Rotunda, and after informing the guard of honor of Mrs. Garfield's desire, directed that all persons should leave; that the four doors leading to the Rotunda should be closed, and that the guard should retire to the outside and remain there until Mrs. Garfield had performed her mission of love. The guard were further directed by Col. Bright to stand with their backs to the doors, and not to look into the Rotunda themselves, nor to permit others to look in, until informed that Mrs. Garfield had left. The four entrances having thus been closed and guarded, Col. Bright caused the lid of the coffin to be removed and then escorted Mrs. Garfield to the Rotunda, which she entered alone through the north door. Not a living soul was in the vast circular room except herself. She was alone with her dead, and what occurred during the 20 minutes she remained there no one can tell. When she left she took with her some of the flowers that surrounded the coffin, and was escorted back to the President's room by Col. Bright. The afflicted widow walked with a firm step and betrayed no outward emotion. Before Mrs. Garfield visited the Rotunda, one of the professional gentlemen in charge of the body removed the glass covering, powdered the face, and rearranged the hair and beard. At exactly 12 o'clock Gen. Swaim and Col. Rockwell, the two life-long friends and faithful nurses of the late President throughout his long and terrible suffering, repaired to the Rotunda and closing the lid of the coffin, locked it, and directed that it should never again be opened. This was done by direction of Mrs. Garfield. It was just 29 weeks ago at noon of Friday that Gen. Garfield was inaugurated President of the United States, and it was deemed fitting that his career should close with his coffin-lid in the Capitol, where it was substantially begun, shaped and rounded. After this sad service had been performed, Mrs. Garfield and those who accompanied her left the Capitol and did not return for the funeral services, driving directly from the residence of Attorney-General MacVeagh to the railroad station a few minutes before the time appointed for the departure of the funeral train.

At precisely 3 o'clock the beautiful harmony of the hymn, "Asleep in Jesus" swelled softly forth and filled the Rotunda. At the first note the guard of honor, 12 in number, who had during all of the subdued bustle of filling the rooms stood silent and rigid about the catafalque, quietly withdrew, leaving their comrade to receive the solemn offices of the church. Dr. Rankin of the Congregational church of Washington read a selection from the Scriptures, and was followed by the Rev. Isaac Errett and Dr. Power, who both spoke briefly but effectively. The services were closed with a prayer by Dr. Butler, for many years Chaplain of the House of Representatives. The body was then taken to the funeral train accompanied by a sad and sorrowing cortege, and the journey to Cleveland was begun.

The final obsequies at that City on Monday were attended by hundreds and thousands of people. Long before the hour announced for the beginning of the ceremonies, the public Square was blocked by the masses. Seats for honored guests were reserved and filled by the guard of honor, the Justices of the Supreme Court, the Governors of States, the members of the United States Senate and House of Representatives, the officers of the Army and Navy, members of the Army of the Cumberland, the classmates of the late President, the Mayors of cities, members of Boards of Aldermen and Councilmen, and the representatives of the press. Among those who came was ex-President Hayes, with ex-Secretary Evarts. While the distinguished persons to whom seats had been assigned were taking their places, carriages were seen coming into the public square. The first carriage was drawn by two beautiful white horses. The door was opened and a young man with a mournful face alighted and then assisted to the ground a lady clad in deep black. These were the President's widow and his son Harry. With them was one of the President's little boys. Another figure, bent with age and leaning heavily on the arms of two of the late President's most devoted friends, slowly ascended the inclined plane and took a seat on the north side, not far from the coffin. This was the President's mother, who saw him assume his high position in Washington, and whom he tenderly kissed on that day after he had taken the oath at the east front of the Capitol. Other carriages came, bearing other relatives of the dead President and the members of his Cabinet. These took their places in the pavilion. Mrs. Blaine stood for some time by the side of the catafalque shielding from the fierce sun the venerable head of the President's mother, which was lying on the coffin which held the body of her son. The aged lady wept quietly and prayed. There were many tearful eyes in the pavilion.

The cynosure of all eyes, however, was General Hancock. Rivals as the deceased and he were in life for the office of Chief Magistrate, fresh from the stress and fury of a terrible political contest, there was a chivalry in the sorrow of the defeated champion for the death of his antagonist that attracts all hearts. People remember Garfield's own words when he defeated Thurman for the Senatorship—"The flowers that bloom over the wall of party politics are the sweetest and most fragrant that bloom in the gardens of the world." Hancock was there in a representative capacity. As a soldier he showed honor to his comrade and chief; as a leader of the Democracy he put his seal of condemnation upon successful treason. No one in the famous company assembled was more noted or noteworthy than the bronze and brilliant Major General who towered above his fellows in the grandeur and splendor of a glorious manhood.

The programme carried out was as follows:

SERVICES AT PAVILION.
The Hon. S. F. Robinson, Presiding.
Singing by the Cleveland Vocal Society.
Reading of Scriptures by the Right Rev. Bishop G. T. Bedell.
Prayer by a representative of the Methodist Episcopal Conference in session in Painesville.
Singing by the Cleveland Vocal Society.
Address by the Rev. I. Errett, of Cincinnati.
Hymn read by the Rev. Jabez Hall, of the Euclid Avenue Christian Church, and sung by the Cleveland Vocal Society.
Prayer and Benediction by the Rev. Chas. S. Pomeroy.
SERVICES AT LAKE VIEW CEMETERY.
Remarks by the Rev. J. H. Jones, Chaplain of the Forty-second Regiment.
Singing by the Cleveland German Vocal Societies. President Garfield's favorite ode.
Prayer and Benediction by President B. A. Hinsdale.

Immediately upon the close of the above, Secretary Blaine, the Rev. Mr. Errett, and others went to the carriage in which were the President's wife and mother. The carriages, the people and the troops moved away and returned to the city. The noblest son of his State was laid at rest.

It is expected that the body will remain in the vault only a short time. As soon as the spot on the summit of the knoll can be prepared for its reception it will be placed there. The services attending the final interment will be strictly private.

The lot in Lake View Cemetery which will be agreed upon for the last resting place of the President, is a beautiful plot of ground lying on one of the highest points in the cemetery, and valued by the Cemetery Association at upward of $10,000.

That sum, it is said, has been several times refused for it. The cemetery is one of the most beautiful in the State, and was much admired by General Garfield in life, and he often expressed a desire that he might be buried there. It is located five miles from the heart of the city, and at the terminus of Euclid avenue.

At Mrs. Garfield's suggestion the coffin containing the body of the late President will be inclosed in an iron cage, then a cement wall will be built around this, of sufficient strength to resist all attempts to remove the body, and of dimensions large enough to form the foundation of the proposed monument. The Mayor of Cleveland has detailed a police force to be on duty continually until the final interment. It is estimated that 250,000 people were on the streets Monday, and that from 100,000 to 150,000 of those were strangers. Some of the adjacent towns were almost depopulated. A number of veterans and other representatives of the military organizations in the city called on Gens. Hancock and Sherman and a general hand-shaking occurred. No reception took place in Monumental Park as was originally proposed. The Congressional train returned to Washington at midnight.

Annie Cora Everitt—Deceased.

At the residence of her father on Front street, during the early morning of Saturday last, the mortal life of Annie Cora Everitt passed away. Out into the darkness of midnight her soul quietly departed and was welcomed into the kingdom of God by the mother and sister who had gone before and stood awaiting at the portals of Heaven the youngest born. Thus again the shadow of death fell across the threshold of a home so often afflicted. Again was borne away a bright spirit from a family circle already broken by like sorrow and tribulation. Not only was this loved one suddenly taken away, but also most unexpectedly—at a moment when every outward sign seemed to evidence the return of renewed strength, and every symptom impelled expectation of a long life of happiness and health. But, as we are assured that the developements that could not be prevented resulting from the incurable disease, would have induced an existence of intense pain and terrible suffering with certain death to follow as the only relief, we must feel mingled with our sorrow a sentiment of gladness that the deceased has been spared by God's mercy, many days and weeks of violent illness.

The numbers who gathered at the funeral services on Tuesday, witnessed the enviable place in the memory of friends and acquaintances attained by the deceased as a result of her universal kindness of heart, sweetness of disposition and loveliness of character; while the visible signs of sadness on every face, told of the sincere sympathy felt for the family in its trouble, and the general recognition of how truly good and pure a life had closed its course upon this earth.

Plainfield's Mourning.

The observance of Monday last in Plainfield, as a day of humiliation and prayer over the Nation's calamity, was probably the most general and complete demonstration of any kind the city has ever witnessed. From early morning until night the streets presented a most Sabbath-like aspect, and the sounds of business and pleasure were hushed. As a rule the residences, as well as stores and public buildings, were draped in the habiliments of woe. The only signs of life were the tolling of the bells, firing of cannon and the flocking of crowds into the Crescent avenue and First Baptist churches, where were held Union memorial services in the morning. In addition, the Trinity Reformed church was opened in the afternoon at about the hour of the obsequies in Cleveland, and at these three houses of worship the public gathered in large numbers. The ministers of the city conducted the services and delivered stirring addresses and offered inspired prayers. The city officers, political clubs, fire department members and other organizations attended in respective bodies, and were apportioned seats together. The singing of the Lincoln Club at one of the meetings, was especially appropriate and impressive.

Fair Notes.

The Goodwill Band, of New Brunswick furnished most excellent music during the Fair.

As soon as a race was completed, the winner received his money in gold at the Judges' stand.

Sheriff Campbell of Middlesex was one of the many attendants at the Fair on Wednesday.

Mr. John I. Holly was the recipient of a fine testimonial in recognition of his fine display of blooded cattle. The document will be found in another column.

The members of Goodwill Band had their pictures "took" by an artist on the grounds last Tuesday. The ladies all say that the tenor, "Pretty Billy," was the handsomest one of the group.

The correctness and neatness of the programmes for each days use at the Fair must be accredited to the office of Bro. Babcock, of the Fredonian, at New Brunswick, where they were printed.

Among the 1st premiums awarded at the Fair, was the well deserved one to Mr. Nate Robins, of Metuchen, for his two year-old colt, "Membrino Jefferson"—sired by Membrino Pilot, dam by Clara Jefferson, own sister to John S. Clark.

Zephyr Picnic.

We are glad to be able to record the fact that the Second Annual Picnic of Zephyr H. & L. Co. was as successful as it deserved to be. The object desired was to raise a fund to be used in honoring the arrival of the "new truck" with a parade and collation. A profit sufficient to carry out the most elaborate ceremonies resulted from the affair of Thursday evening of last week in Wooden's Grove, and in consequence the coming event is sure to be a memorable one of its kind. The Good Will Band of New Brunswick was engaged for the occasion just past, and its fine music as heard on our streets during the forenoon, attracted a large gathering to the picnic grounds. It is estimated that about 800 tickets were sold, and the crowd that enjoyed the dancing and other attractions of the evening, indisputably bore out such a statement. Much of the credit is due to the committee that labored so satisfactorily for the good of others. It included Messrs. Sam'l J. Robinson, A. Wallace, J. Acor, J. Shepherd, J. Armstrong, C. Davis, F. Vreeland, C. H. Smith, J. Farley and J. Kiely.

Somerset Courts.

"Chicago Jack" was, on Wednesday last, sentenced to 10 years in State Prison for the burglary at Millington that Capt. Dodd was so successful in fastening upon him. He also received one year for attempting to break jail. The two penalties to run concurrent.

The following (colored) who plead guilty to the charge of perjury extended against them for false swearing in the case of the assault upon Mr. George C. Owens at Liberty Corners by John H. Peterson, on the 12th of last March, were sentenced as recorded. Matilda Peterson, 5 years; Sarah Miller, 3 years; Agnes Jackson, 2 years, and "Billie" Stevens, 1 year.

"Duck" Wilson, for stealing hides from the establishment of Mr. George Pound, was sent up for one year.

John B. Holmes Again.

On Tuesday morning last, as the well-known John B. Holmes, of Somerset county, was about to take a train from Fanwood station to New York, he was arrested by Constable Wm. Pangborn, on a capias warrant issued by Judge Magie. Holmes was subsequently turned over to the tender care of Constable P. Weaver, who took his prisoner to Somerville. Here Holmes telegraphed to Mr. Kelsey, of North Plainfield, asking him to go bail, which he did and J. B. H. was again let loose upon the community, until such time as he may be compelled to appear before the Somerset Courts to answer the charge preferred against him.

The Great Murray Show.

Bills intensely illuminated with pictures of lions, elephants and camels, relieved by clowns in comical costume, and seraphs indulging in somersaults, blaze upon our fences and placard the large bill-boards, announcing to our community that on Tuesday next Murray's Great Railroad Show, Circus, Menagerie and Museum will give two exhibitions in this city—afternoon and evening—Tuesday Oct. 4th. From what we have seen published in regard to this show we feel satisfied that it is a most attractive and in all respects a praiseworthy exhibition. The Menagerie comprises a collection of all kinds of animals, some of which are specimens of beasts and birds which will delight the naturalist, and be a study worthy of any mind. The circus department, too, is very complete, and embraces many new and novel features never before presented here. The great aim of Mr. Murray is originality and excellence. And with this view he has congregated an assemblage of artists from the most celebrated schools of the equestrian and gymnastic art, both in Europe and America, his arenic performers, equestrians, gymnasts and acrobats without doubt the best in this country now, and hence the amusement-loving portion of our citizens will have an opportunity of witnessing a very superior entertainment. Grimaldi Miaco, the clown, is famous for his superiority in his line, and the immense audiences everywhere attending the performances of the concern are charmed with his wit and excited roars of laughter by his burlesques and oddities. The entire performance will be characterized by originality and novelty, and invested with a high degree of interest by feats of intrepidity and acts of skill and grace entirely new to the people of this section. For details of the combined exhibitions the readers' attention is called to the advertisement in another column of this paper. Be sure to be in town early enough to see the grand street procession, which will be very fine.

Mr. Murray is not a stranger to our people. A first-class performer himself he first appeared with Dan Rice in Sept., 1859. He then was both a rider and gymnast, and with his partner, George Holland, appeared in the ring in classic and striking groupings, poses and tableaux. Later on he entered the managerial field, and brought out his own shows from time to time, under various titles, first as Stone, Rosston & Murray, then Stone & Murray, and now at last he comes as sole proprietor of one of the finest exhibitions on the road. Having had years of experience in tented amusement enterprises Mr. Murray is enable to know and thoroughly understand the wants and requirements of the people; and, in order to successfully cater for show-goers, it becomes necessary to place before them novelties that are new, pleasing and attractive, and at the same time interesting and instructive, and his long experience as a general performer, proprietor and manager certainly enables him best of all in the business to secure and bring before the public all that is new, novel and artistic. Of late years we have been surfeited with exhibitions of all sorts, some possessing merit of certain kinds, while others, although announcing immense attraction, have invaribly failed in producing them, and the consequence is that our people, having been made the dupes of deception so often, have come to look with caution upon every exhibition advertised for the place, and it is owing to this, knowing of its merits, that we recommend Murray's Show as one of superior excellence throughout. The advertisement in another column gives, of course, but feeble idea of the excellencies of the exhibition, but to all who desire to enjoy a rare treat we would say, don't fail to attend.

Honorary Vice Presidents—Fred. Volckman, N. Y. City; Wm. B. Rankin, Jersey City; Wm. H. Sterling, Plainfield, N. J.; James R. English, Elizabeth, N. J.

Counsel—Wm. B. Maxson, Plainfield, N. J.

The Secretary's address is Plainfield, N. J.

The State Fair.

The attendance at the State Fair, Waverly, last week, was large, although a spirit of sadness seemed to prevail consequent upon the sad event of the President's death. The display of farm products and fancy articles was very large and fine. The trotting was also excellent. Under the management of the present efficient officials of the State Fair, it has as usual, proven a grand success. Mr. Samuel Manning, the Treasurer, has been one of the most energetic workers for the success attending the Fair.

Personalia.

Ex-Assemblyman Captain Gill of Elizabeth, visited the Fair on Thursday.

A. Berry, Esq., attended the funeral of President Garfield at Cleveland, on Monday last.

John H. Staats, Esq., lies seriously ill at the home of his father, the "Rock House."

Miss Gaston, the new soprano who has been recently added to the Grace church choir, is giving the greatest satisfaction as a vocalist.

Among the County officials present on Thursday were Collector F. Sheridan, Surrogate James Gerber, Clerk James Vosseller, Dr. Terrill and Director Martine.

Editor Babcock, Jr., of the New Brunswick Fredonian, has been looking after the proper representation of that journal at the Fair during the past week, with his usual ability.

Mr. John Wilson, who has charge of the stock farm of John Taylor Johnston in North Plainfield, was awarded a premium at the State Fair, on his short-horn bull "Dinwiddie."

Mr. George Wotherspoon is spending a few days on Long Island shores. His immediate family intend renting their residence on East Front street, and will pass the Winter in New York city.

We had almost forgotten it, but—Nate Robins, Jr., of Metuchen, was recently christened at New Brunswick. "Nate" Sr., is very happy over his latest possession, and well he may be. May the "Jr" grow up to be as good a man as his "pap."

Mr. David Lennox, of Reynold's Pharmacy, is absent from his accustomed haunts, seeking at Orange, New Brunswick and other seaside resorts the rest demanded after a summer of arduous labor at impelling the fizzling mineral water into the squirting syphon.

NORTH PLAINFIELD PARAGRAPHS

Stephen O. Horton, Esq., has been appointed Director by the Board of Directors of the Somerset County Agricultural Society, in place of Adam Craig, deceased, and Adrian Olcott, Esq., in place of Judge Hoagland, deceased.

As we will be ordered by the township authorities to publish in our next issue the names of the delinquent tax-payers of North Plainfield, we take this opportunity of giving such a word of warning. They still have a chance to settle their indebtedness.

In addition to the license we reported last week as having been granted Mr. Geo. Hartfelder by the Somerset County Court, one has been given Mr. Merwin Hughson who has recently leased the Somerset House. The application of Mr. Charles Greader was refused. The experience of Mr. Hughson guarantees that everything for the comfort of his patrons will be supplied, and his reputation is sufficient assurance that good order will always prevail upon his premises.

THE Emma Abbott Opera Company will commence a two weeks engagement at the Grand Opera House, Eighth ave. and 23d street, on Monday evening Oct. 3d. The repertoire of the Company for the first week will be: "Fra Diavolo" on Monday, and Wednesday, "Martha"; on Tuesday, "Olivette" Wednesday matinee and Thursday night, "Lucia"; on Friday, "Maritana" at Saturday matinee, and "The Bohemian Girl" on Saturday evening. The Company this season is stronger than usual and includes besides Miss Abbott, Miss Julie Rosewald, Miss Pauline Maurel, William Castle, Valentine Fabrini, Alonzo Stoddard, George Conly, and an increased Orchestra and Chorus under the direction of Sig. Tomasi. The costumes are new and many fresh scenes have been painted by eminent artists. One of the features in the second week's programme will be the first appearance in New York of Miss Abbott as "Cecilia's Love," the new version of Verdi's "La Traviata." Especial attention will be paid to the Wednesday and Saturday Matinee performances at popular prices. They will conclude early each day for the accommodation of out of town patrons.

THE Burlington County Fair comes Oct. 11, 12, 13 and 14th. It promises to be of unusual excellence this year.

AN open meeting of Fanwood Lyceum will be held in the lecture room of the Baptist church at Scotch Plains, on the 6th of October, at 8 p. m. The subject for debate will be "Whatever is, is right." Any attractions an old-time debating society may suggest, will be offered to the public.

CONSIDERABLE attention was attracted to a crowd of urchins parading through the streets on Monday last, with one of their number surrounded and bound, with a placard on his back, on which was written "Guiteau." It represented the wretch by that name being escorted to the gallows he so well deserves.

The annual meeting of the Relief Association will be held in the parlors of the Crescent Avenue Church, Thursday, Oct. 6th, at 3 o'clock P. M. Reports will be read, and an election of officers will be held. A full attendance is earnestly requested.

MRS. H. D. BURLINGHAM,
Secretary.

WE last week called for the starting of a subscription list for defraying the expense of lighting the streets of the city. In consequence, we heartily endorse the call that has been made for a meeting of citizens to be held at Association Hall on Saturday evening to make arrangements towards the project we recommended.

THE 12th Annual Fair of the Somerset County Agricultural Society will be held on their grounds in Somerville, on Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday, Oct. 4th, 5th and 6th. A grand display of Horses, Cattle, Sheep, Swine, Poultry, Farm Products, Machinery, Ladies' Work of all descriptions, &c. For list of premiums, or further information, apply to Wm. S. Potter, Secretary, at Somerville, N. J.

WM. Jordan, alias "Booty," was on Friday night last arrested by Capt. Dodd, assisted by officer Randolph, for assaulting a woman he was living with, in a small house along Green Brook, at Scotch Plains. Jordan attempted to run when Dodd sought to arrest him, but a shot in his direction from the officer's pistol soon brought him to terms. The woman was also arrested by Randolph. She immediately made a complaint against Jordan for beating her before Justice Wadsworth. That official committed Jordan to the County Jail to await the action of the Grand Jury.

THE public bridge across the New Market Pond, at the junction of Seventh street, is in such a dilapidated and dangerous condition that the Middlesex County authorities determined to repair it while the waters of the pond were out a week or so since to allow of repairs to the flood gates of Otto's Grist mill. They decided to fill up with earth the northeastern span of the bridge, but were stopped in their work by an injunction served upon them by Mr. Otto, who claims that the pond would gradually fill up with sediment by contracting the channel, and would therefore interfere with his mill privileges. The work has therefore been suspended and travel is impossible over the structure.

THE memorial service at St. Mary's R. C. church on Monday morning, was truly appropriate to the occasion and was largely attended. The interior of the church was singularly solemn and impressive; a sense of desolation seemed to pervade the sacred edifice. The mourning decorations of the high altar, with its pendant of the finest black cloth, edged with white satin, and in the centre a cross of satin standing out distinctly on the sombre material, concealed the bright colors that in ordinary times gleam and glitter there. The gold candelabras were encased in black merino. No graceful vases or flowers—all was draped in mourning. The sombre appearance of the side altars and organ loft was in unison. The tabernacle was also draped with a veil of black merino, likewise the gothic shrine and sanctuary lamp. The services concluded with the Litany of the Saints and the prayers for the President, for the Federal and State officers and the country at large.

THIRD ANNUAL.

The Union and Middlesex Counties' Mutual Agricultural Ass'ns Exhibition.

Scenes at the Grounds.

THE DISPLAYS IN THE DEPARTMENTS.

The Speed Contests.

Summaries of the Trots.

The day set aside by proclamation and the public's sympathy as a time of universal mourning, being the same as that upon which it is customary to receive entries of exhibits for the Union and Middlesex Counties' Fair, caused a slight set-back on the opening day of that event. But few articles were in consequence sent in on Monday, but Tuesday morning witnessed the usual influx of animal, natural and artificial products of the soil, machinery and human hands. The entree clerks in the different departments were kept unusually busy receiving and classifying the various articles entered, but the efficiency of the gentlemen in charge prevented the pigs being penned in with the preserved cherries or the cows pastured among the embroidered pillow-shams. It is possible that the quantity of exhibits this year may fall short of the previous lists, but the quality is fully up to the standard. It has been the custom of some to enter at former Fairs a loaf of bread, a tumbler of some jelly or an equally unimportant production, and thereby secure free of cost the three admission tickets given the exhibitor of each article. One impecunious citizen was seen to cut from a field adjoining the Fair grounds a bunch of lengthy corn-stalks, which was subsequently entered as a specimen of unusual growth, and the "exhibitor" with his wife and child therewith passed into the exhibition. Others would enter a large number of articles for exhibit, receive their tickets and dispose of them advantageously, thus making quite a sum from the sale thereof, and the money received for premiums. This rule has been changed and although each exhibitor is still guaranteed a free admission to the grounds during the Fair, the indiscriminate issue of tickets, that may be transferred or sold, has been curtailed to the great benefit of the Association's bank account.

The means of transportation from Plainfield were undoubtedly satisfactory. From the depot on North avenue large and comfortable stages left every few minutes, and the fare to and from the grounds was kept at the uniform rate of ten cents. The weather, as is usual upon like occasions, was of the most intense warmth, and in spite of a lavish service from sprinkling carts and a slight shower on Tuesday, the dust was something terrible. However these unpleasant features were overlooked by the large crowds that daily entered the gates, attracted by the handsome and interesting display and the fine contests of speed.

The roads leading to the scene of the exhibition were a sight on Wednesday afternoon. A continuous line of stages, carriages and every kind of vehicle, drawn by horses, mules and hat-racks, wended their way towards the Fair. From this city the travel was immense, although probably not exceedingly lucrative to the conveyances. The Plainfield stage drivers, with their usual enterprise and a desire to break down all competition, placed the fare at five cents and in many instances carried passengers for nothing to prevent any patronage being reaped by their rivals. The view presented upon entering the gates, was no different from that experienced at other county shows of similar character. Before the pens containing the live stock—which were nearest the entrance—could be reached, you were called upon by sheet-iron lunged proprietors of divers amusements to try three shots with a rifle, take a ride on the merry-go-round, have your picture taken, try your luck on the chuck-board and a dozen other alluring devices for emptying your pocket-book. Tents and booths containing all sorts of wonders were on every side; and clam-chowder for the epicure, beer and sausages for the boys and "red-hot taffy" for the weaker sex could be purchased in unlimited quantity. The attendance on Wednesday afternoon numbered nearly 8,000, while on Thursday fully 12,000 persons and 1,000 carriages entered the gates.

The managers of the affair were all efficient and courteous gentlemen, while the judges were capable and their awards universally satisfactory. Sect'y. James S. Vosseller, as usual, had the principal care of the entire exhibition on his hands, and, as usual, acquitted himself nobly of the many arduous duties he assumed. President John I. Holly was everywhere, directing affairs for the good of all and with the assistance of Vice President Nathan Robins keeping a sharp lookout after the interests of the Association. Treasurer E. C. Pearson at his post, attended to the financial arrangements; while Major E. A. Gross effectually cared for the rational desires of the officers and their guests' appetites. As Superintendent and Marshall, Mr. H. Dayt. Crowell covered himself with additional glory, and the success of the trotting contests was greatly due to his commendable track management. The police regulators were all that could be desired, and the guardians of the peace appointed kept the best of order among the mixed classes that crowd to such places for questionable purposes.

The display of thoroughbred cattle was the finest the association has ever shown. Specimens from President Holly's wonderful herd, were on exhibition but did not compete. A reference to the list of premiums awarded—which we publish elsewhere—will give a complete idea of the valuable animals entered, as well as the exhibits in other departments. Owing to the late arrival of entries on Tuesday, the judges in the different divisions did not complete their labors until Wednesday afternoon. The consequent extra efforts on the part of our reporters necessary to make out the list of awards in time for this issue, will no doubt be appreciated by our readers, and claim forgiveness should the slightest error occur. The sheep, swine and poultry classes were well filled, and many handsome specimens of fowls attracted especial interest and admiration. The fancy breeds of pigeons were unusually numerous and received much attention. The grain, vegetable and fruit department, beneath the grand stand, included samples of the crops of the principal farmers and gardeners of the two counties, and also apples, pears and grapes from the orchards and arbors of private growers. Mr. John Taylor Johnston had on exhibition some bunches of the latter fruit from his grapery, weighing a pound and over to the bunch. Farming utensils and agricultural implements were not largely exhibited, in consequence of the lack of a manufacture of such in this section of the State. Mr. L. M. French of this city, displayed a surrey wagon and phaeton from his carriage factory that eclipsed in the way of style, durability and proportion everything else in competition. The exhibition in the Home Department building was possibly not so extensive as in former years, but the beauty of the goods fully equalled anything of the kind we have inspected. Upon each side of the entrance were magnificent displays of hot-house and garden plants, shrubs and flowers. Passing between these the attention of the visitor was claimed by the case of watches and their movements, from the establishment of Mr. Auguste Saltzman of Switzerland and New York. Here were to be seen all styles of cases from the richly carved gold to the beautifully enameled; and all sizes from the 11 line as small as a twenty-five cent piece, to the 26 line weighing over a pound. Elsewhere were the displays of Mr. A. Vanderbeek, whose exhibition of fishing tackle and amunition was admirable; Messrs. Edsall & Price, whose large assortment of lace, hosiery and fancy articles called forth the commendation of the ladies; while Pope Bros. exhibited choice carpets.

THE TROTTING.

In the first day's racing, on Tuesday, much interest was centered, although out of a large number of well-known trotters entered but a few came to the wire for a start. The first purse was of $100 for gentlemen's roadsters, and the second was of $250 of the 2:30 class. Messrs. A. D. Coykendal, J. V. N. Willis and E. A. Edwards were the judges for the day, and gave entire satisfaction. The timer was Mr. J. C. Zimmerman.

SUMMARY.

TUESDAY, SEPTEMBER 27, 1881—Purse of $100 for gentlemen's roadsters owned in the Counties of Union and Middlesex and in the Township of North Plainfield since August, 1st 1881, that have not beaten 2:40. Time—2:44¼, 2:45, 2:43¼, 2:46¼, 2:41.
Quarter—40½, 40, 40, 41¼, 40¾.
Half—1:20¼, 1:22¼, 1:22, 1:24¾, 1:20¾.

The first heat in this race was as interesting a feature of the day's trotting as could have been desired. Carbolic and Silver Star had decidedly the worst of the start, and Adaline R. and Augustus easily took the pole at the quarter and held it for the half, Windbeam and Harvey five lengths behind at the three quarters; Carbolic and Silver Star came up rapidly, collared the leaders and the two teams finished in a dead heat. Time, 2:44¼. It was the undoubted opinion of those present that the Newark team had endeavored to win a running race, and were only prevented from so doing by the Judges.

On the second heat of the team race Carbolic and Silver Star had decidedly the disadvantage at the start, but managed to catch the leaders at the half, both teams trotting level. The finish was close and exciting, Carbolic breaking in the last 300 yards, but managed to cross the score a winner by a neck, in 2:45.

Third heat a good start; Carbolic and mate, however, being passed at the turn by both teams. They gained rapidly, however, and only lost the heat by breaking over the score, Adaline R. and Augustus winning in 2:43¼.

Fourth heat, start very level, Carbolic and Silver Star not quite up to the pole team, who took the lead from the start and held it by a length at the quarter and about the same distance at half, Windbeam and Harvey fully four lengths behind. After passing half, Carbolic and mate were on the wheel of the leaders, who broke and ran for lead in a manner rather discreditable. A close finish followed, Carbolic and Silver Star winning. Time, 2:46¼.

Fifth heat, an even start. Silver Star broke on the turn and failed to recover quickly, or at least before Adaline R. and Augustus had a clean lead of two lengths at the quarter. Passing the half Carbolic and Silver Star caught the leaders, but both teams broke on the turn. The leaders found the ground quickest and had a length the best at the three quarters, but could not hold it, and were passed by Carbolic and Silver Star in the home stretch, winning the heat and race in the excellent time of 2:41.

2:35 class (open to all). Purse $200. 1st, $100; 2d, $60; 3d, 40.

The race throughout was very exciting—Charley A. and Flora Cleveland making a close fight for heats, the latter finally winning the race and and fifth heat.

Time—Quarter.	Half.	Mile.
40	1:20¾	2:40¾
40	1:19¾	2:38
39	1:18¾	2:40¾
39¾	1:19¾	2:39
40	1:19¾	2:42

After the finish of the heat, 2:35 class, "Hopeful," was brought on the track by his driver, the Veteran Dan Mace, and introduced to those present. Notice being given that this celebrated animal would trot against time on Thursday at 2:30.

THURSDAY, SEPT. 29TH.

TRIAL OF SPEED BY "HOPEFUL."

1st Trial—After repeated and tiresome scoring, Hopeful's driver took the word, and although breaking on the back-stretch in the first half, trotted the mile out in the good time of 2:28½.

2d Trial—At the second score he took the word and trotted level for the first half, breaking, however, on the turn at the three quarter, but catching quickly finished the mile in 2:27½.

3d Trial—Taking the word at the first score trotted level the full mile in 2:27¼.

"Hopeful" will make a further attempt to beat the record to-day, Friday. A special attraction will be the team trot at 1:30 p. m., which promises from the entries, to prove fully as interesting as Wednesday's race.

DEPARTMENT B.—No. II.

REPORT ON THOROUGHBRED CATTLE.

In awarding the prizes, the Judges on thoroughbred cattle consider it their duty to draw special attention to the excellent quality of the Jersey cattle shown at our Fair. We consider it our duty likewise to call attention to the extended herd of Jersey cattle shown by our President, John I. Holly, who entered for display only and particularly to the imported cows—

Dandelion — Queen of the Farm
Lady Maid — Holly [illegible]

which certainly would have been awarded the prizes in their different classes, had they competed. We close our report, making special mention of the following animals, bred and owned by Mr. John I. Holly, which were on exhibition—the Alpion bull "Waldie," son of "Polonius," and the following, sired by the great "Alpheas Sister" bull "Uproar," viz: Bulls "Turmoil," "Uproar," 2d and 4th, and heifers "First Leaf" and "Belle Esperance" by the same sire, which with the heifers "Magdala-Madge," sired by a son of "Favorite of the Stone," added much to the exhibit of young stock shown.

John V. N. Willis,
W. F. Williams,
Otto Arens.

Water on the Somerset Co. Fair Grounds.

There are eight wells on the inside of the enclosure, three of which are bored wells over 80 feet deep; they have been severely tested, having had wind-wheels attached to the pumps and kept going constantly and have never yet failed to supply water. The Board expects unless there is a great waste of water that there will be an ample supply for all the wants, and the track, grounds &c., will be lavishly sprinkled.

WESTFIELD WISPS.

Westfield's gone to the Fair.

Who is the sweet singer of Broad St.?

The Baptist Sunday School 14th Anniversary Sunday last proved a very interesting occasion.

Quite a number of Westfield exhibits are entered at the Union and Middlesex Counties' Fair.

Mr. Joseph Perry has purchased the property he now occupies on Broad St., from its former owner.

Mr. Arthur Clark has recovered from his late illness, and resumed his position as assistant at R. Miller & Sons.

The alterations and repairs at "Bayard's" Drug Store, are under charge of J. Urmston. A fact insuring good work.

The Town Committee met last night but owing to Fair items we postpone giving full report of proceedings until our next issue.

The proposed new house on Quimby street being built under the direction of Mr. Eli. Hart, has already reached noticeable proportions.

With few exceptions, both business places and private residences in our township have been appropriately draped since our late President's death.

Wm. H. Darby, an old resident, died on Tuesday last.

Our friend Mr. John M. Crane left on Saturday last on a business trip to Chicago and St. Paul. We miss you! Come back to (not your darling) Westfield.

Mr. Joseph Moffett has been devoting his time during the past week to superintending the repairs to the bridge at the junction of Prospect street and North avenue, under which flows the magnificent Westfield river.

A necktie and fruit entertainment will be given by the ladies of the A. M. E. Zion Mission in the Lyceum building, on Thursday evening next at 7:30. All should attend, as the proceeds are devoted to the church and pastor.

The lost to our citizens in the sale of Hambletonian Major to parties not residents, is in a measure compensated for by the purchase of that celebrated trotter "Gray Danger," by Mr. B. Roske, thus securing the fastest trotter of the county to our township.

What in the future will be known as Wittke's building, is now owing to the active operations of Messrs. Sparkman & Seagur, a vacant spot. Building operations will immediately follow, and a three-story store will hardly accommodate our N. D. R. E. A. I. A. T. G. D., &c.

Mr. Victor H. Webb, a resident of Monmouth, Illinois, and brother of our local, has been visiting Westfield during the past week, after an absence of six years. He was warmly welcomed both by his relatives and many friends whose only regret was that his stay with them was so short.

A buggy ride is generally considered a pleasure, but John Urmston found it decidedly an unpleasant matter on Monday last. After attaching his horse to a buggy, the property of George Gray, he managed by means unknown, to upset the same in front of Dr. Harrison's, to the decided detriment of the vehicle. Sorry, Johnny.

Everybody knows "Applejack," otherwise John Johnson. Being out of work, and dependent upon his wife for support, decided on Sunday last that this terrestrial sphere was decidedly an uncomfortable one, and after the departure of his wife to her daily work (necessary) for the support of her children, concluded to end his existence. Result: stove kicked over, crockery broken, clothing distributed in dirt, as well as declination on his part to permit wife and children to enter the house. Finale: charge of disorderly conduct; case tried before Squire Jacques, and Mr. John, otherwise "Applejack" Johnson committed to Elizabeth jail for 10 days. An opportunity for reflection is thereby obtained.

Our citizens in numbers sufficient to crowd the seating facilities of M. E. church, assembled at the Union Memorial service in memory or our late President on Monday last. The principal address was made by Rev. Mr. Brouson of the Baptist church, and was not only very able but exceedingly satisfactory to his hearers. Revs. Hoagland and Neill assisted in the services. The day was observed more particularly as a day of mourning than any other that Westfield has seen. Of course the private dwellings as well as business places were appropriately decorated. It seemed as if all, without regard to party or creed, regarded the loss as a personal one. A noticeable matter was the mourning decoration of horses, carriages and whips. No more solemn day was ever experienced by our citizens.

In Memoriam.

Albert Bridges is no more!

"Like one who wraps the drapery of his couch
About him, and lies down to pleasant dreams."

So passed away Mr. Bridges, of Westfield, on Thursday morning last, at 8:30 o'clock, in the 70th year of his age.

Few men make life more beautiful than he whose death we here record, for of none did he speak unkindly. Everywhere was seen the all animating spirit of Christian living, and as the story of his death is sad, deep in sorrow will be hearts of an innumerable host of friends who speak only with love and respect of him who so well knew how to make happy the lives of those with whom he became associated.

Although a prisoner to disease but of a few days, yet the beginning, which was in early summer, by pneumonia, impressed a few who knew him best and saw him often, that it was the beginning of the end—the breaking up of a strong constitution—and so continued until hemorrhage of the lungs ended his days suddenly and almost unexpectedly.

Mr. Bridges was born in Newton, Mass., and for many years resided in Cambridge, where, of the firm of Davenport & Bridges, he was largely engaged in the building of railroad cars, till in 1851, when he came to New York city and was the Pioneer in the Railroad Supply business, in which he continued with great prosperity till the day of his death, and by his sterling integrity became one of the best known and most reliable in the railroad circles of our country. For probity of character and justice in business relations, few of the present day stand as his equal—certainly none his superior—and as his business record is now to be closed, yet, in the hearts of all will ever remain fresh the memories of his kindly acts, which were the ruling impulses of his heart, for not only to those on the more prosperous plane of life, but much more to the lowly, and especially his employees was his every effort to help by encouragement and good advice.

In his social relations and his home, he gave his life's service for the happiness and comfort of others, and by his cultured taste, ready hospitality and genial presence, endeared himself to all. Though he leaves a sorrowing home circle, yet it will be radiant with happy memories of the husband, father and friend.

His last hours were the fitting close for such a life, as surrounded by his family, quietly he passed away at the allotted age—three score and ten.

A LITTLE OF EVERYTHING.

IT IS A FOOLISH MISTAKE to confound a remedy of merit with quack medicines. We have used Parker's Ginger Tonic with the happiest results for Dyspepsia and Debility, and know it to be a sterling health restorative.—Times.

"WHO GRASPS MUCH HOLDS LITTLE." The proprietors of Ely's Cream Balm do not claim it to be a cure-all, but a sure remedy for Catarrh and Catarrhal Deafness, Colds in the head and Hay Fever.

Cream Balm effectually cleanses the nasal passages of catarrhal virus, causing healthy secretions, allays inflammation and irritation, protects the membranal linings of the head from additional colds, completely heals the sores and restores the sense of taste and smell. Beneficial results are realized by a few applications. A thorough treatment as directed will cure catarrh. The Balm is easy to use and agreeable. Sold by druggists at 50 cents. On receipt of 50 cents will mail a package. Send for circular with full information.

THE DOCTORS DISAGREE

as to the best methods and remedies, for the cure of constipation and disordered liver and kidneys. But those that have used Kidney-Wort, agree that it is by far the best medicine known. Its action is prompt, thorough and lasting. Don't take pills and other mercurials that poison the system, but by using Kidney-Wort restore the natural action of all the organs.—New Covenant.

NEARLY ALL THE ILLS THAT AFFLICT US can be prevented and cured by keeping the stomach, liver and kidneys in perfect working order. There is no medicine known that will do this as surely as Parker's Ginger Tonic. See adv.

BRACE UP.

There is serious meaning in this expression. That weary step, languid eye and general feeling of lassitude, come from "malaria." Be assured, a serious and perhaps fatal disease is close in its wake. The system wants cleansing of impurities; the sluggish blood needs to be sent in swift and pure currents through the veins. Dr. Kennedy's "Favorite Remedy" will do this; it will give new vigor to the body, brightness to the eye, a glow to the countenance and elasticity to the step. One Dollar a bottle. Every druggist has it. Dr. David Kennedy, Proprietor, Rondout, N. Y.

SHILOH'S CONSUMPTION CURE.

This is beyond question the most successful Cough Medicine we have ever sold, a few doses invariably cure the worst cases of Cough, Croup and Bronchitis, while its wonderful success in the cure of Consumption is without a parallel in the history of medicine. Since its first discovery it has been sold on a guarantee, a test which no other medicine can stand. If you have a Cough we earnestly ask you to try it. Price 10 cts., 50 cts. and $1. If your Lungs are sore, Chest or Back lame, use Shiloh's Porous Plaster. Price 25 cts. Sold by R. M. Stelle. 4ag6m

ANSWER THIS QUESTION.

Why do so many people we see around us, seem to prefer to suffer and be made miserable by Indigestion, Constipation, Dizziness, Loss of Appetite, Coming up of the Food, Yellow Skin, When for 75 cts. we will sell them Shiloh's Vitalizer, guaranteed to cure them. Sold by R. M. Stelle.

SHILOH'S CATARRH REMEDY, a marvelous cure for Catarrh, Diptheria, Canker Mouth and Headache. With each bottle there is an ingenious nasal injector for the more successful treatment of these complaints without extra charge. Price 50 cts. Sold by R. M. Stelle.

On Saturday last Mr. Snowden Moore of Trenton, caught a very large black bass in the Delaware river near that city. It weighed five pounds and measured twenty inches in length.

"WAIT A LITTLE LONGER."

So we are told sometimes. Things will come out all right, people say, if we will wait a while. That don't do with disease. The longer you wait the worse it is. It's no use to plant corn in November. Do you "feel a little bad?" Strike the trouble right away. Dr. David Kennedy's "Favorite Remedy" is what you want. It will at once relieve the bowels, stimulate the liver and cool the skin. Take One Dollar in your hand and stop at your druggists, or write to the Doctor at Rondout, N. Y.

Carter's Little Liver Pills are free from all crude and irritating matter. Concentrated medicine only; very small; very easy to take; no pain; no griping; no purging.

HENRY'S CARBOLIC SALVE.

The BEST SALVE in the world for Cuts, Bruises, Sores, Ulcers, Salt Rheum, Tetter, Chapped Hands, Chilblains, Corns and all kinds of Skin Eruptions, Freckles and Pimples. The salve is guaranteed to give perfect satisfaction in every case or money refunded. Be sure you get HENRY'S CARBOLIC SALVE, as all others are but imitations and counterfeits. Price 25 cents.

Dr. Green's Oxygenated Bitters is the oldest and best remedy, for Dyspepsia, Biliousness, Malaria, Indigestion, all disorders of the stomach, and all diseases indicating an impure condition of the Blood, Kidneys, Liver, Skin, etc.

DURNO'S CATARRH SNUFF cures Catarrh and all affections of the mucous membrane.

DR. MOTT'S LIVER PILLS are the best Cathartic Regulators.

LIQUID OR DRY.

Some people prefer to purchase medicines in the dry state so that they can see for themselves that they are purely vegetable. Others have not the time or desire to prepare the medicine, and wish it already to use.

To accommodate each class the proprietors of Kidney-Wort now offer that well-known remedy in both Liquid and dry forms.

Sold by druggists everywhere.—Truth.

THE PIANO IN THE MINING CAMP.

It was Christmas Eve in a California mining town in 1858, and Goskin, according to his custom, had decorated his gambling house with sprigs of mountain cedar, and a shrub whose crimson berries did not seem a bad imitation of English holly. The piano was covered with evergreens, and all that was wanting to completely fill the cup of Goskin's contentment, was a man to play that piano.

'Christmas night, and no piano pounder,' he said. 'This is a very nice country for a Christian to live in.'

Getting a piece of paper he scrawled the words:

$100 Reward
To a compitant Pianer Player.

This he stuck up on the music rack, and, though the inscription glared at the frequenters of the room until midnight, it failed to draw any musician from the shell.

So the merry-making went on; the hilarity grew apace. Men danced and sang to the music of the squeaky fiddle and worn-out guitar, as the jolly crowd within tried to drown the howling of the storm without. Suddenly they became aware of the presence of a white-haired man crouching near the fire-place. His garments, such as were left, were wet with the melting snow, and he had a half-starved, half-crazed expression. He held his thin, trembling hands toward the fire, and the light of the blazing wood made them almost transparent.

He looked about him once in a while, as if in search of something, and his presence cast such a chill over the place that gradually the sound of revelry was hushed, and it seemed that this waif of the storm had brought in with it all the gloom and coldness of the warring elements. Goskin, mixing up a cup of hot egg-nogg, advanced and remarked, cheerily:

"Here, stranger, brace up! This is the real stuff."

The man drained the cup, smacked his lips, and seemed more at home.

"Been prospecting, eh? Out in the mountains—caught in the storm? Lively night, this!"

"Pretty bad," said the man.

"Must feel pretty dry!"

The man looked at his streaming clothes and laughed, as if Goskin's remark was a sarcasm.

"How long out?"

"Four days."

"Hungry?"

The man rose up, and walking over to the lunch counter, fell to work upon roast bear, devouring it like any wild animal would have done. As meat and drink and warmth began to permeate the stranger, he seemed to expand and brighten up. His features lost their pallor, and he grew more and more content with the idea that he was not in the grave. As he underwent these changes, the people about him got merry and happy, and threw off the temporary feeling of depression he had laid upon them.

Presently his eyes fell upon the piano.

"Where's the player?" he asked.

"Never had any," said Goskin, blushing at the confession.

"I used to play when I was young."

"Stranger, do tackle it, and give us a tune. Nary man in this camp ever had the nerve to wrestle with that music box." His pulse beat faster, for he feared the man would refuse.

"I'll do the best I can," he said.

There was no stool, but seizing a candle-box, he drew it up and seated himself in front of the instrument. It only required a few seconds for a hush to come over the room.

"That old coon is going to give the thing a rattle."

The sight of a man at the piano was something so unusual that even the faro dealer, who was about to take in a fifty dollar bet on the tray, paused, and did not reach for his money. Men stopped drinking with the glasses at their lips. Conversation appeared to have been struck with paralysis, and cards were no longer shuffled.

The old man brushed back his long, white locks, looked up to the ceiling, half closed his eyes, and in a mystic sort of reverie passed his fingers over the keys. He touched but a single note, yet the sound thrilled the room. It was the key to his improvisation, and as he wove his chords together the music laid its spell upon every ear and heart. He felt his way along the keys like a man treading uncertain paths; but he gained confidence as he progressed, and presently bent to his work like a master. The instrument was not in exact tune, but the ears of his audience, through long disuse, did not detect anything radically wrong. They heard a succession of grand chords, a suggestion of paradise melodies here and there, and it was enough.

"See him counter with his left!" said an old rough, enraptured.

"He calls the tune every time on the upper end of the board," responded a man with a stack of chips in his hand.

The player wandered off into the old ballads he had heard at home. All the sad and melancholy and touching songs, that came up like dreams of childhood, this unknown player drew from the keys. His hands kneaded their hearts like dough, and squeezed out tears as from a wet sponge. As the strains flowed one upon the other, they saw their homes of the long ago reared again; they were playing once more where the apple blossoms sank through the soft air to join the violets on the green turf of the old New England States; they saw the glory of the Wisconsin maples and the haze of the Indian summer blending their hues together; they saw the heather of the Scottish hills, the white cliffs of Briton and heard the sullen roar of the sea as it beat upon their memories vaguely.

Then came the old Christmas carols, such as they sung in the church thirty years before; the subtle music that brings up the glimmer of wax tapers, the solemn shrines, the evergreen, holly, mistletoe and surpliced choirs. Then the remorseless performer planted his stab in every heart with "Home, Sweet Home."

When the player ceased, the crowd slunk away from him. There was no more revelry left in his audience. Each man wanted to sneak off to his cabin and write the old folks a letter. The day was breaking as the last man left the place, and the player, laying his head down on the piano, fell asleep.

"I say, pard," said Goskin, "don't you want a little rest?"

"I feel tired," the old man said. "Perhaps you'll let me rest here for the matter of a day or so."

He walked behind the bar, where some old blankets were laying, and stretched himself upon them.

"I feel pretty sick, I guess I won't last long. I've got a brother down the ravine—his name's Driscoll. He don't know I'm here. Can you get him before morning? I'd like to see his face once more before I die."

Goskin started up at the mention of the name. He knew Driscoll well.

"He your brother? I'll have him here in half an hour."

As he dashed out in the storm the musician pressed his hand to his side and groaned. Goskin heard the word 'hurry!' and sped down the ravine to Driscoll's cabin.

It was quite light in the room when the two men returned. Driscoll was as pale as death.

"My God! I hope he's alive. I wronged him when we lived in England, twenty years ago."

They saw the old man had drawn the blankets over his face. The two stood a moment, awed by the thought that he might be dead. Goskin lifted the blanket and pulled it down astonished. There was no one there!

"Gone!" cried Driscoll, wildly.

"Gone," echoed Goskin, pulling out his cash drawer. "Ten thousand dollars in the sack, and dear knows how much loose change in the drawer."

The next day the boys got out, followed a horse's tracks through the snow, and lost them in the trail leading toward Pioche.

There was a man missing from the camp. It was the three-card monte man, who used to deny point blank that he could play the scale. One day they found a wig of white hair, and called to mind when the "stranger" had pushed those locks back when he looked toward the ceiling for inspiration, on the night of December 24, 1858.

SHE MADE A MISTAKE.

An individual in a dress coat, ornamented with a sparse array of brass buttons and a star, and a single stripe across his cuffs, was sweeping and circling about the room in the last of the new step waltzes, and naturally attracted attention. He was introduced to one blue-blooded young lady, who stiffly informed him that she was not dancing that evening, and froze up his utterances with an icy stare. As he left she turned with celestial ire in her countenance and said:

"How dare they introduce a Pullman car conductor to me? The impudence! Think of me dancing with him!"

"My dear, ignorant, land-lubberly lass from the interior," said the convulsed recipient of the angry burst, "don't you know he is a master of the United States navy, the greatest social swell that breathes, always excepting that most magnificent and god-like creature, a lieutenant of marines?"

"I don't believe it," she said crimsoning. "Where's his sword and his gold lace and trimmings? He has borrowed that coat from his waiter and sewed the buttons on the tail of it himself, or else he is a conductor. I know he is a fraud when I see him walk."

Argument was powerless to convince the young woman that she had committed social suicide and made the biggest blunder of the season, or that the modestly ornamented coat was really what officers call the "social" uniform, and not the gorgeous garment of full-dress.—St. Louis Globe.

ON THE SQUARE.

The other morning when Mr. Jones entered his family drug store to have a prescription put up he found a new clerk in attendance. Mr Jones has considerable curiosity, and while he waited he began:

'Been here long?'

'Only two days.'

'Going to stay?'

'I think so.'

'Old clerk gone for good?'

'Yes.'

'Come from New York?'

'No. I came from St. Louis.'

'Didn't like the town, I suppose?'

'Oh, fairly.'

'Got a better offer here, I suppose?'

'Well, not much better.'

'Druggist related to you?'

'No.'

'Going to marry his daughter?'

'Haven't thought of it.'

There was a brief rest until the clerk had finished his labors, and then he beckoned Mr. Jones into the back room and said:

'You look like a person who can be trusted' and I'll tell you in confidence why I came here. I liked St. Louis, and I had good wages, but I happened to kill three or four persons by putting up wrong prescriptions and I thought a change of location would relieve my sorrow. This is on the square you know, and nothing is to be said unless I lay out two or three of your leading citizens, in which case I shall give up the drug business altogether and go to sailing a sand barge.'

Jones went out feeling of his left ear and looking into vacancy, and his throat got well without the use of the gargle.

THEY DIDN'T TACKLE.

He was a rather rough and uncouth-looking specimen, and he was striding along as though he was trying to make time on the home stretch, when he passed some callow youths who evidently imagined that "clothes make the man," and one of them sang out in a taunting voice:

"Say, mister, where did you get that gait?"

He paused abruptly, and turning on the party quickly, said:

"I got it out on the perrarie where I was tending to my own business, and ef you want to hang on to it you'll find ez full of spikes ez a hedge-hog's got quills. Don't all speak at once of you want to unhinge it. Which one wants to tackle it?"

But they seemed deeply interested in something else, and the man from "the perrarie" remarked as he moved away, that he guessed he "wasn't the man they were lookin' for after all."

A MOST IMPROPER UNCLE.

Lawrence Jerome, of New York, has a niece who is the wife of Lord of Randolph Churchill. Not long since Uncle Larry, being in London, called at his neice's house, and thereby astonished the stately footman who answered his ring:

'Is Mr. Churchill at home?'

The footman shivers.

'Me lud is in Ireland.'

'Aumph! What's he doing in Ireland?'

The footman is silent with horror.

'Is Mrs. Churchill in?'

The footman quivers with indignation.

'Me lady, sir, is not down stairs yet.'

'Not up? Humph! A pretty time of day to be in bed! Well, you just tell Mrs. Courchill—'

The footman pales and is about to summon assistance to eject the audacious intruder, when—a silvery laugh and a voice floats down over the banisters: 'I hear you, Uncle Larry. Come right in!'

The footman, bowing low: 'Oh, sir, me lud! pardon me. If you please, me lud, this way.'

They were at a picnic. On the ground was a small stand for the sale of watch-charms. 'Oh, George,' said she, 'buy me a charm.' 'Sarah,' said he, 'you have too many already.'

ADVISED TO HEDGE.

The Virginia City Chronicle tells this story: Two friends were discussing the merits of their acquaintances. One said: "Talk about mean men, now there's old Strassberger. He's the hardest, driest, meanest old Shylock that ever lived. That man! why!" And there he stopped as if words couldn't do justice to the subject.

"You're mistaken," said his friend. "He's not so bad; even the devil isn't so black as he is painted. Now, I'll bet you $10 I can borrow $50 of him before night."

"Done!" and the money was put up. On posted the sanguine bookmaker to his intended victim.

"Strassberger, my boy, how are you?" and he slapped him on the back of a faded coat.

"Vell, I vas all right. Vot's de madder mit you?"

"Look here, old fellow, I made a little bet about you just now—ha! ha! It's a capital joke."

"Um!" said Strassberger. "Vell?"

"Yes, I just bet $10 with Smithy that I could borrow $50 of you today."

"Feefty tollar!"

"Yes, that was the amount."

"Und you bet ten?"

"That's what I put up."

"Vell, now look here, my friend," in a low whisper, "you go straight avay and hedge."

WHAT SHE CALLED HIM.

A well known educationalist vouches for the truth of the following: A teacher in a lower grade in one of our public schools received a new pupil the other day—a little Miss of six or seven years, named, say Matie Brown. After taking her name for the school rolls according to custom, the teacher said:

'What is your papa's name, Matie?'

'Mr. Brown.'

'Yes, but what is his first name?'

'Don't know—his name is just Mr. Brown.'

'Yes, yes—I know'—then, as a bright idea struck her, 'What does your mamma call him?'

'Oh! I know what you mean, now,' the innocent child replied; 'ma calls him a darned old fool!'

It is safe to conclude that the teacher did not register the child's father as D. O. F. Brown.

LUCK AND LABOR.

If the boy who exclaims, 'Just my luck!' was truthful, he would say, 'Just my laziness!' or 'Just my inattention!' Mr. Cobden wrote proverbs about 'Luck and Labor.' It would be well for boys to memorize them:

Luck is waiting for something to turn up.

Labor with keen eyes and strong will, will turn up something.

Luck lies in bed and wishes the postman would bring him news of a legacy.

Labor turns out at 6 o'clock, and with busy pen or ringing hammer lays the foundation of a competence.

Luck whines.

Labor whistles.

Luck relies on chances.

Labor on character.

Luck slips down to indigence.

Labor strides upward to independence.—Watchman.

WHAT DARKED DE HOLE.

Two darkies went out to hunt opossums, and by accident found a large cave with quite a small entrance. Peeping in they discovered three young (bear) whelps in the interior.

'Look heah, Sam, ize gwine to go in dar and get the young bears—you jest watch dis yer hole for de old bear.' Sam got asleep in the sun. When opening his eyes he saw the old bear scouring her way into the cave.

Quick as wink he caught her by the tail, and held on to her like grim death.

'Hello, dar, Sam, what for you dark de hole dar?'

'Lord bless you honey, save yourself. If dis yer tail comes out, you'll find out what dark de hole.'

A Nevada girl's love-letter: 'Dear Jimmy, it's all up. We ain't going to get married. Ma says you're too rough and I guess she's right. I'm sorry—but can't you go to Europe and get filed down?'

READ THE EVIDENCE
Which will Remove All Your Doubts—A Good Investment—One that Yields
"AN HUNDRED FOLD."
The world is full of charlatans asking public attention to patent inventions for the mitigation of suffering. Everything claiming the power to do good should be from a reputable source, otherwise it is open to suspicion. Dr. David Kennedy, of Rondout, N. Y., affirms that his medicine, "Kennedy's Favorite Remedy," is the best article of its kind ever produced. Hence it is only just to the public that he refer to his record as a physician and surgeon. Among the capital operations performed by him are: Amputation of the thigh-bone in the case of Abraham Elsworth, Port Ewen, Ulster Co., N. Y.; amputation of the arm, case of Mrs. Edward Meyers, of Rondout, N. Y., and the operation of lithotomy (removal of stone from the bladder), in the case of Simon Tietsell, of Kingston, and the removal of the eye for Oscar Craigg, of Rosendale, Ulster Co., N. Y. These are a few of many. All these persons fully recovered because Dr. Kennedy prescribed "Favorite Remedy" (which has unequaled powers of purifying the blood). Owing to the use of "Favorite Remedy" in the after-treatment of his surgical cases, not one has died; all are living to this day in the bloom of health. Dr. Kennedy's "Favorite Remedy," for sale by all druggists. $1.00 per bottle.

ELY'S
CREAM BALM
CATARRH, COLD IN HEAD
HAY FEVER
HEADACHE

DIRECTIONS.
For Catarrh, Hay Fever, Cold in the Head, &c., insert with little finger, a particle of the Balm into the nostrils; draw strong breaths through the nose. It will be absorbed, cleansing, and healing the diseased membrane.
For Deafness, Apply a particle into the ear.
ELY'S CREAM BALM
Effectually cleanses the nasal passages of Catarrhal virus, causing healthy secretions, allays inflammation and irritation, protects the membranal linings of the head from additional colds, completely heals the sores and restores the sense of taste and smell. Beneficial results are realized by a few applications. A thorough treatment as directed will cure Catarrh. As a household remedy for cold in the head it is unequaled. The Balm is easy to use and agreeable. Sold by druggists at 50 cents. On receipt of 50 cents will mail a package. Send for circular with full information.
ELY'S CREAM BALM CO., Owego, N. Y.
"MERIT MUST REAP ITS JUST REWARD."
Of the many Catarrh and Hay Fever remedies we keep in stock there is none of which our customers speak more highly than of Ely's Cream Balm. A comparatively new discovery, but one which, from the many reports and evidences of cures produced, is destined to be a leading article. We have never handled a remedy which has increased so rapidly in sales or that has given such universal satisfaction. Price, 50 cents.

Kidney Wort.
The Great Cure for Rheumatism.
As it is for all diseases of the KIDNEYS, LIVER and BOWELS.
It cleanses the system of the acrid poison that causes the dreadful suffering which only the victims of Rheumatism can realize.
THOUSANDS OF CASES
of the worst forms of this terrible disease have been quickly relieved, in a short time
PERFECTLY CURED.
KIDNEY-WORT
has had wonderful success, and an immense sale in every part of the country. In hundreds of cases it has cured where all else had failed. It is mild but efficient. CERTAIN IN ITS ACTION, but harmless in all cases.
It Cleanses, Strengthens and gives New Life to all the important organs of the body. The natural action of the Kidneys is restored. The Liver is cleansed of all disease, and the Bowels move freely and healthfully. In this way the worst diseases are eradicated from the system.
As it has been proved by thousands
KIDNEY-WORT
is the most effectual remedy for cleansing the system of all morbid secretions. It should be used in every household as a
SPRING MEDICINE.
Always cures BILIOUSNESS, CONSTIPATION and PILES.

LEGAL NOTICES.

Administrator's Sale of Real Estate.

BY virtue of an order of the Orphan's Court of the county of Union, dated April 27th, A. D. 1881, the subscriber, administrator of Alexander Dunham, deceased, will expose for sale at public vendue, on the premises, in the city of Plainfield, county of Union and State of New Jersey, on

MONDAY, THE SEVENTEENTH DAY OF OCTOBER NEXT,

at two o'clock in the afternoon, the following described land and premises, viz., situate, lying and being in the city of Plainfield, county of Union and State of New Jersey:

Beginning at a corner of the fence of Randolph Dunham in Exchange alley; thence along the line of Exchange alley, south forty-six degrees east ninety-seven links, of sixty-four feet four inches to a corner of the lot now or lately belonging to Jemima F. Lennox; thence along the line of said lot south forty-five degrees west thirty-eight links or twenty-five feet to another corner of said Lennox's lot; thence along the line of said Lennox's land, and now or late of Randolph Franze, north forty-six degrees west, ninety-seven links, or sixty-four feet four inches, to a corner of said Dunham's land; thence north forty-five degrees east on said Dunham's line thirty-eight links, or twenty-five feet to the beginning, containing [illegible] one-hundredths of an acre of land, conveyed to Alexander Dunham by deed of Charles J. Crandall and William E. Crandall, dated February [illegible] 1873, and recorded in Book No. 77, of Deeds for Union county, on pages 224, &c.

Excepting therefrom, however, a small parcel of land, containing two hundred and sixty and seven-tenths square feet, conveyed by Alexander Dunham to Daniel S. Berry and Wallace Vail by deed dated July 1, 1875, recorded in Book [illegible] of Deeds for Union county, pages 234, &c., and including as a portion of said tracts certain parcel of land adjacent thereto, conveyed by Daniel S. Berry and wife and Wallace Vail and wife to Alexander Dunham, by deed dated July 1, 1875, and recorded in Book No. 109 of Deeds for Union county, on page 431, &c., and containing three hundred and twenty-five and two-tenths square feet of land.

WILLIAM H. SHOTWELL,
Administrator.

Dated August 12, 1881.
Fees—$8.00.

SHERIFF'S SALE.—In Chancery of New Jersey. Between Peter H. Randolph et als., administrators, complainants, and John F. Wilson et als., defendants. Fi. fa. for sale of mortgaged premises.

By virtue of the above stated writ of fieri facias to me directed, I shall expose for sale by public vendue, at the Court House, in the city of Elizabeth, N. J., on WEDNESDAY, THE TWENTY-SIXTH DAY OF OCTOBER, A. D., 1881,

At two o'clock, p. m., of said day, all those tracts or parcels of land and premises hereinafter particularly described, situate, lying and being in the township of Plainfield, in the county of Union and state of New Jersey.

Beginning at a stone in the line of now or formerly R. C. Vail's land, and runs thence along the line of Henry C. Randolph's land, south [illegible] seven degrees and thirty minutes, east twenty-four chains and ninety-four links to a stone in the line of lands of the estate of Jophia Clawson (deceased); thence with that line south forty-six degrees, west eight chains and seventeen links to a stone in the line of D. C. THE PARSON'S NEW COAT.

The village of Buzzville having gone safely through the canning and preserving season; having with praiseworthy zeal carried off the palm as regarded the "Annual County Fair," over and above the surrounding town; having shown conspicuously in an elaborate "Harvest Festival" for their church—and yet surviving, now cast about for other worlds to conquer before setting down for the winter.

"Our minister needs a new coat," said Miss Mirandy Stebbins, rattling her knitting needles in huge delight at first producing an idea; "he does, most dretful bad, an' that's a fact. Hain't any of you noticed how shiny it's got?" She cast a reproachful glance on all of the circle—who, while they waged war on unbleached cotton and red flannel, also carried on admirably the war with tongues—and then proceeded: "An' I say it's a cryin' shame to see him get up into that pulpit another Sunday with that old coat on. Somethin' must be done. I'm awful glad I thought of it."

"You hain't thought of it any quicker'n anybody else," spoke up little Mrs. Bisbee, a stout, buxom matron, with flaming cheeks; and her black eyes flashed volumes. "'Tain't always talkin' folks gits the first idea. I've been a-thinkin' of that same thing for some time now," she added, with a venomous snap at the placid figure behind the rattling needles. "An' I shall do my best to git the parson one," she added, the best rye-bread premium, which Miss Miranda had successfully carried off before her very eyes at the County Fair, urging her on.

"I shall begin a subscription right straight off, this very minute," cried Miss Mirandy, with great determination, and starting from her chair, ignoring her rival completely. "How much will you give, Mrs. Bassett?" she asked, going into the centre of the group to attack the "Square's wife."

"An' I shall start one with my own name first, before I ask other folks to give," exclaimed little Mrs. Bisbee, triumphantly, with an unpleasant laugh at Miss Mirandy, who was known to be "tight as the bark of a tree." "I'll give five dollars," she added, in a loud voice, determined to go without her winter bonnet sooner than her rival should carry the day.

"An' I'll join you with another five," spoke up the "Square's wife," looking past Miss Miranda to the stout little figure with flaming cheeks. "Now, then, Mrs. Bisbee, that's a good start, I'm sure."

There was no show now for the spinster's side, since, for various reasons of her own, the "Squire's wife" had gone over to her rival. So she stalked back to her rocking chair grimly, took up her knitting work, and watched, as best she might, the subscriptions grow enthusiastically under other hands than her own.

At last, as the laughter and excitement progressed on all sides, she was utterly unable to bear it another moment longer, and jumping up, she mumbled something about "must go home," and flounced out of the room.

"I'm glad she has gone," said the "Square's wife," as the door closed after the retreating form of the spinster. "I'm sick to death of having her always come to me for subscriptions; an' she never gives the first cent herself."

"She would't see the need of the parson's coat, if she had to open that pocket-book of hers," said a tall, square-built matron, who looked as if she had plenty of opinions of her own, and could express them when occasion required.

"Gracious!" ejaculated little Mrs. Bisbee, with a short laugh; "who ever seen that pocket-book anyway? I never did, an' I don't believe any of you have either."

"A cent's as big as a cart-wheel to her," said the big square woman, who didn't love Miss Mirandy to death. "It all runs in the family. They wouldn't any of them open their mouths to breath, if they didn't git something at the same time they give it out."

"Well, she won't put anything in her mouth this time," observed the "Squire's wife," laughing, and settling back comfortably. "It's the first sewing meeting, I guess, where she's gone home before tea."

"And it means something to go home before tea from Mrs. Deacon Higby's," exclaimed little Mrs. Bisbee, enthusiastically, with an energetic bob of her black curls over at the hostess. "So she's lost her cake and credit too."

"I don't know," said Mrs. Deacon Higby, deprecatingly, though she wriggled all over with delight at the implied praise to her suppers. "My doughnuts ain't so light as usual, and the loaf-cake ain't riz quite as I'd like it. The deacon come home last night in a chill, and I run in the midst of everything to give him a camfire sweat. So I didn't hev as good luck as I set out to hev."

Notwithstanding these lamentable failures, the round, comfortable visage of Mrs. Deacon Higby presented a series of rippling smiles that threatened to eclipse every feature of her expressive face, while she smoothed her fat hands complacently together.

"Oh, well, you can talk," said little Mrs. Bisbee, energetically, and beginning to count up her list of subscriptions to the parson's new coat, "but we all know, as well as the next one, what your cookin' is. Fifteen, twenty, twenty-one, no, twenty-two—Mrs. Spencer Higginson's makes twenty-two—twenty-five, twenty-eight, thirty, thirty-one and a quarter. Oh, dear? what a pity it wasn't jest even thirty-two!"

"I'll make it up," said the "Square's wife," quickly, enjoying the distinction of being the only woman in the room to whom a dollar or two more or less didn't make a matter worth a moment's consideration. "Now, then, thirty-two dollars ought to get a first-rate article. Where'll we buy it? That's the question."

Hereupon ensued a lively discussion, the deacon's wife favoring employing the village tailor, and, as he was second cousin to her husband, family reasons might have something to do with her opinion. Some of the ladies falling in with her, the idea would soon have been carried, but for the warlike, determined attitude of the other party, who decidedly favored the coat being made out of town.

"'Twill be lots more stylish," said Mrs. Bassett, the "Square's wife," with an undeniable air that took immensely. "I shan't approve in the least its being done here. When we give anything, let's give a good one. How we should feel to see the parson up in the pulpit with anything but the best on!"

The view of the parson from his high perch dispensing spiritual things, with anything less than a town-made-coat adorning his person, was a sight that even in imagination so filled the circle with disfavor that the whole roomful in a body went over immediately to the side of the "Square's wife." All but Mrs. Deacon Higby. She remained firm, while the round visage lengthened ominously, and the little eyes snapped.

"And if you think 'Biah Williams would make any but a good coat, you're much mistaken," she cried, with indignation. "I must take back my subscription, then, for the deacon never'd hear to my giving his second cousin on his mother's side such an insult, ef the parson never saw a coat." And, all feathers ruffled, she sat straight up, and glared at them all.

Now it never would do to offend Deacon Higby in all the world; everybody saw that at a glance; so, with many side-long looks at each other, each lady began to cast about how she might gracefully wriggle back on to the other side without arousing the wrath of the "Square's wife."

"I s'pose we had orter employ our own church people," said little Mrs. Bisbee, thoughtfully, seeing no one else was willing to take it up. "And, besides," she added brightly, "perhaps seeing it's for the parson, 'Biah Williams may do it considerably cheaper. So we'll save a good deal."

"I don't know whether he will or not," said the deacon's wife, sturdily. "I ain't in 'Biah's business, and I ain't agoing to say what I don't know nothing about. But I do say, if the job is taken away from him, and he a church member in good and regular standing, to give it out down in the city, why, the deacon will be so mad he won't get over it in one spell, I can tell you!"

"Yes, I do think," said little Mrs. Bisbee, reflectively, and giving a swift, comprehensive look at the "Square's wife" at the same time that she administered, under the big table where the work was being cut out, an admonitory pinch on that lady's toes, "that probably 'Biah Williams won't charge near so much. We don't know, but probably he won't. And then, besides, it would look rather queer to hev us go outside to get some one else to do the work. They would think the 'First Church in Buzzville' had quarreled maybe;" and she finished up with a laugh.

"So they would, so they would," cried every lady present, delighted to find that some one else had done them the good service of whirling them over safely. "We wouldn't go out of Buzzville for anything; and 'Biah Williams is jest the one to do it," they added, determined to do nothing by halves.

So oil having been poured upon the troubled waters of Mrs. Deacon Higby's spirit, she considered her husband's family honor to be thoroughly vindicated, and resuming her former jolly expression she set about passing the fragrant tea and the abundance of good cheer that accompanied it; and a committee of three—Mrs. Squire Bassett, Mrs. Bisbee, and, in compliment to her relationship to the aforesaid 'Biah Williams, Mrs Deacon Higby—was unanimously appointed to confer with the tailor and order the coat.

Feeling quite sure at this point that duty had been done, and full reparation for any fancied insult to the deacon's family pride had been made, they one and all, in a highly exalted frame of mind, energetically set to work on the supper.

"I never see such eaters," said a muffled voice. This remark was addressed, in the depths of a big closet full of all sorts of family lumber and cast-off articles, to another person, who, like the owner of the voice, was crammed in a most uncomfortable position up against the door that led into the "keepin'-room," where the sewing society was convened. "Whackets! if we should eat so much, I guess 'ma'd whip us. Just look at Miss Bassett stuff!"

Thereupon the other bounced up with great difficulty to get a good view from they keyhole. When he had gotten his eye fixed, he drew a long breath. "Whew!" don't, she, though! An' see Miss Henderson! her nose is a yard long. Look at her bite into that biscuit!"

"Let me see—let me see," exclaimed the boy on the floor, crowding up to push the other away from the key-hole. "That's my place. Get away, Tom, I say. I want to see."

"'Tain't your place any more'n 'tis mine," retorted the other, in an awful whisper that but for the rattle of cups and saucers going on the other side of the door must needs have been heard. "The closet b'longs to both of us; so of course the key-hole does."

"Well, I want to see once," said the first boy, waiving the point of exclusive rights; "so get away, or I'll holler;" and he gave a smart push to the figure enjoying a view of the society that caused it to take his eye quickly away from the key-hole, while he resented his wrongs.

"If you do, you won't get nothin' only a wackin', an' I'll cut an' run," he declared, savagely, dumping down into the vacated place on the floor. "So do look if you want ter; then you've got to give the place back."

"She's beginning on another," cried the victor, as loudly as he dared. "Oh! my jum-sies! I say, Tom—"

"What?" said Tom, gloomily, on the door.

"There won't be a scrap left for us if they keep on eatin' like that. The riz cake's a-going' just awful! Let's go out in the back yard and holler 'Fire,' an' start 'em home."

"Oh, no, we mustn't," cried Tom, in alarm; "that will spoil the whole. They can't eat much more," he added, decidedly. "An' then, after we've had our supper, we'll start an' tell all we know. Hain't we heard lots?" he asked, enthusiastically.

"Lots!" declared his brother; "I guess we have. Just twice as much as we did at last s'ciety; then 'twas all about Jinny Ann Rogers; that warn't no fun at all."

"Let's go to Cousin 'Biah's first," said Tom, eargerly, "an' mad him all up; an' then we'll cut 'cross lots to Miss M'randy's. Let's, Joe."

"All right," said Joe. "I don't care which one we go to first. Oh, dear! I wish they were through."

But before he could plaster his pale blue eye up to the key-hole again, the enterprising Thompson already had possession of that out-look; so he was forced to content himself with conjuring up new dark plans on the floor.

At last they had the supreme pleasure of seeing and hearing the biscuits, cake, and tea passed out into the kitchen; when, loosing no time, they speedily took themselves out to the charms of a supper with no one by to restrain.

When they had finally eaten till not another crumb was possible, they each grasped his cap, and flew as fast as was possible on their pleasant errand.

* * * * * *

"I wouldn't 'a believed it" Mr. 'Biah Williams brought his hand down hard on his knee, then stared at his wife.

"I would," she said, spitefully. "They're a mean, hateful set. It's jest what I've alwus told you, 'Biah, only you would have your own way. Now I guess you'll go over to the Methodists."

"I'll go to the Methodists next Sunday, Sarah, if you was her," said Mr. Williams, decidedly. "I'll jine a church where the folks ain't too big for their clothes."

"Ain't too big for your clothes, you mean," said his wife, with a bitter laugh. "To think that stuck-up Miss Bassett, whose father used to peddle soap, dared turn up her nose at your tailorin!"

"And that Miss Bisbee, who don't know a good coat when she sees one," cried the tailor, in the greatest exasperation, "a-settin' herself up to tell me how much I was to charge! I guess I'll learn her how to mind her own business." And 'Biah got up, and sticking his big hands in his pockets, began to stalk up and down the room in high dudgeon.

"'Biah!" Mrs. Williams stopped combing out her scanty locks, and letting them string down each side of her thin face, she eagerly faced her husband. "I'll tell you what to do."

"What?" asked her husband, stopping surprised.

"You charge 'em just twice as much as you would 'ad one," said his wife, peering through the two wisps of light hair that hung dismall on either side of her enraged countenance, "an' get your pay out of 'em all; an' then you give it back to the parson yourself, when the coat's done."

"Good for you!" cried her husband. "Hain't you got a head though!"

Meantime, Miss Mirandy Stebbins, feeling herself overreached in her effort to be the prominent originator of the gift to the parson, and defrauded as to the supper she had counted so much upon, was doing up her corkscrew curls, in anything but a sweet frame of mind, preparatory to the sleep that wouldn't come at her bidding.

'It's outrageous!' she hissed to herself, her false teeth being out, and carefully placed on the bureau. 'I never was so insulted in my life. That little fat chunk of Miss Bisbee, too, to do it! And Miss Higby to set by and see 'em, and never say a word! I'll be up to 'em, I will.'

Thereupon she blew out the candle, and flounced her thin frame down into the middle of the feather-bed, trying to think of something bad enough to satisfy her thirst for revenge. Suddenly she sprang into a sitting posture.

'I'll git straight up now and write it down, before I forget it,' she cried, in great excitement, 'for I never will get it into my head so good again.'

And clambering out of bed, she groped around in the dark to light her candle, when she proceeded to slip her feet into some flannel slippers, and herself into a monstrous bed-gown of a wonderful pattern.'

'There, now, what was it? Let me see,' she said scratching her head with the end of a rusty pen-holder that she had with great difficulty found, after much rumaging, in the bureau drawer. 'Oh, yes, that was it. Yes; now, then.'

The pen scraped its way over the small mangy piece of paper that Miss Mirandy considered suitable for the occasion, until these words appeared:

'REVEREND MISTER BLODGET, DEAR SIR.' (On second thoughts, considering the the 'Dear Sir' too familiar, she had, with extreme pains marked it over, while a blush flew over her spare countenance, and lighted up the dismal bedgown.)

'REVEREND MISTER BLODGETT,—There bein' an effort started affoot to give you a coat, I wish to state out of profound respeck to yourself and Mrs. Blodgett and'—here Miss Mirandy, finding still quite a stock of respect left within her bosom, concluded to bestow it liberally, so she added, with extra flourishes—and your whole inclusive family, that I had the honor to propose the coat, and should a had the extreme pleasure of presentin it in a way suitable to the occashun, if that insidious creature Mis. Seth Bisbee hadn't insulted me at the sewen society this evenin at Mis. Deacon Higby's. She started all these ladies to talk awful about me, behind my back, when I wasn't there; but Tom and Joe Higby are noble lads, and they've jest been and told me all about it. So I pardon my assumption in writin, and believe I would a give for the coat if I'd ben let to, and present my respecks to Mis. Blodgett and your eldest daughter and Sarah Ann, and all the rest.

'Yours to command,'
'MIRANDY STEBBINS.'

Mirandy couldn't help reading this over three or four times, she was so delighted with it. Then she blew out the light and clambered into her feathers again.

'On second thoughts,' she said, as she drew up the thick comfortable around her spare chin, 'I won't send it now. I can afford to wait, and when the coat's done I'll jest git 'Biah Williams to stick it in one of the pockets. That'll be most as good as helpin' giv it;' and hugely tickled at the turn of affairs, she composed her mind and fell asleep.

* * * * *

On the First Sunday in December—a bright beautiful day—the 'First Church in Buzzville' was crowded to its utmost capacity. The presentation had taken place the evening before, and consisted in the coat being sent over at the hands of the tailor's boy, with a note containing the names of the fair donors.

All eyes and ears were therefore agog to see the parson in his new habiliments, and to hear how he returned thanks. As he went up the broad aisle, every neck was craned to catch a sight of the new coat, and many nudges and smiles were given to express the general satifaction that was bubbling over in the audience.

After the first prayer, with a few preliminary 'hems,' the parson stood up and began to unburden his mind of the deep debt of gratitude that seemed to weigh him down.

'Hem! It gives me great pleasure,' he mumbled; then sought relief in his handerchief, which being in the depths of his left-hand pocket, required 'a strong pull and a long pull' to get it out. 'Hem!'

Whiz—rustle—went some small white object out beneath the parson's hand up into the air; then it settled slowly, and made its way down, down, toward the door, when it fluttered a moment to land in the second pew from the front, directly in Deacon Higby's lap. The two boys leaned past their mother to see the sight and almost laughed aloud. They did not laugh again for many a day!

The deacon heard the concluding words of Parson Blodgett's acknowledgment, who, now that he had his handkerchief, was all right; then he slowly unfolded the paper in his hand, and examined its contents.

Which done, he turned and took a long, deliberate look at his two sons, who were placidly observing the erratic movements of a belated fly on the ceiling.

Miss Mirandy Stebbins's letter, though not in the way she had intended, finally reached the minister's hand, and she had full revenge; so also was the soul of 'Biah Williams fully satisfied.

But those 'two noble lads,' the deacon's sons, had the jolliest whipping ever known, and it wasn't safe to say 'sewing society' to them for one good spell.

THE BEWITCHED HAMMER.

On a warm October afternoon, Miss Julia McCloskey, who was cook, chambermaid, and waitress for Mrs. Smith, suddenly stopped scouring her tins, stared vacantly into the street for a moment, and then exclaimed:

"It's jist the day to clane me dinin'-room carpet; it's little weather we'll have for a six months, but'll be too wet to let a carpet touch the grass. An' the byes, bless their troublesome little bodies, are gone to their cousins, an' I won't have nobody to pester me at all."

Miss McCloskey was a perfect treasure of a servant; whatever she thought needed attention was attended to at once; so within five minutes she had her tins and scouring materials put away, and was taking up the dining-room carpet, well shaken, back to the dining-room. I regret to say that, two or three moments before she returned, Master Lawrence Smith, one of the troublesome "byes," whose bodies Miss McCloskey had blessed, having had some disagreement with his cousins, strolled home, and guiltily sought comfort in the family cake-box, which was in the dining-room closet. He had hardly time to shut himself in the closet as he heard the servant's approaching footsteps; so you can be sure he watched her very closely through the keyhole, hoping he would have an early chance to escape.

Miss McCloskey spread the carpet neatly, and began to drive the tacks, when she noticed that several of them clung to the smaller end of the hammer.

"I wonther what sticky sthuff them byes hev had this hammer in?" said Miss McCloskey aloud, as she picked the tacks off and gave the hammer a vigorous wipe on her apron. Then she went on with her work; but happening to lay the hammer in the saucer of tacks for a moment, she was surprised to find the smaller end again covered with tacks. Master Lawrence saw through the key-hole the expression on her face, and it amused that bad little boy very much.

"Sure an' it's powerful sticky, whativer it is," said she, picking off the tacks and feeling the hammer gently with her thumb and forefinger; "an' yit it don't seem so to the touch."

She went to the butler's pantry, and carefully washed the hammer with soap and water. Master Lawrence saw his chance to escape, but he was willing to be detected for the sake of seeing the rest of the fun, for he knew the ways of that hammer.

"Now I reckon it won't be afther playin' me any more thricks," said the cleanly servant, kneeling down on the carpet again. But as she knelt she laid the hammer into the saucer of tacks again and again it bristled with them.

"Now did iver any one see the loike av that?" exclaimed Miss McCloskey; and Lawrence had to clap his hands to his mouth to keep from saying, "Yes, often." But Miss McCloskey was not in the habit of giving up easily, so she took the hammer to the grate, and scoured it smartly with ashes.

"There!" she exclaimed, starting for the tacks to test the cleanliness of the hammer; "now you'll be makin' me no more trouble. I'll warrant, an'—holy mither!"

As the astonished girl lifted the hammer, a whole string of tacks came with it, and although some of them dropped when she shook the hammer, several of them seemed to resolve never to abandon the hammer until forced to do so.

"The ould thing's bewitched!" exclaimed the servant, dropping the hammer, as if the handle burned her fingers. "I'll niver touch it again as long as I live." And Miss McCloskey crossed herself as a great many good people do when they think that evil spirits are near them. Just then Master Lawrence burst from the closet and shouted—

"Ha! ha! ha! wasn't you cheated though Julia? I never saw anything so funny in all my life." And the bad little boy was so amused that he dropped upon the carpet and rolled across the room, laughing until his face grew purple.

"What was you doin' in the closet?" asked Miss McCloskey.

"Watching you, and almost splitting to see the fun. Oh, dear!" and again Lawrence rolled across the room, laughing heartily.

"You were a sthealin' cake—there's some av the crumbs on yer lips, an' I'll tell yer mither," said the servant.

"And I'll tell everybody you didn't know a magnet from a 'sticky sthuff.'" said Lawrence.

"A maggonet?" exclaimed Miss McCloskey, very much astonished.

"Yes," replied Lawrence, "a magnet."

She promised the little boy that she would not tell his mamma about stealing cake if he would be sure to say nothing to any one of the family about the hammer. And Lawrence promised; but he told the story, as a great secret, to his best boy friend, and his friend told it to a little girl, and she told her big brother, and he told his papa, and the papa wrote it down and sent it to the editor, for, as Miss McCloskey does not subscribe to this paper, thousands of little boys and girls may laugh at her mistake without hurting her feelings a particle.—Christian Weekly.

THE DEAD PRESIDENT.

The bullet of the assassin having accomplished its deadly purpose, the mortal remains of President Garfield lie vaulted in Cleveland's beautiful cemetery overlooking the blue expanse of Lake Erie.

In good faith we opposed the election of James A. Garfield as the Republican candidate for President, but after he was duly chosen to fill that high office, none bowed more loyally to the decision than ourselves, and now, when he reposes lifeless within the tomb, we bury therein all political antagonism once held against him, and regretting with heartfelt sorrow his untimely end, avow detestation for the crime which caused it.

Doubtless there will arise in due season a commanding monument to mark the spot where rests his stricken form, thereby perpetuating remembrance of his private worth and varied public services.

May its silent influence increase in value as the years roll by.

The sympathy evinced for the wounded President, as he lay for anxious weeks on a couch of suffering, was as touching as it was general, and never before did grief more profound and universal find expression than when his fluttering pulse at last stilled beneath the icy touch of death. Not only from every section of our own broad domain, in stately mansion and humble cabin, but from far foreign lands came the voice of lamentation and the assurance of sincere condolence.

The history of the past three months is full of mournful interest. It teaches a lesson incumbent upon every American to seriously ponder and resolutely heed. May it take fast hold of the public mind and work useful and lasting reform.

NATIONAL HARMONY.

It is sincerely gratifying to believe that the era of sectional animosity in this country is about ended, and that henceforth we are to be a people harmonious in feeling and interest, bound together nationally by the reality of Union.

Such is indeed a glorious result, and it must be alone credited to the patriotic masses, both Northern and Southern, who have become disgusted with the unnatural domestic strife so long kept alive for partisan effect.

Doubtless there are many political plotters who would gladly intensify and perpetuate ill-will between the sections, but, happily, their efforts are fast becoming of no account. The people are sovereign, and any party that hereafter dares outrage public sentiment and decency by flaunting the emblem of sectional hate will meet the ignominious defeat it deserves.

Our country has passed through periods of national darkness, and now the sun-burst of peace and prosperity bids every patriot heart rejoice.

We may differ about men and measures as widely as we please, but, as Americans, we are all the countrymen of Washington, enlisted in Freedom's sacred cause and for the attainment of a common destiny. True loyalty knows no dividing line, it dwells alike upon the granite hills of New Hampshire and the alluvial soil of Louisiana, along the ocean washed shores of New Jersey or where flow the rivers of far Oregon.

Pressing onward from that rallying point, and yielding implicit obedience to the Constitution in its every part, will make for our beloved land the brightest history yet written.

Bright not merely because of material wealth and territorial expanse, but more brilliant for the reason that from the Great Republic will go forth an influence of conquering might, nerving mankind the world over to assert the just prerogative of manhood, and in the name of liberty, to break asunder the chains of tyranny and ignorance.

That is the mission of the United States, if the people maintain the purity of free representative government, and it will be the grandest the world ever saw.

THE DEMOCRATIC PARTY.

It is a significant truth of national history, that there existed at the formation of this government a large and influential party, headed by such men as Alexander Hamilton, who, although sustaining the patriot cause throughout the Revolution, still retained admiration for the aristocratic features of monarchy and did all they could do to perpetuate them in the newly born Republic.

They were Federalists, and while ignoring the rule of a personal King, sought to make effective the most odious attributes of royalty by establishing a privileged class, and vesting absolute governing authority in the hands of the favored few,—"the rich and well born," as they had the audacity to term them.

The Federalists hated and vilified Democracy because it espoused popular rights, irrespective of birth, creed or condition, and they availed of every opportunity to create and sow broadcast bitter prejudice against a political party that dared befriend and honor the common people.

That prejudice has continued down through the century and lives at the present day. Scores of worthy men are even now to be found stubbornly hostile to the Democratic party who cannot give an intelligent reason for their opposition, and who in fact have none other than the calumny instilled into their minds by Federal ancestors. It is folly to explain to such men the vital principles of Democracy as embodied in the Constitution, and to point them to the long line of illustrious Democratic statesmen who have from the time of Jefferson triumphantly upheld the banner of national progress and prosperity. They dislike Democracy, as did their fathers, simply because within its temple of representative freedom the humblest citizen is welcomed equally with the greatest.

And thence shines forth the brightest glory of our grand old party, thereby revealing why it continues to enjoy popular esteem.

Democracy treats all men with becoming respect. It boldly maintains and enforces the supremacy of justice and truth, the corner stones of free institutions, and denounces as infamous any political system that aims to make one man a prince and another a serf. It holds that worldly condition cannot in the eyes of the law be judged otherwise than equal, and that all laws should be framed for the encouragement and protection of each individual citizen, be he the income recipient of invested millions, or the laborer earning bread by daily toil.

Such is the Democratic party, the ready defender of the liberties of the people, the sure promoter of their interests, and the architect of the best fortune ever conferred upon a country—the Constitution of the United States. Long live Democracy!

HAVE NO FEAR.

The people will recall readily the language of General Garfield on the occasion of the assassination of President Lincoln. It was: "God reigns and the Government at Washington still lives." These words are as true to-day as they were then. The founders of our Government provided in the Constitution that when a President was elected, there should be chosen at the same time a Vice President who should serve as President in case of a vacancy. In November last every man who voted for James A. Garfield for President also voted that if from any cause he should cease to be President, Chester A. Arthur should take his place. To-day, therefore, Chester A. Arthur is President of the United States, and vested with all the powers which Monday were lodged with James A. Garfield. The country is one of law, and to the properly constituted authorities all patriotic men give ready and legal support.—Exchange.

THE CONSTITUTIONAL COMMISSION.

The New Jersey Constitutional Commission held its final public meeting in the City Hall, in Jersey City, on Friday. Ex-Senator Hobart, ex-Congressman Bird, Mr. McKeen, Speaker Van Duyne, ex-Senator Abbett, Holmes Murphy and H. N. Congar were seven out of the nine Commissioners who were in attendance. On behalf of the citizens there were present Alderman Van Reipen, United States Commissioner Romaine, Mayor Tausig, E. T. McLaughlin, Thos. V. Cator, and a few others representing the anti-monopoly element of Jersey City. Some written suggestions as to the needed reforms in the Judiciary of the State were submitted by the Hon. Courtlandt Parker and Miles T. Shipman, and ordered filed for reference without being read. Then Mr. Cator stepped forward and read the constitutional amendments proposed by the Anti-Monopolists. These amendments propose to forbid the passage of special legislation regulating internal affairs of cities, &c., unless the people of such municipality by a majority vote demand its passage; to forbid the construction of steam railroads without just compensation first being made to the owners of property abutting on the streets through which they run; to forbid transportation companies from taking or holding any lands in the future not already held by them for their use without first filing a renunciation of all claims to exemption or exclusive privileges; to limit the proportion borne by the tax levy to total values; to require a two-thirds vote in each house of the Legislature for the passage of acts increasing the indebtedness of cities, &c., and to fix ten per cent. of the tax value as the limit of indebtedness, and, finally, to forbid any official of a city or town or of the State from holding a position as Director or Receiver of attorney for any railroad or canal company. In the course of his speech advocating these amendments, Mr. Cator said that the official canvas of the County Assessors showed that $69,000,000 of property is exempt in Jersey City. The debt of the city is $17,000,000, which, as the assessed value of the taxable property in the city is only about $50,000,000, is equal to a confiscation of one-third of every piece of tax-paying property in the city. This is a state of things that must be remedied. Mr. Abbett said he was in favor of taxing all exempt properties, but that in the case of the railroads, their contracts of exemption had been held by the United States Supreme Court to be irrepealable, and he wanted to put something into the Constitution that will make them pay up. Mr. Cator suggested that the decision of the Supreme Court may be reversed, and he wanted to have the people in position to take advantage of it. Wouldn't it be a good idea to insert a clause forfeiting the franchise of a railroad that violates the law, as evasion forfeits the political and civil rights of the citizen? Mr. Congar asked what objection there was to Mr. Abbett's proposed amendment providing for the purchase of these exclusive franchises of the railroads by the State as paving the way for their eventual taxation. Mr. Cator thought it would cost too much. Mr. Abbett replied that the price is to be fixed by a jury, and that if it were thought too high the State could refuse to purchase. Counsellor S. B. Ransom made an address in opposition to monopolies, and John R. DeHart was in favor of the purchase by the State of the old Camden and Amboy Railroads.

Dr. Leibach, of Newark, submitted a memorial arguing the right of the people to enjoy their Sundays as they please, and the temperance people advocated an amendment forbidding the sale of spirituous and vinous liquors in the State except for medicinal purposes.

The most sought for and admired of all the great men who attended the funeral was Maj. Gen. W. S. Hancock. His handsome face and form, and his gentlemanly conduct have won him thousands of friends here. Clevelanders had been taught that he was a great, conceited, puffed-up military swell. They found him a quiet, unassuming gentleman, saddened by the solemnities of the occasion and sincerely mourning the death of his chieftain and former political opponent. Grant, Conkling, Arthur, the Camerons and others, could not forgive their foe within their party, and did not attend his funeral. Hancock submitted to the will of the people when they expressed their preference for Garfield with their suffrages. He studied Garfield, learned to admire him for his intelligence and in his great heart loved him as a brother. Hancock had nothing to lose by staying away, nor anything to gain by attending the funeral. He did not come like the chattering, officious Sherman, or the fawning would-be conspicuous Swaim, nor yet as the shrewd and calculating Logan. He came with the modest bearing of a gentlemanly soldier, expressing his honest grief in a quiet and sensible manner. He went away bearing with him the love and admiration of thousands of good citizens, to whom he had formerly been a stranger. To-day the good people of Ohio indulge the hope that the coming administration will be favored with the intelligence, manliness, courtesy and honest independence which are the distinguishing characteristics of Winfield Scott Hancock.—Cleveland Penny Press.

The following is the correspondence which passed between Attorney General Stockton of this State and U. S. District Attorney Corkhill, on the subject of where the assassin, Guiteau, should be tried:

STATE OF NEW JERSEY,
OFFICE OF ATTORNEY GENERAL,
TRENTON, Sept. 26, 1881.

To Hon. Geo. B. Corkhill, District Attorney for the District of Columbia, Washington, D. C.:

DEAR SIR:—From public rumor I have been led to believe that doubts have arisen as to whether Guiteau, the assassin of the late President Garfield, can be convicted of murder under existing conditions by force of the law of the District of Columbia. What your own opinion is upon the subject is, of course, unknown to me.

The death of the President having occurred here, the offence of Guiteau is by a statute of this State declared to be triable in the Courts of New Jersey in the same manner as though both the felonious stroke and the death had occurred within this jurisdiction. The legal efficacy of this statute has never been tested in its relation to facts similar to those now existing, and has, therefore, never received a judicial sanction.

Under these circumstances, to avoid misconception of the position of the authorities of New Jersey, it seems proper for me to intimate to you that I shall not advise any legal proceedings to be taken here with a view to the punishment of this heinous offence unless I shall be informed that it cannot be punished as murder in your own Courts.

I am, very respectfully,
Your obedient servant,
JOHN P. STOCKTON,
Att'y Gen. of N. J.

OFFICE OF UNITED STATES ATTORNEY,
DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA.
WASHINGTON, D. C., Sept. 29th, 1881.

Hon. John P. Stockton, Attorney General, Trenton, New Jersey:

DEAR SIR:—I thank you for your courteous favor of yesterday's date, informing me that you shall not advise that any legal proceedings be taken in your state looking to the punishment of the assassin of the late President, unless you shall be informed that his offence cannot be punished as murder in this jurisdiction; and, in reply, I beg to say that I have no doubt that the laws in force in this District will be found adequate to meet the case.

I am, dear sir, very respectfully,
GEORGE B. CORKHILL,
U. S. Att'y, D. C.

* * *

Arthur is one year older than the late President.

Guiteau will be defended by his brother-in-law, Mr. Scoville, of Chicago. The defence will be that the prisoner is insane. The New Jersey authorities have decided to take no action against Guiteau.

FIRE MATTERS.

The Board of Managers of the Plainfield Fire Department met in regular meeting at the Council chamber on Wednesday evening. President Van Winkle in the chair and all present. The minutes of the previous meeting were read and approved after correction. Mr Morris from Com. on Repairs and Supplies, reported the bill of the Plainfield Gas Light Co., ($56.70 gas; $20.80 coal) from April 8th to July 1st, as correct. He again called the attention of the Board to the fact that the Second street house was using three times as much gas as either of the other engine houses. There had been, he said, a change for the better in this respect since last report, but a still further reduction was advisable. The same committee reported correct the bill of Berry & Thorn $45.91, from July 17th '80 to May 26th '81. Mr. Jones from the Com. on Wells reported the amount of water in each, Sept. 1st, as published in THE CONSTITUTIONALIST at the time. Also the following as likely to become useless in time of drouth, and recommended that the engineers be instructed not to draw too heavily upon them—Front and Richmond streets, Washington and Second streets, Seventh street and Central avenue and Washington street opposite the Gas House. The committee further reported the erection of a dam across the Randolph mill race, whereby an exhaustless supply of water, sufficient for two or three steamers at the same time, was always available. It also recommended the building of two new wells as soon as possible. One at Franklin Place and the other on Grandview avenue, North Plainfield. Mr. Morris from Special committee, reported that a contract for the erection of a new truck for the Department had been drawn up and signed, and that the work was in progress. The contract was read, which specified what the apparatus was to be and that it would be delivered on board the cars at Jersey City, Jan. 1st, 1882, or sooner if possible. Report accepted and contract filed. Mr. Morris moved, that on all questions coming before the Board, a majority of the members present shall decide. Seconded by Mr. Depew, and carried, all aye.

Engine Co., No. 2, presented for confirmation the names of W. S. Chase and P. B. Hapenny; and No. 3 the names of Daniel McCarty, M. Field, P. Flynn and P. Galbraith. All laid over under the rule. An application for a certificate of exemption for A. M. Vail, was received from Zephyr H & L Co., and referred to Secretary for examination. The name of Benj. A. Mumford was brought up for confirmation as a member of Zephyr H & L Co. Mr. Flaig, of the Board, before a ballot was taken, arose and in making a public explanation of a former vote against the candidate, charged him with sundry faults of character and with dishonesty. A ballot was then taken, resulting in the confirmation of Mr. Mumford; after which he was allowed an opportunity to reply to Mr. Flaig's assertions. He did so by denying the charges in every particular, and closed with defying Mr. Flaig to prove the statements made. The following were confirmed as members of Engine Co. No. 3: Charles Greader, F. D. Johnson and P. Casey.

Foreman Auguste Saltzman of Alert Hose Co., read his report of the National Convention of Fire Engineers at Richmond, Va., which he attended as a representative of the Plainfield Fire Department. It was a most interesting account of the doings of the body, and a complete review of the topics discussed for the benefit of the fraternity. On motion of Mr. Depew, a resolution of thanks was passed Mr. Saltzman for the manner with which he had transacted his mission and reported the same to the Board.

The following bills were reported correct, and ordered paid: H. W. Bilyeau, $6.40; J. H. Sayres, 3.30, C. S. Guion, 15.50; W. Grattan, 1; J. Farley, 1; W. T. Newman, 3.50; W. Hand, 4; D. S. Pope, 16; F. Schuck, 63; Flannery & Cooper, 39.45; Berry & Thorn, 45.91; P. Gas Co., 77.50; A. A. Titsworth, 3.50. The Treasurer was also authorized to pay six months rent ($150) on Alert Hose house. It was moved by Mr. Depew that a lease of Alert's house for three years from April 1st 1882 be made at the annual rent of $300. Messrs. Flaig and Morris spoke against such a rate as exorbitant, and the mover spoke in favor of it out of consideration for the members of the company which had spent so much to make its rooms attractive and comfortable. The resolution, however, was lost. Mr. Gillies asked for the action of the Board regarding the condition of the heaters in the separate houses of the Department. On motion of Mr. Depew, the Com. on Repairs & Supplies were instructed to report in relation to such at the next meeting, and the cost of putting them in order. The Board then adjourned.

Personalia.

Among the just premiums awarded at the late State Fair, was that of 1st to Mr. L. V. D. Sheppard, of Bound Brook, on his four year old stallion.

Miss Gussie Murray a daughter of John W. Murray, Esq., is the real artist of the very handsome painting on satin that secured the first prize at the late County Exhibition.

Mrs. Wm. L. Wright was justly awarded the first premium at the U. & M. C. Fair, for her cotton patch-work quilt, although the judges neglected to include such mention in their report.

Mrs. Elizabeth F. Randolph, of Green Brook, has received through her attorney, E. W. Runyon, Esq., a check from the Government for the pension due her son Abel, who died in the service in 1864.

Mr. Isaac C. Harris the popular assistant of Mr. Mulford Estil, has been presented by his wife with "the prettiest baby in the State." It was born on Sunday and witnesses the truth of the saying —"the better the day, the better the deed."

Mr. Horace F. J. Drake, one of the founders of the Elizabeth Herald, has severed his connection with that establishment, after over seventeen years of active interest in its publication. Messrs. Cook & Hall will continue the publication of the Herald.

Fair Notes.

Metuchen carried off the largest number of premiums at the late U. & M. Co's Fair.

It is thought that the next Fair will be held the week preceding that of the State Fair.

The high winds played the mischief with tents at the Fair. The large canvass over the carriage exhibit was blown down, and two carriages considerably damaged. Of course the Association pay the damages.

Major Eugene A. Gross receives the highest compliments for the efficient and courteous manner in which he performed the duties necessary to his position at the refreshment tent.

3d Ward—Seaman's Livery Stable, 6th Street.

4th Ward—Ealing's Hotel, Front Street.

By Mr. Guion, a motion that the rules be suspended in order that the Com. on Salaries and Aud. Com. can report on claims of city officers and police bills, this evening. Carried.

By Mr. Gilbert, a res. that the Com. on Salaries, Offices & Elections see that ballot boxes are provided for each of the several wards on the occasion of the coming State and charter elections. Adopted. All aye.

By Mr. Gilbert, a res. that the Com. on Fire, Water & Lamps confer with the Gas Co. and learn what will be the cost of lighting the gas lamps the remainder of the year, and report at the next meeting of Council.

Mr. Guion moved as an amendment that the Naptha lamps be included. The res. as amended, was adopted.

By Mr. A. H. Smith, from Salary Com., as correct the following claims: The police claims presented this evening; O. B. Leonard, $87.50; J. VanWinkle, 75; H. Maynard, 3; Morgan Bird, 62.50; Henry Hamilton, 24.50. Ref'd to Aud. Com.

By Mr. Gilbert, a motion that a reconsideration of the vote be had whereby the Hack ord. was ordered to a 3d reading. Carried.

On motion of Mr. Gilbert, the ord. was ref'd to Law & Ord. Com.

By Mr. Tracy, the following Rule to regulate ordinances, and to be known as No. 28:

Every ordinance proposed for adoption by the Common Council shall be read three times before its adoption; first, when introduced, for information; a second time for discussion and amendment, and a third time for final action. When called up for the second reading each section of the proposed ordinance shall be read by the Clerk and be considered and acted upon by the Common Council separately; and when each section shall have been so read, considered and acted upon, the proposed ordinance shall be again read by the Clerk as a whole and be then still subject to amendment, which last mentioned reading shall be deemed the second reading; and no amendment shall be adopted or considered at the third reading, but at any time before its final adoption, any proposed ordinance which shall have been ordered to its third reading may, by the affirmative vote of two-thirds of all the members of the Common Council, be referred back for further consideration by the Common Council as upon the second reading, in which case the like proceedings shall be had thereon as are herein provided to be had upon the first calling up of a proposed ordinance for the second reading.

By Mr. Gilbert, a motion that when Council adjourn it adjourn to meet two weeks from to-night, at 8 o'clock. Car'd.

By Mr. Gilbert, a motion that a reconsideration of the vote be had whereby the ord. relative to Public Pound was ordered to a 3d reading. Carried.

On motion of Mr. Gilbert, the ord. was then referred to Law & Ord. Com.

By Mr. H. Smith, under suspension of the rules, from Aud. Com., the following claims as correct: J. VanWinkle, $75; O. B. Leonard, 87.50; Henry Hamilton, 24.50; Jas. Maynard, 3; Morgan Bird, 62.50. On motion, warrants were ordered drawn for the several amounts. All aye.

On motion, Council then adjourned.

It will now be in order to brace up our minds for a lively season in politics. Politicians will be politicians, and there are too many bones of contention at Washington to keep them quiet.

Netherwood.

Since the dedication of the Netherwood Chapel in June last, the pulpit of that place of worship has been occupied, in turn, each succeeding Sunday, by clergymen of almost every denomination of Protestants.

Among the clergymen who have officiated, none has given such marked and general satisfaction as the Rev. N. B. Thompson, late pastor of the 2d Baptist Church of Newport, R. I.

During the season while the hotel was open, the attendance was of so encouraging a nature as to impress the trustees favorably as to the feasibility of maintaining the services throughout the winter, and thus continue as a permanent feature the church services so auspiciously begun. More than a month has now elapsed since the closing of the hotel, and the "experiment," if it may so be called, of maintaining success without the aid of the hotel patrons, is an established fact.

While the Chapel trustees and others interested in this movement would have been even more than satisfied with acquisitions to make good the loss sustained by the departure of summer guests, it is a matter of very great surprise, even, that since September the congregations have steadily and progressively augmented in numbers.

For the past four Sundays Mr. Thompson has occupied the pulpit, and in the absence of any other discoverable cause for this "surprise party" in the way of increased attendance, it has been spontaneously and unanimously agreed that the Rev. gentleman must himself be the cause of this disturbance.

Netherwood, as is well known, is a quiet and peaceful little suburb of the city of Plainfield, modest and unostentatious, even though it has now street lamps lighted at night, an organized police, and water works and the introduction of the electric light in contemplation, and so the disturbance above alluded to was considered a sufficient cause for the calling of a special meeting of the only organized body of the residents of the place, viz: the trustees of the Chapel.

A full meeting of this body was held, and after probing the matter to the bottom, came unanimously to the conclusion that the Rev. N. B. Thompson was the cause of all the commotion and resolved to hold him accountable. This meeting of the trustees was held on the evening of the 28th ult., and a committee appointed to confer with the Rev. Mr. Thompson and request him to put a speedy end to the disturbance by accepting a unanimous call to the pastorate of the Chapel, and to appear in person before the trustees and give an account of himself in short order. The committee got the upper hand of the Rev. gentleman and brought him before the trustees on the evening of Monday, the 3d inst. The result is soon chronicled.

Mr. Thompson accepted the call from the 1st inst., and will next Sunday morning preach his first sermon as pastor of this young and promising interest. The Chapel is a beautiful structure, and occupies one of the most attractive sites in this city.

Mr. Thompson has already expressed his willingness to be identified with all good christian work in this section, and his effort will be to make the services attractive and beneficial to all. That such service is needed here is not questioned by any.

Judging from the increased interest manifested the past month, we predict a prosperous future for the Chapel, in that it will be a church home for a large class of people in this section who have not heretofore had within easy access any place of public worship. While the services have been and will continue to be of a Union character, no effort will be made to supplant, but rather to augment other religious service in this section.

Mr. Thompson has already defined his position; that he comes here to preach the pure and simple gospel, and to labor in harmony with all engaged in a similar work. It is wise that the interest be carried upon a Union basis until it becomes strong enough to merge into denominationalism.

Seats are absolutely free, and the poor will find as hearty a welcome as the rich, and the services are to be sustained solely by voluntary contributions. At 11 o'clock next Sunday morning Mr. Thompson will preach his initiatory sermon. A free and cordial invitation is here extended to any and all christian brethren who will rejoice in this new effort for the advancement of Christ's kingdom.

A further and invaluable acquisition to this interest is that Mr. Ginna, of Plainfield, has assumed the superintendency of the Sunday School. As every one who knows this gentleman well knows that with him at the helm of the junior branch of this church interest, success is already assured. To make the whole interest complete in its entirety, on Thursday of this week the teachers of the school meet for the election of a full board of officers. The scholars' membership now numbers over one hundred.

"HAWKINS" was out Tuesday night.

THE Fair season is about over for 1881.

"HOOPS or no hoops" is the vexed question.

POLITICS will soon begin to boom in Union County.

THERE seems to be no prospect for a fireman's parade.

MANY persons have taken down the emblems of mourning.

THIS spell of cold weather seems a trifle too utterly previous.

WHO's going to light the lamps, the Council or private citizens?

THE present term of County Courts promises to be a busy and lengthy one.

THE Crescent ave. church is sensibly considering the fact that it needs a new organ.

THE Democratic County Executive Committee meets at Elizabeth on Saturday next.

HEREAFTER the meetings of the Common Council will be held at 8 o'clock in the evening.

READ the adv. of Bachman, the Front Street Dry Goods merchant. We are convinced that bargains can be procured there.

IT is hard to tell which will bring the most pleasant expression into a woman's face—to tell her that her baby is heavy or her bread light.

THERE will be a Child's Fair held at the residence of Miss Flora Randolph on Peace Street, Saturday Oct. 15th, in aid of the Children's Home.

A BEAR has been discovered in the Netherwood forests, and a terrible warning is thus conveyed to those who hunt game out of season in the depths of Jersey jungles.

THE drouth has destroyed the beauties of our Fall season. The foliage of the trees are so withered that their appearance will not be half so beautiful as they should be.

It was Luther who said that if a man is not handsome at twenty, strong at thirty, learned at forty and rich at fifty, he will never be handsome, strong, learned nor rich in this world.

REPAIRS having been made to the public bridge over the stream at New Market, at the junction of Seventh street from this city, travel has once more been resumed over the structure.

THE "New Jersey Game and Fish Protective Society," whose headquarters are at Plainfield, will distribute 150,000 California Salmon fry in proper streams throughout the State in proper season.

MESSRS. Carney Bros., on Somerset street, in order to accommodate their increasing business, have been compelled to lease the second floor of the building wherein they are located. We are glad to learn of their prosperity.

JOHN H. MURRAY's circus, which visited our city on Tuesday, gave a most satisfactory show, although the attendance was unfortunately reduced in consequence of the failure of Batcheller & Doris' show upon a recent date.

THE Directors of the Public Library, whose nominations were confirmed on Monday evening, are all able and efficient gentlemen. Their selection reflects credit on the Mayor and their fulfillment of the requirements of the office, will be most creditable to themselves.

THE usual change of advertisement, by which Whitney of E. Front street keeps his patrons informed of the constant renewing of his stock, was received too late this week for insertion. We must not, however, omit to mention the excellent $1.25 kid glove he is selling at 75 cents.

ATTENTION of parties who propose visiting Newark is called to the advertisement of Mr. Ed. Kelly, No. 151 Market street, that city. "Ed." is a good fellow, and will be pleased to have his old as well as new friends call upon him. We can insure them a welcome reception and generous hospitality.

Death of a Valuable Mare.

Last Friday afternoon, after trotting one heat on the Fair grounds, near this city, the well-known and valuable trotting mare—"Flora Cleveland" was taken suddenly ill, and despite every attention and medical skill, died about 9 o'clock the same night. A post-mortem examination, made by Dr. Corliss, of Newark, revealed the fact that the mare died from pulmonary apoplexy. "Flora" was owned by Mr. George Cleveland, of Albany, N. Y., and had a record of 2:36. She was by Rysdeck's Hambletonian, dam by "Trustee, Jr.," and was 6 years old.

One Year Ago.

A burglary was committed at the Young Ladies' Seminary on Saturday and jewelry to the amount of $200 taken. Fall opening of the P. A. C. Gymnasium. Lawn party at the Church of the Holy Cross. First meeting of the season of the C. L. S. C. New Orleans' University Jubilee Singers at the M. E. Church. The Council was advised officially that the "Gravel Pit Nuisance" had been abated.

It is worthy of remark that the 4th of the present month, "one year ago," was recorded in the local columns of THE CONSTITUTIONALIST as "like a November day—chilly and blustering."

A Change of Base.

Peck, the irrepressible and successful merchant, who for the last ten years has supplied the ladies of Plainfield and vicinity with fancy goods at the corner of Front and Grove streets, has changed his location and is now domiciled in his new and elegant quarters at No. 28 Front street, opposite the Post Office, where he will at all times be pleased to wait on his old and any new customers. Peck has the reputation of selling goods at remarkably low figures. He buys for cash, consequently can afford to sell low. Call and view his handsome new store.

Light Wanted.

On Saturday evening last, in response to a circular invitation, a number of representative citizens met in Association Hall to consider the feasibility and best means of lighting the street lamps of the city by private subscription. Mr. John W. Murray, the signer of the call, stated the object of the meeting and the results that were desired. A resolution was passed to the effect that a committee of ten be appointed to arrange for the lighting of fifty or more lamps—to be selected in such positions as would best cover the largest section—and the following gentlemen were chosen: Messrs. L. W. Serrell, Geo. B. De Revere, W. J. Leonard, J. P. Dumont, Alex. Gilbert, Geo. H. Goddard, H. O. Newman, J. W. Murray, E. H. Depew and W. E. Stewart.

Colored Comic Opera.

The Hyers Sisters Combination, which is to give an entertainment of music, mirth and minstrelsy at Van Deventer Hall on Tuesday evening next, promises to be a success. The press of the country speak flatteringly of its ability, and the management of Mr. M. B. Leavitt has already proven most satisfactory in this city upon previous occasions. This gentleman is at present running the following combinations which have already achieved a reputation that proves the fact that none but first-class troupes are run under his direction: Rentz Minstrels and Vienna Orchestra, Grand English Opera Company, Gigantean Minstrels, and the Great Specialty and Rentz Santley Companies. Tickets and reserved seats may be procured at Dunham & Miller's drug store.

Union County Courts.

The October term of Court was opened Tuesday morning at the Court House, Judge Van Syckel presiding. The attendance at the Court room was limited almost entirely to lawyers, constables and court officers.

The crier called the Court room to order at about 10:30 o'clock, and shortly afterwards Sheriff Ryder presented the following Grand Jury:

James S. Green, foreman; Thos. Smith, Wm. H. Perrine, Ernest L. Meyer, M. L. Darby, Jacob Davis, Chas. H. Langdon, Thos. B. Clarkson, M. H. Acken, Thos. M. Martin, Rowland M. Stover, Wm. C. Ayers, Wm. McD. Coriell, C. W. L. Martine, Theodore Hatfield, Gideon E. Ludlow, John Wood, Daniel W. Day, Lewis T. Terry, Stephen T. Baker, Edward S. Newberry.

These were sworn by County Clerk Vosseller. Messrs. W. S. Potter, Joseph E. Allen and Charles Abbott were named in the full list but did not appear.

The Court delivered no charge, and the grand jurors chose their officers and retired to transact such business as should come before them.

The list of causes is not lengthy this term, though some important cases are to be tried. There are 18 Supreme Court cases, 14 in the Circuit Court, 4 in the General Quarter Sessions, 3 in the Jury Appeal list, and 9 in the Justices' Appeal list. It is very noticeable how few there now are on the Justices' Appeal list, to what there were several years ago, when about 75 cases of appeals from Justices occupied the time of Court and Jury. The District Court, from which appeals are taken only on questions of law, is to be credited with much of this reduction.—Eliz. Journal.

The Close of the Fair.

On Friday last the Third Annual Exhibition of the Union and Middlesex Counties' Mutual Agricultural Association came to a successful close. The many "side shows" were torn down and started on their journey to the Somerset County Fair. The exhibitors removed their stock to their yards and farms, and the buildings that a few hours before had been full of fancy goods, fruits and divers articles, were deserted. Although by Friday afternoon the general interest in the competitive departments of the Fair had subsided, yet the attractive speed contests announced for that day brought together a large attendance. The Grand Stand was most satisfactorily filled, including many ladies among its patrons, and the track along the home stretch and finish was crowded. The following is a summary of Thursday's unfinished race and Friday's contests:

FRIDAY, SEPT. 30TH.

3:00 CLASS.

5th heat. After several attempts for a start, and one threat of fine by the Judge, they got away well together. Nearing the ¼ Beulah broke and Baboul led for the first half, closely followed by Shaugraun and Daniel S., but on the turn into the homestretch was passed by both Shaugraun and Daniel S., Shaugraun winning the heat and race. Time, 2:40. Daniel S., second.

2:50 CLASS—Open to all. Purse $300. $150 to 1st. $90 to 2d. $60 to 3d.

1st heat. Breeze Medium at the pole. After numerous attempts to score the Judges fined very justly the driver of Shaugraun, Wm. McMahon, for continually scoring ahead of the pole horse after caution, $5.00. Shaugraun took the pole at the turn, the others changing places repeatedly on the backstretch. Shaugraun led at the half and continued the lead, winning the heat. Time 2:40. Breeze Medium second.

2d heat. To a good start Beulah broke on turn and was left far behind. The others kept a rapid gait to the half, Shaugraun leading, hotly pressed by Breeze Medium, Deucalion a poor third. Shaugraun held the lead and came under the wire first, but was set back to second place by the Judges on account of foul driving, and the heat given to Breeze Medium. Time 2:41½. Flora Cleveland second.

3d heat. Shaugraun first, time, 2:40½; Breeze Medium, second.

4th heat. Shaugraun won it and the race, time 2:43½; Breeze Medium, 2d; Deucalion, 3d.

Flora Cleveland was taken with a paralytic stroke after reaching her stable at the close of the heat and died a few hours later.

TROTTING TEAMS—Purse $100. $50 to 1st. $30 to 2d. $20 to 3d.

1st heat. To a good start Waring's team at the pole, but not quite up at the word. Silver Star and Rysbeck, Jr., had the lead at the quarter and held it easily throughout by ten clear lengths. Time 2:46¼.

2d heat. Silver Star and mate broke after the word, and failing to catch rapidly, Harvey and Windbeam acquired a lead of three lengths at the quarter which they gained on in the second half, winning by five or six lengths in 2:45. Silver Star and Rysbeck, Jr., second and Waring's team a poor third.

3d heat. After several attempts at scoring the word was received to a fair start, Harvey and Windbeam with a slight advantage. Silver Star and mate collared them on the turn into the homestretch, and led at the half, the other team close up. Silver Star and mate breaking badly on the homestretch, were easily caught, both teams coming, apparently to the audience, under the wire together. The Judges gave the heat to Windbeam and Harvey. Time 2:47.

4th heat. At the word Windbeam and Harvey had a slight advantage which they held to the half, and although hotly contested at the finish won the heat and race in 2:45½.

FREE FOR ALL.—Purse $300. $150 to 1st. $90 to 2d. $60 to 3d.

1st heat. To a good start Peralto led to the turn into the half, closely pressed by Clover and Banner Boy, Billy Button a poor 4th. Peralto broke badly at the distance flag and ran over the score, being passed by both Clover and Banner Boy, but recovering quickly kept in close company, coming up so rapidly on the homestretch that Clover only won the heat by a neck in 2:33½. Peralto second.

2d heat. At the third scoring the word was received to a level start. Clover at the pole held the lead to the half, with Peralto in close company, only daylight separating them, Banner Boy pressing Peralto, Billy Button three lengths behind. This order was continued to the finish, Clover winning in 2:35½. Peralto a close second.

3d heat. To a good start, Peralto breaking badly on the turn. Clover had a clear lead of 4 lengths at the quarter, Peralto running rather more than necessary on the backstretch. Clover passed the half two lengths ahead of Peralto, Billy Button a good third. This order was continued to the wire, Clover winning the heat and race. Time, 2:33½. Peralto second; Banner Boy third.

"HOPEFUL."

Between the races Hopeful endeavored to beat 2:23, but failed, owing to the condition of the track which obliged him to take the outside, but without skip or break turned the mile in the good time of 2:26.

"MUSIC."

Between the two last classes, Mr. John I. Holly's brown mare "Music," gave an exhibition of speed, making the first half mile in 1:25 and the mile in 2:53½.

Premiums at the Fair.

The following additions to the list of premiums awarded at the late Fair of the U. & M. C. M. A. A., and published in our last issue, have since been handed us by the judges of the respective departments:

DIVISION A.

Craig, Metuchen, blackberry jelly, 1st premium; Mrs. S. M. Craig, Metuchen, white grape jelly, 1st premium; Mrs. S. M. Craig, Metuchen, currant jelly, 1st premium.

LADIES' WORK.

CLASS 54—In addition to the premiums awarded and heretofore published, the judges in this class recommend Mrs. Wm. Woodruff's (Plainfield) embroidered ottoman be awarded a premium; Mrs. A. De Baud, Plainfield, crochet slippers, 1st; Nettie Hatfield, Dunellen, worsted slippers, 2d; that Miss Sophia D. Smalley and Mrs. Cyrus Boice, Dunellen, for lace aprons, receive premiums for excellence, and that a premium be awarded to Mrs. Samuel Wilbur, Plainfield, for child's dress, with rick-rack trimming.

DIVISION F.

CLASS 65.—Tubular Hot-Air Blast Stove, D. Littell, Plainfield, deserving of premium; Best display of carriage harness, Thos. Worth, Plainfield, 1st, $3; Best Single harness, same, 1st, 2; Best double harness, same, 1st, 2; Best display of carriages, Hetfield & Jackson, Rahway, 1st, 10; Best top buggy, L. M. French, Plainfield, 1st, 5; Most stylish carriage, same, 1st, 5; Exhibition of carpets, Pope Bros., Plainfield, worthy of premium. The complete list of awards in this division has not been furnished.

Probable Rise in the Price of Milk.

The effect of the long continued drought on the pasturage in this section of the country, has been such as to destroy entirely the grass so greatly depended on by dairymen for the proper feeding of their herds. In consequence, the milch cows have been fed for the past few weeks on "winter fodder," and the supply of milk has become greatly reduced in both quality and quantity. As no possible improvement of the present circumstances seems likely to occur, we may expect at any day an increase to 10 cents per quart in the price of milk.

Nature Reversed.

A phenomenon, rivalling in its startling features the instinct of the "Peace street cat," transpired at the residence of Mrs. J. Runyon, No. 7 Central avenue, yesterday morning. That lady is the possessor of a number of valuable Night-Blooming Cereus, which have been admired upon many occasions of their blossoming. Wednesday evening, one of these plants being expected to bloom—as is their nature—during the night, was watched, but no appearance of opening being observable at a late hour, it was supposed that a postponement of the event for another twenty-four hours, would occur. Contrary, however, to the laws of nature itself, and against all record of the doings of this peculiar species, the flower referred to bloomed during the broad daylight of Thursday forenoon, and was visited by many astonished witnesses of the unprecedented freak.

Coming to Plainfield.

The Washington Guards of New Brunswick, composed of members of Washington Eng. Co., No. 1, have decided upon visiting Plainfield, October 10th, on their annual target excursion. Mine host, Ed. Thorn, of the Mansion House, will cater for them.

Henager vs. Pangborn.

The trial of this cause came on before Justice Wadsworth and a Jury of twelve men on Monday, the 3d inst. A former trial resulted in a disagreement.

The case was elaborately tried and argued by Mr. Maxson for the plaintiff and Mr. Rayden for the defendant. After an exhaustive charge by the Justice, the Jury retired, and after two hours deliberation, found that the defendant was guilty of negligence and assessed the Plaintiff's damages at $28.

It appearing from the testimony that the varnishing of the carriage amounting as charged, to $18, had not as yet been done, the Jury struck this sum from the claim, as also $3 for the use of a brush.

We understand that the City Council is preparing an ordinance which shall accurately define the rights of builders to the use of the streets, and the proper care required from them during such use.

Ho, for Switzerland!

The excursion to Mauch Chunk, Glen Onoko and the Switch Back, advertised to take place on Thursday of next week, seems assured of being a remarkable success for many reasons. In the first place the destination, on the Lehigh River in the heart of the anthracite coal regions, noted for both wild and picturesque scenery, is a section of the country unsurpassingly attractive; while an opportunity to visit it at "excursion rates," with a party composed of friends and congenial acquaintances, is so seldom offered that the coming occasion will naturally be extensively patronized. Again, the organization that is to be benefited by the profits of the affair is as worthy a scheme as has ever appealed for the assistance and support of the public. Alike necessary in a city of the size, and looking entirely to the care and comfort of the afflicted in body and the saving of life, the Muhlenberg Hospital justly deserves the financial help of Plainfield's entire populace. Aside from these considerations, all may be satisfied that an entire day's enjoyment, unbroken by any annoying drawbacks to continuous pleasure or alloyed by the slightest desire ungratified, will result from the management of such efficient and courteous gentlemen as Messrs. Frederic Chamberlin, W. Rockhill Potts and Carl Schipper.

The New Congregational Chapel.

For some time past the people of Plainfield have been prepared by fact and rumor for the building of another church in this town. Last March, Mr. Jacob Kirkner generously donated the house and lot, corner of 7th street and Madison avenue, to the Congregational society, for a parsonage and church site. Ever since that gift was made, the minds of the Congregational friends have been bent towards the realization of the hope inspired by Mr. Kirkner's gift, of having a house of their own. The task before the young church was no light one, for one of the conditions of the gift insisted that the church should provide the necessary funds for building, so that the church should be opened free of debt. This condition only served to brace up their energy and determination to the sticking point. About two weeks ago a committee was appointed to consider ways, means and plans. The Ladies' Aid Society of the church also got together and finding they had in their treasury about $500, pledged a subscription of $1000. Last Sunday the work was undertaken in real earnest. After the Pastor had given an address suitable to the occasion, Mr. S. C. Boney stepped forward and said the time had come for taking up the donations of the society for building the chapel about which they had been thinking and talking. He announced it as their intention, confident as they were in the full support of the people, to proceed with the erection at once, so that they might worship in their new house by spring; and said that it had been decided not to publish the amount of any contribution unless at the expressed desire of the donor. In about half an hour, donations to the amount of $5,745 were promised, and this has since been supplemented by other amounts which inspire the belief that at least $7000 will be raised here of the cost of the building, which is estimated at about $10,000. The heartiness, promptness and self-sacrificing nature of this response augurs well for the assured success of the enterprise, and the lively way in which all took hold as was evidenced by the range of the contributions, from the Ladies' Aid Society's pledge of $1000 to one of $2, showed that none were willing to be left out of so good a work. We wish our friends every kind of prosperity in their undertaking, and we hope that all their well wishers in Plainfield will rally to their help in completing their task, so that they may realize their best hopes.

An Admirable Enterprise.

Seldom are the resident citizens of a place personally acquainted with its manufacturing interests, and in towns adjacent to large cities the public is generally given to the assumption of a belief that nothing constructed in its midst can compare with the work of larger and more extensive factories. A single glance at such a supposition would convince anyone of its fallacy, but unfortunately the subject is seldom if ever viewed in a reasonable light. It is a notorious fact, however, to those experienced in the matter, that work of any sort, necessitating the labor of many men in different trades to complete its finish—when constructed in large quantities at extensive manufactories—is liable to be hurried through its various stages, botched in many parts and wanting in that most needful feature of its excellence—the care, examination and faithful supervision of a responsible and interested superintendent. Nowhere more so is this the case, than in the carriage factories of the country; and many a purchaser who has paid an extra price for a vehicle on account of the prominence of the maker's name, has subsequently learned that the durability of the article has been swallowed up in the reputation of the manufacturer. We hear of "Brewster" buggies, "Pray" landaus and a dozen different carriages, with no other recommendation than the name of the maker; while exorbitant figures are quoted as the worth of these vehicles, merely because they have passed through the factory of the one who gives them the distinguished (?) title.

At the late Fair of the Union & Middlesex Counties' Mutual Agricultural Association, there were two articles in the building used as the Home Department, that attracted the attention of all. Even before the judges placed upon these exhibits the cards designating that they had been awarded first premiums, the admiration of the thousands who visited the place was claimed by the beauty, finish and remarkable general excellence of the articles to which we refer. One was a side-bar buggy and the other a surrey, both from the factory of Mr. L. M. French on Somerset street, North Plainfield, and specimens of work most flattering to that gentleman's taste, skill and execution. Had accommodation sufficient to allow of a more extensive display been available, Mr. French would have exhibited other carriages of his manufacture; and, as the highest honors obtainable was accorded those shown, it is safe to assume that the same success would have been attained by additional exhibits.

A visit to the work-shops of this manufacturer, shows the construction of road vehicles in every stage. From the blacksmith's forge to the varnishing room, every detail is carefully carried out and every inch of progress studiously watched. From the time the first piece of timber is selected and seasoned, and the first piece of steel tempered, until the upholsterer has placed his last stitch in the tufted cushions and the last rub has been given the polished silver trimmings—through every hand the carriage passes, its parts are examined and tested, and the work goes out from under the keen eye of the chief into the possession of the purchaser, a complete, perfect and handsome specimen of the art. We can safely recommend any of our readers to visit the factory of Mr. French, as we feel assured that our statements above will be more than corroborated by personal observation. Those, especially, who are thinking of purchasing Fall or Winter carriages, will find vehicles of that description on hand or in course of construction, which they may have trimmed and painted to suit their respective tastes.

As regards prices, the same visit will convince any one of the fact that the quotations of Mr. French are in every instance below the rate charged for the same articles at other factories. Besides which all costs of transportation are saved, and a gain of from 25 per cent. upwards is secured.

Being so capable a manufacturer as Mr. French undoubtedly is, his ability to do repairs of all kinds is unquestioned. Anything from a broken bolt to a wrecked body or running gear, will be replaced at his factory in a manner entirely satisfactory and at prices much lower than is charged for as efficient work, elsewhere.

IF the drouth of this year is as much of a precursor as those of former years, we are to have a cold winter.

Death of John P. Gross, Ph. D.

Although not entirely unexpected, the death of Prof. John P. Gross, the Principal of the Plainfield Public Schools, occured suddenly on Friday evening of last week. The deceased was born in Maine in the year 1841, and graduated from Bowdoin College in that State at the age of 22. He immediately adopted the profession of an educator, and in such a line of life achieved remarkable success and enviable triumph. His position at Montclair, N. J., established his reputation as a manager of public schools, and he was induced to accept the office of Principal of the public schools of this city by the offer of the largest salary then paid in the State for like services. Mr. Gross had conferred upon him, a few years ago, the title of Ph. D., by those who recognized his talents, and was one of the Educational Commissioners from New Jersey to the International Fair, at Paris, in 1878.

The deceased's appearance had long impressed his friends with the belief that he was gradually nearing his end. Such slight renewals of health and spirits as followed the rest and change secured by occasional relaxation of duties, were far from permanent. Each week of late had brought its record of failing strength, but against the warning of every such apparent symptom, the deceased courageously refused to give up the arduous charge he had undertaken. Although repeatedly urged by well-wishers and his physicians to entirely withdraw from active service, yet ambition and pride in the model school he had striven so successfully to form, outweighed all advice of the sort. However, on Monday of last week, he sent to Dr. Chas. H. Stillman the President of the Board of Education his formal resignation, requesting that it should go into effect on October the first. Four day's afterwards, on the evening of the last day of his connection with the school, he laid himself down and quietly passed away from the cares and labors of this world.

The funeral services were held on Sunday, at 3 o'clock p. m., at the late residence of the deceased on First Place. In consequence of the short notice given of the ceremonies, and inability of any but a public building to accomodate all the deceased's friends and admirers, but a small portion of those who desired to do him honor was able to be present, although the house was filled. The Anchor Lodge, F. & A. M., of which Mr. Gross was Secretary, met at its rooms at two o'clock and attended the funeral in a body—each member wearing crape on his left arm. The Rev. T. Logan Murphy, of the Church of the Holy Cross and Chaplain of the Lodge, read the Episcopal service over the dead, after which an opportunity was afforded for those present to view the remains.

On Monday the High School pupils were assembled as usual in the chapel, where Miss Buckley, the teacher of the Senior Class, announced to the school its sad loss in words appropriate and touching. After the reading of a selection from the Bible, the scholars were addressed by the Revs. Ketcham, Manchee and Bliss regarding the lessons taught by death and the importance of being prepared to die. Messrs. Harper, Murray and Stewart, of the Board of Education, were also present upon the platform. At the close of the addresses the school was dismissed for the day, and the other departments were not opened.

The Board of Education met at the residence of President Stillman (in consequence of that gentleman's illness) on Monday evening. It was decided to appoint Miss Julia E. Buckley acting-principal for the present, and the following resolutions were adopted:

WHEREAS, death having suddenly removed from this life John P. Gross, late Principal of the Public Schools in Plainfield, thereby severing an official relationship which has existed between us for several years, and bowing as we humbly do in obedience to the will of almighty God, whose decrees are ever inscrutably wise, and deeming the tribute justly due to the memory of our departed friend, it is

Resolved, That sincerely mourning his demise, we hold in pleasant remembrance our lengthened association with him, and bear testimony to the high attainments of the scholar, the usefulness of the citizen, and the sterling virtues of the man, which his life so conspicuously displayed to his own honor and for the benefit of others.

Resolved, That a copy of the foregoing, signed by the President and Secretary of the Board of Education, be transmitted to Mrs. Gross, and that a copy be furnished the journals of this city for publication.

At a special communication of Anchor Lodge, No. 149 F. & A. M., convened at its rooms on the afternoon of Oct. 2d, 1881, the following resolutions were adopted.

WHEREAS, It has pleased the Great Master to call the spirit of our dear Brother and Secretary John P. Gross from its earthly tabernacle.

Resolved, That in the death of Brother, Gross, Anchor Lodge has lost a worthy Brother and a faithful officer, one who by his uprightness, kindness and courtesy had commended himself to the respect and won the affection of his brethern.

Resolved, That we are again reminded in Brother Gross' death of our common mortality and of the importance of constant readiness on the part of each of us to be ready at a moment's call to heed the voice of the Master, to the end that with all worthy brethren we may in His good time enter the temple on high, not made with hands, eternal in the heavens.

State Firemen's Convention.

The annual convention of the Firemen's Relief Association of the State was held at Burlington on Wednesday, Sept. 28. Twenty-seven associations were represented by delegates. The President of the Association, Col. Bird W. Spencer, of Passaic, was prevented by illness from being present, and Mr. Chas. W. Byles, presided. The following officers were elected for the ensuing year:

President—Col. B. W. Spencer, of Passaic.

Vice President—Hon. Chas. F. Rub, of Hudson; Wm. H. Bennett, of Long Branch; Chas. W. Byles, of Trenton; Samuel E. Elfreth, of Camden; Fred. H. Beach, of Dover.

Treasurer—John McKiernan, of Paterson.

Recorder and Corresponding Secretary—Horace H. Brown, of Newark.

Financial Secretary—W. W. Slack, of Burlington.

It was decided to make an assessment of $5 upon each Association for current expenses.

Resolutions of thanks were passed to the last Legislature and Secretary of State for favors received at their hands.

It was resolved to print and distribute among the associations 500 copies of a law decision obtained by the Bayonne department to the effect if an owner of property goes out the State and himself insures his property in another State, he makes himself his own agent, and must pay the two percentum to the Relief fund of the department in his town.

A Committee was appointed to prepare suitable resolutions respecting the death of President Garfield.

It was decided that any association failing to pay its assessment should be ineligible to membership in the convention.

The thanks of the Association were tendered to the people of Burlington for their hospitable entertainment.

Elizabeth and Dover were named for the place of the next meeting and the former was selected by a very slight majority.

After adjournment the delegates were escorted by a band to a neighboring hall, where a splendid spread had been provided, after which, headed by the band, they visited the various engine houses in the city.

In consequence of the failure of the Secretary of the State Association to notify the Relief Association of this city, of the time of holding the Convention, none of its members were present. Messrs. A. L. Force and Andrew Jennings were delegates to represent our home Association at the Convention.

McDermott's Poems.

The poems of Hugh Farrar McDermott, recently published in elegant style by Geo. P. Putnam's Sons', New York, are receiving unlimited praise everywhere from the press. Speaking of them editorially the New York Sun says:

"These poems will win popularity and hold it through the whirling years. There are genuine strength and sweetness in the book, true manhood and humanity, the love of nature, and the life of thought. We congratulate Mr. McDermott on the laurels he has won."

In the course of a lengthy and exhaustive criticism the Washington (D. C.) Republican says:

"Fresh and sweet as the breeze of a perfect day in June, blown over lilac blossoms and beds of strawberries, comes to us a little volume to which its author has given the title, "Poems from an Editor's Table." As we turn its pages they fan us with the breath of love. Its notes are like the sound of a harp attuned to the desires and passions of the human heart. The rhythmic utterance of a poet's emotion, the beauty of perfect rhyme builded by one skilled in poetic architecture, we recognize on every page of this volume as plainly as fine pictures are recognized at an exhibition, the creations of the painter's genius."

SCOTCH PLAINS SCRATCHINGS.

Mr. Seely's paper mill has stopped running on account of having no water.

The presiding Elder, Rev. Mr. Dunn, will preach in the M. E. Church next Sunday morning week, Oct. 16.

Messrs. Welch Bros. of Westfield, have just finished painting the M. E. Church; it is a great improvement to the property and does credit to the workmen.

We are sorry to state that we have people in this village who are mean enough to rob a church. A gallon of paint and some empty paint buckets were taken from the M. E. Church last Tuesday night.

Mrs. William McDonough, aged about 55 years, a resident of this village, is cutting her third set of teeth. The incoming teeth are gradually pushing those of the second growth out of the jaw. Mrs. McD. is in excellent health, and is proud of this freak of nature at her advanced age.

A few of our most prominent citizens held a meeting last week and organized a Fanwood Fire Department, by electing the following officers: President, Chas. A. Smith; Vice President, Wm. H. Lake; Treasurer, Wm. Van Valkenburg; Secretary, W. D. Johnson. Next in order will be a hand engine company.

The seventh anniversary of Good Will Lodge, 101, K. of P., took place last Wednesday evening. One hundred and sixty-six persons were present. The various reports presented showed the Lodge to be in an excellent financial condition and growing rapidly. Grand Chancellor, Jas. R. Rutan, General, W. Ward, M. F. Badgley, W. Ferris and others addressed the Lodge. The banquet served in the large hall belonging to the fire company, was in keeping with the other superb appointments, and Good Will Lodge is to be congratulated on entertaining its guests right royally.

NORTH PLAINFIELD PARAGRAPHS.

Tax Collector Van Nostrand is after delinquents with a sharp stick.

The Somerset Courts on Thursday of last week, fined John B. Holmes $14 and costs on the charge of fornication preferred against him.

Politics begin to boom in Somerset County. The names of the following gentlemen are spoken of in connection with the Senatorial nomination:—John F. Talmadge, of Bound Brook, Prosecutor James J. Bergen and Hon. E. S. Doughty of Somerville. All are good men and whichever the choice of the Convention falls upon, the Democrats may feel assured of a winning candidate. In connection with the Assembly nomination, but one candidate is spoken of, Hon. William Schomp, for a re-nomination. That gentleman made a most capable representative last winter, and will be returned to Trenton by a handsome majority.

SPORTSMEN'S CORNER.

It is lawful to shoot woodcock and squirrel during the month of October, if you can find them.

The season for catching black bass with hook and line closes with this month in this State.

The penalty for killing ruffed grouse, quail or rabbit in this state before Nov. 1st, is $15 each. Members of game societies will see that the law is obeyed.

Trout fishing in this State closed on Friday, Sept. 30th.

Non-residents cannot shoot or fish in this State without first becoming members of some one Game & Fish Protective Society within its limits, under a penalty of $50.

One day last week, a large bevy of full grown quail were observed in the garden of a citizen residing on 3d street, in the lower part of this city. They remained there nearly 24 hours, and were evidently frightened into flying within the city limits by a pursuing hawk.

A large fish hawk was observed flying over our city on Monday morning last. This bird was out of his latitude and was probably driven inland by the storm prevailing along the coast.

WESTFIELD WISPS.

A new coat of paint makes a new wagon for Darsh.

Mr. J. F. Cooley is temporarily filling the position of night operator at the depot.

We learn with pleasure that our local Jubilee singers are practicing preparatory to a concert.

Mein host, Moffett, entertained Murray's circus to the entire satisfaction of its representatives.

The Westfield Athletic Club opened their Gymnasium for the Winter season on Saturday last, the 1st inst.

All of our Westfield friends in arrears for subscriptions are cordially invited to call upon our local and settle at an early date.

Attention is called to the advertisement of a Swiss Cottage to let, furnished, or for sale, under head of "Westfield Advertisers.

The erection of a new house on Quinby street, by Mr. Eb. Hart, is one of the many signs of improved times. We understand a tenant has already been secured.

Probably the fastest roadster owned here is the gray pacer, the property of Mr. John Roulston of the Turf Exchange. Look out if you meet him on the road.

Mr. A. Edgar Wilcox proposes, for the accommodation of our citizens, to open an Oyster saloon in the rear of the Turf Exchange on North avenue. Success attend him.

Our popular night operator Mr. Ed. E. Brennin, has left us and now occupies a position in the main office of the Western Union Telegraph Co. His successor has not as yet been appointed.

Our friend Mr. Chas. F. Courtney, who has been unable, owing to serious injuries received, to attend to business since July last, under the care of Dr. Sherman Cooper, has sufficiently recovered to resume work.

Master Chas. H. Darsh, the 11 year old son of Mr. John Darsh, our successful distributor of bread, cake, &c., received a special premium at the State Fair at Waverly, week before last, for water color drawing.

Not to be outdone by other Townships, parties unknown hung "Guiteau," in effigy, at the junction of Broad and Elm streets, on Saturday night or Sunday morning last. The effigy being cut down Monday night and appropriately burned.

Our valued Tonsorial artist, Mr. Frederick F. Heinecke, has been obliged to remove to the store adjoining, owing to the proposed erection of the "Wittke" building. He has properly fitted and decorated his new quarters and deserves the patronage of our citizens.

Among the winners of premiums at the Union and Middlesex Counties' Fair we notice with pleasure the first premium secured by the Cory Washing Machine, exhibited by Mr. Jonas Miller of this place. It is certainly a wonder, as it does a day's family washing in 40 minutes.

After 45 years time a circus, and a good one, visited us. John H. Murray's show, although fairly but not largely patronized, commences we trust a new era in this line. Westfield and vicinity can easily carry a good show (properly advertised and billed). Certainly no one could ask more for their money. The re-appearance here of this show should insure not only a good, but an overcrowded house.

The Westfield Athletic club proposes to hold their CLUB CHAMPIONSHIP GAMES on Saturday, Oct. 15th, 1881, at 4:30 p. m. The following events will take place: 100 yards dash, 220 yards run, 120 yards hurdle race (10 hurdles), 440 yards run, 1 mile walk, running high jump, running broad jump and hammer throwing. These events are confined to the members of the Club, but from entries already received, promise to prove very interesting.

The following resolutions were adopted at the Union Meeting on Monday of last week:

WHEREAS, In the providence of Almighty God, Our Chief executive, James A. Garfield, after eighty days of excruciating suffering, caused by the foul hand of an assassin, has passed away from the high trust of his great office, from the loving embrace of his family and from the presence of the citizens of this Republic, who delighted to honor him; therefore

Resolved, That we, the citizens of Westfield, N. J., assembled for this sad service of commemoration, reverently bow in submission to this appointment of our Heavenly Father to whom the prayers of the nation have for so many weeks been ascending for the life of the President, and which dispensations we devoutly hoped would have been averted; admitting that He knows the end from the beginning and will not willingly afflict the children of men; we receive this bereavement with such a sense of conscious sorrow as comes usually only with the loss of a dear and cherished personal friend.

Resolved, That in common with our fellow countryman we mourn the loss to the nation of one whom from his youth had commanded the respect of his associates by his mental gifts and moral worth. These, with gathered strength in his maturer years were unselfishly and effectively devoted to the service of his country on the battle field in the halls of legislation and as the chosen head of the nation. He walked among men with the fear of God, and in his day the victim of an atrocious crime bore suffering patiently and with christain fortitude, illustrating in himself the highest type of a true manhood, which by its example will be a rich legacy to the American people.

Resolved, That we cannot refrain from expressing our feeling of horror at the unprovoked crime of the murderer, and demand speedy justice at the hands of the law.

Resolved, That the manner of his death is a solemn warning to the American people and makes it our duty to consider carefully the causes which led to it, thro' party rancor and the demoralizing influences which the appointment to the civil service has upon weak and depraved natures and we pray that this may lead the people to remedy evils which have long been apparent.

Resolved, That to the bereaved wife and children and the aged mother we tender our sympathy in the hour of their great affliction, and most fervently pray that they may be supported by the arm of the infinite and rejoice that they will be comforted by the remembrance of the noble life so dear to them.

Resolved, That these resolutions be published in the town and County papers.

THERE IS MORE STRENGTH restoring power in a bottle of Parker's Ginger Tonic than in a bushel of malt or a gallon of milk. This explains why invalids find it such a wonderful invigorant for mind and body. See other column.

RESCUED FROM DEATH.

The following statement of William J. Coughlin, of Somerville, Mass., is so remarkable that we beg to ask for it the attention of our readers. He says: "In the fall of 1876 I was taken with a VIOLENT BLEEDING OF THE LUNGS followed by a severe cough. I soon began to loose my appetite and flesh. I was so weak at one time that I could not leave my bed. In the summer of 1877 I was admitted to the City Hospital. While there the doctors said I had a hole in my left lung as big as a half dollar. I expended over a hundred dollars in doctors and medicines. I was so far gone at one time a report went around that I was dead. I gave up hope, but a friend told me of DR. WM. HALL'S BALSAM FOR THE LUNGS. I laughed at my friends, thinking that my case was incurable, but I got a bottle to satisfy them, when to my surprise and gratification, I commenced to feel better. My hope, once dead, began to revive, and to-day I feel in better spirits than I have the past three years.

"I write this hoping you will publish it, so that every one afflicted with Diseased Lungs will be induced to take DR. WM. HALL'S BALSAM FOR THE LUNGS, and be convinced that CONSUMPTION CAN BE CURED. I have taken two bottles and can positively say that it has done more good than all the other medicines I have taken since my sickness. My cough has almost entirely disappeared and I shall soon be able to go to work." Sold by druggists. 1 1

MESSRS. H. O. RYERSON & Co., Druggists, Newton, N. J.: I am satisfied after a thorough trial of Ely's Cream Balm, for Catarrh, Hay Fever, &c., that it does all that is claimed for it. PECK'S CORNER.

Peck's Greeting
AT HIS NEW CORNER,
To his Friends, Patrons and the Public.

THAT after serving you just ten years from Front Street, corner Grove, he has removed to one of the largest, finest and best adapted stores for his line of goods in this city, at No. 28 FRONT STREET, opposite the Post Office, where he invites you to inspect his stock of goods, and the better your knowledge of goods, the better you will be pleased with them. With his greater and better facilities, he intends keeping a larger and finer line of goods than before.

YOU have had ten years of his manner of doing business, and in that time he thinks he has learned your tastes and wants, and, so far as possible and practicable, he will gratify the first and supply the latter. He will strive to offer you none but good goods, and such as they are represented, so far as his knowledge goes, backed by the recommendation of reliable houses.

HE buys his goods, as far as it is possible, from first hands and from reliable houses, for cash, and offers them at a very small advance. He sells a few goods at cost, but none less than cost. Buying for cash, he often buys good goods greatly below their value, and you can reap the benefit.

HE will continue to sell goods for cash, giving good goods at the lowest possible price. COME TO 28 WEST FRONT ST. He is now prepared for business.

RESPECTFULLY,
PECK.

MISCELLANEOUS READING.

EXPLAINING A HORSE-RACE.

Yesterday, says the Utica Observer, Swiggleton went to the races. Swiggleton is not a betting man, did not wager any money, and therefore didn't win or lose a cent. But he felt the excitement with the rest of the crowd, and when he returned home in the evening with his face flushed and his general manner betraying the effect upon him of the sensational episodes of the day, his wife noticed his changed demeanor. While he was eating supper his excitement entered into the performance of every little movement.

He held his knife and fork as Charley Green would grasp the ribbons; when he used his napkin he imagined himself rubber and applied the cloth vigorously to his face and head as if he was sponging a trotter; once he forgot himself and shouted "Go!" with a vehemence that frightened the baby, and, again, when Mrs. Swiggleton was pouring out his second cup of tea he startled her by saying "Time!" quite sharply. After the meal Mrs. Swiggleton opened the ball by saying:

"Well, William, did you enjoy the races?"

"Didn't I, though!" answered Swiggleton, giving vent to his suppressed feelings; "Oh, I tell you they were glorious. You ought to see a horse-race once. You've no idea how exciting it is. Why, when Humboldt reached his last quarter, yesterday—"

"His last quarter!" interrupted his listening wife. "Is that all the money he had?"

"No, no! Humboldt is a horse. I was going to say that when he came down the home-stretch, on the first heat yesterday, it was the finest sight I ever saw. His jockey—"

"My sakes! you don't mean to say that the horse wore a bonnet on his head?"

"Now, Mrs. Swiggleton, you've got to listen if you want to hear any more. The jockey is the man who drives the horse—who holds the reins, you understand. You don't suppose the horses run around the track without drivers, do you? If you listen, I'll explain it to you. In the stand are the judges, who give the word for the drivers to start. Before this time they draw lots, and the horse that gets the lucky number takes the pole—I don't mean that he takes it in his mouth, but that he is assigned to the inside of the track. Understand? Now, the horse that gets the inside of the track sometimes stands better in the pools. I was going to say that the first thing of all, the horses appear on the course with their rubbers—"

"Oh, yes, William; now I begin to see. They wear rubbers so that standing in the pools won't make their feet wet. Is that it?"

"Hang it all, woman, no! Where's your wits to-night? The rubbers are the attendants on the trotters; the pools are the bets the men make. I honestly believe the baby there sees through it better than you. You see the horses start some distance down the track in order that they may be nearly abreast when the wire is reached. The wire is something like a clothes line, only 'taint rope. Of course you know all about it. If the trotters are anywhere near even when they come under—not over—this wire, the judges give the word to go."

"If a horse breaks—I don't mean break in two—and gallops, instead of trotting, he is ruled out of the race. The horse who runs around the course fastest and finishes first wins the heat, and the best three heats out of five make the race. If two trotters come under the wire neck to neck the heat is dead. To-day, for instance, Humboldt won the 2:30 race. Just before the race began he sold at $50—"

"Oh, William! Why didn't you offer $60 and buy him. Just think; and I've been wanting a horse so long."

"Keep on. That's right. A woman who can't understand any more than you don't deserve a five cent horse. Fifty dollars is what they were betting on Humboldt; you couldn't buy him for $5,000. Well, let it go. There's no use in trying to explain it to you. While I was down to the Park I saw Mattie Hunter. Ain't she a beauty, though! It was a perfect delight to see her step. She has the most graceful neck I ever saw and the nicest skin. I'd give a good deal to have her, I tell you. She'd be worth something to a man—"

"Why, Mr. Swiggleton, how you talk! You ought to be ashamed of yourself, speaking about any Miss Hunter in that fashion, when you're a married man already, with five children. I see; you want to make me jealous, that's all. Tell me how she was dressed."

No wonder the neighbors thought the Swiggleton family were quarreling when that worthy proceeded to explain that Mattie Hunter was a trotter. He did it so loudly, you know, and with such original emphasis.

Where is the man that likes to grow old?

Or woman?

Where is the Israelite, indeed, without guile?

Or Gentile?

Where is Edison's cheap electric light?

Where is the man who cannot edit a newspaper?

Where is the rich man who wants to be no richer?

Where is the wealthy young Christian who wants to sell all his goods and give the proceeds to the poor?

Where is the country village without a gossip?

Where is the railway restaurant where is furnished good tea or coffee?

Where is the man who is a hero to his wife?

Where are all the lost pins?

Where is common civility on an elevated railroad car.

Where is last year's bonnet?

Where are last New Year's good resolutions?

Where is the real goose that laid the real golden egg?

Where are all the comets?

Whereunto hath gone all the pure whiskey?

Where is the woman that buys shoes one size too large for her?

Where is the woman who will say that her corns are caused by tight shoes?

Where is the woman who refuses to lace as tight as a drum when going out on a hot day?

Where have all the old-fashioned complaints of forty years ago gone to?

Where is the man who won't take an unprotected umbrella?

Where? Oh, where?

THE SMALL BOY IN THE COUNTRY.

A small boy who seems utterly destitute of holiness is up in the country spending his vacation. If he don't make things lively and bring his parents to grief, it will be wonderfully remarkable. Here is an extract from a letter written by him to a schoolmate in Cambridge: "This is the best place in the world to have fun. There is six of us fellers, and an old man who lives here said he wished we was all in Gehenna; we threw his wheelbarrow into a well and he couldn't get it out, and that is what made him swear. I got a fish hook stuck into my nose and don't you forget it ain't sore. The farmer folks put tin pans out in the sun to dry and they are sick pans to hold milk after we jab holes in 'em. The farmers mow down hay with a horse-rake and scatter it round with a grass-mill and pile it up with a machine. Gripple got one of his legs in a hay machine and got cut immense, and when he gets home he won't have any legs, only one; he'll be a healthy kid to play base ball. There was a great circus when Jimme's mother came and found him crazy, he was so sick, he et too many cucumbers and two quarts of huckleberries, and I et more'n he did. I want you to see Hickley and swap my rabbits for his gun. We fired a pistol at a cow four times yesterday and didn't kill her. Pistols ain't no good for game. We drowned six hens in a brook yesterday; it was sport to see 'em flop around. We shall drowned some more to-morrow and we shall drowned some more every day. The doctor has cured Jimme, and his mother was goin' to take him home, but here is something funny, Jimme put some squirrels in his trunk and they et his clothes all up. When you send the gun, send a lot of powder, and a lot of matches. We are goin' campin' out next week."

A LOVER OF THE PERIOD.

It was night in a Walnut street parlor. Out of doors the wind moaned and the sleet rattled, but within all was warmth and cozy comfort. The crimson upholstery glowed tranquilly under the soft light of the argand, and the flickering rays from the ruddy grate shaped many an elfin shadow on the carpet and in the corners.

Two parties, male and female, were sitting on one sofa.

The sofa was designed for that number, but to-night there were, accidentally, on one end of it, nine volumes of an encyclopedia.

Consequently the volumes were somewhat pressed for sitting room.

The occupants of the other end of the sofa were Paul Flump and Miss More McMinnywink.

Paul was saying: "Miss More, pardon my boldness, but I must speak. Long ago you must have guessed the great feelings which—which I feel for you. Oh! cannot you return them—some of them, at least? I—I love you, I do!"

"Paul," she answered, softly, but firmly; "Paul, you must not talk so! Forget it, I pray you. We are both poor, and should have no fine house nor pretty furniture, nor sweet carriage, nor lovely dresses, and—and all that. Forgive me, Paul, but I must have all these when I marry, and you cannot furnish them."

"Yes, I forgive you, I do! Fact was, I—I was under a false impression; I—er—thought you could supply us all them ere things! I forgive you!"

SELF-CONTROL.

In some people passion and emotion are never checked, but are allowed to burst out in a blaze whenever they come. Others suppress them by main force, and preserve a callous exterior when there are raging fires within. Others are never excited over anything. Some govern themselves on some subjects, but not on others. Very much can be done by culture to give the will control over the feelings.

One of the very best means of culture is the persistent withdrawing of the mind from the subject which produces the emotion, and concentrating it elsewhere. The man or woman who persistently permits their mind to dwell on disagreeable themes, only spites him or herself. Children, of course, have less self-control, and parents and teachers must help them to turn their attention from that which excites them to something else; but adults, when they act like children, ought to be ashamed of themselves. The value of self-control as a hygienic agent is very great. It prevents great waste of vitality in feeling, emotion and passion. It helps to give one a mastery over pain and distress, rather than it a mastery over us.

DYING IN OFFICE.

Many of the present generation have witnessed the death of every President who died in office. They have been but four in number. Harrison departed in 1841, and was succeeded by Tyler; Taylor died in 1850, and was succeeded by Fillmore; Lincoln was assassinated in 1865, and Andrew Johnson took the oath of office; Garfield died in September, and is succeeded by Arthur. Tyler was ill nine days, and Taylor five. Tyler was at his home in Virginia when Harrison died, and arrived in Washington forty-eight hours after the event. He never took any oath except the one which he took when inaugurated as Vice-President, although Webster urged him to do so. He dismissed all of his Cabinet except Webster, who subsequently retired.

HINTS ON READING.

Never read in bed or in a reclining attitude; it provokes a tension of the optic nerve very fatiguing to the eyesight. An exchange says: "Bathe your eyes daily in salt water, not salt enough, though, to cause a smarting sensation. Nothing is more strengthening, and we have known several persons who, after using this simple tonic for a few weeks, had put aside the spectacles they had ever used for years, and did not resume them, continuing, of course, the oft-repeated daily use of salt water. Never force your eyesight to read or work in insufficient or too broad light. Reading with the sun upon one's book is mortally injurious to the eyes.

THE TOWNSHIP GUIDE BOARDS.

The destruction of the guide boards throughout the State is generally the result of pure, unadulterated cussedness. Careless boys sometimes break them with stones, but they are more frequently destroyed by hunters who shoot at them for marks. The law inflicts a penalty of $50 for each offense of this kind.

The total school census of New Jersey comprised within its twenty-one counties is 350,685. The school districts number 1,371, and the public school houses 1,575. There are 120 non-sectarian and 107 sectarian schools in the State. The total number of teachers is 3,376, and the average cost of education per pupil is $18.89. The total amount appropriated for school purposes, for the year is $1,873,464.90, of which sum $367,412 is for salaries of teachers. The average monthly salaries paid to males is $55.83, females, $32.90.

"You made me think," John William said, dropping on a sofa beside a pretty girl last Sunday evening, "of a bank whereon the wild thyme grows." "Do I?" she murmured; "its so nice; but that is pa's step in the hall, and unless you can drop out of the front window before I cease speaking, you'll have a wild time with him, my own, for he loves you not." His descent was rapid.

He was a veteran toper, with a fiery red proboscis, but a most kind hearted and amiable man, and when the flies gathered upon his nose he used to say; "Oh, don't drive them away; they're having a good time, and if they can get their liquor without paying for it I don't mind."

Many picture dealers and even some of the illustrated papers are insulting the memory of the President by printing portraits which look nothing like him whatever. Pictures of death-bed scenes ought never to be placed in print. There is too much solemnity connected with it. What artist or picture painter saw Mr. Garfield while he was in the sick room?

The Hancock county (Ohio) Court of Common Pleas recently decided that a man who took a newspaper any time and refused to pay for it, was dishonest, and it was no libel to publish that fact to the world.

'What beautiful hair that young lady has,' remarked Jones in a half audible tone. 'Yes,' replied Pingrey, 'but it isn't her's.' 'Tis false!' cried the young lady, suddenly facing the rude fellows.

A naturalist has satisfied himself beyond a doubt that the average cat travels a distance of eighty miles every night, when there is no earthly reason for her moving a rod.

An exchange says that dirt is worked out of the ears by the motion of the lower jaw. That explains it; we have always noticed that ladies have much cleaner ears than men.

About the most guilty looking people in the world is a man accused of a crime of which he is innocent, and a newly married couple trying to pass for veterans.

It isn't because a woman is exactly afraid of a cow that she runs away and screams. It is because gored dresses are not fashionable.

Mr. Garfield was born November 19, 1831, in Ohio. Mr. Arthur was born in Vermont October 5, 1831. His wife died about a year ago.

Ah, Bill, good day. Been away? Yes, but didn't stay. Some future day, when I get more pay, then I may stay. Day day.

That was a touching act of sympathy in England's Queen ordering a floral tribute, at her own expense, to be deposited on the President's bier.

"I am just dyeing for that girl," thought Simpkins, as he sat in the barber's chair.

To be short in his accounts is, in a cashier, a crime; in a reporter it is a virtue.

The hotel register exhibits the writes of men as fully as any volume we know of.

No man reads a paper that he could not improve.

'Go to grass,' exclaimed the farmer, as he scattered his timothy seed.

Through all financial panics the puzzle fiend remains solvent.

IT MAKES NO DRUNKARDS,
Breaks No Hearts, Excuses No Crimes.
Dr. David Kennedy's FAVORITE REMEDY is not a disguised enemy of the human race; where it cannot help, it does not harm. FAVORITE REMEDY is a combination of vegetable alternatives. It does not heat or inflame the blood, but cools and purifies it. In all cases of Kidney troubles, Liver complaints, Constipation of the Bowels, and the delicate derangements which afflict women, the action of FAVORITE REMEDY is beyond praise. Thousands of grateful people voluntarily testify to this, in letters to Dr. Kennedy; and with a warmth and fullness of words which mere business documents and certificates never possess. It makes no drunkards, excuses no crimes, breaks no hearts. In its coming there is hope, and in its wings there is healing. Dr. Kennedy would have it understood that, while he is engaged in the introduction of his medicine, "Favorite Remedy," he still continues the practice of his profession. He treats all diseases, and performs all the minor and capital operations of surgery.
Dr. Kennedy's "Favorite Remedy" for sale by all druggists. $1.00 a bottle, or address Dr. David Kennedy, Rondout, N. Y.

ELY'S CREAM BALM
CATARRH
COLD IN HEAD
HAY FEVER
HEADACHE
DIRECTIONS. For Catarrh, Hay Fever, Cold in the Head, &c., insert with little finger a particle of the Balm into the nostrils; draw strong breaths through the nose. It will be absorbed, cleansing and healing the diseased membrane. For Deafness, Apply a particle in the ear.
ELY'S CREAM BALM
Effectually cleanses the nasal passages of Catarrhal virus, causing healthy secretions, allays inflammation and irritation, protects the membranal linings of the head from additional colds, completely heals the sores and restores the sense of taste and smell. Beneficial results are realized by a few applications. A thorough treatment as directed will cure Catarrh. As a household remedy for cold in the head it is unequaled. The Balm is easy to use and agreeable. Sold by druggists at 50 cents. On receipt of 50 cents will mail a package. Send for circular with full information.
ELY'S CREAM BALM CO., Owego, N. Y.
"MERIT MUST REAP ITS JUST REWARD."
Of the many Catarrh and Hay Fever remedies we keep in stock there is none of which our customers speak more highly than of Ely's Cream Balm. A comparatively new discovery, but one which, from the many reports and evidences of cures produced, is destined to be a leading article. We have never handled a remedy which has increased so rapidly in sales or that has given such universal satisfaction. Price, 50 cents.

LEGAL NOTICES.

Administrator's Sale of Real Estate.

BY virtue of an order of the Orphan's Court of the county of Union, dated April 27th, A. D. 1881, the subscriber, administrator of Alexander Dunham, deceased, will expose for sale at public vendue, on the premises, in the city of Plainfield, county of Union and State of New Jersey, on

MONDAY, THE SEVENTEENTH DAY OF OCTOBER NEXT,

at two o'clock in the afternoon, the following described land and premises, viz., situate, lying and being in the city of Plainfield, county of Union and State of New Jersey:

Beginning at a corner of the fence of Randolph Dunham in Exchange alley; thence along the line of Exchange alley, south forty-six degrees east ninety-seven links, or sixty-four feet four inches, to a corner of the lot now or lately belonging to Jemima F. POETRY.

THEY FALL AWAY.

When lightening strikes a stalwart tree,
And every fibre sorely strains,
The vines that feasted riotously
Upon the sap within its veins
Their nature's law at once obey,
And fall away.

The politician, meaner yet,
Thrives on his leader's fall or hurt
Before the storm his lines are set,
And he prepares for eating dirt,
He seeks to make desertion pay,
And falls away.

None are too low, and none too high,
To stab and leave their falling friends.
Their boasted truth is made a lie;
Their plant honor gladly bends;
They hasten to improve the day,
And fall away.

As nothing to the sordid soul
Are weary years of arduous toil;
His petty gains his acts control;
His eager nostrils scent the spoil;
In sunshine he must make his hay,
He falls away.

THE BARRETT ICE PRIVILEGE.

A few years ago, there were six in the Barrett family; at the time when my story begins, only Rob and his mother were left.

The first Barrett came over in the Mayflower, as second officer, and there had been sailors among them ever since. But Captain Barrett, Rob's father, was lost in the great September gale "on Georges;" John, the oldest, was buried off Cape Horn; Jim sailed from New York as first mate of a ship that was never heard from, and Joe was lost overboard from the Polaris in the Artic seas.

Rob, who was an active, good-looking, scholarly boy of sixteen, had inherited the same fondness for the sea peculiar to the family.

"But the little mother won't hear to it, so I must stay as I am," he would say, with a laugh.

For Rob had some old-fashion ideas of duty to his mother, not too often met with among boys of the present day, and he carried them out to the fullest extent.

They were quite poor in those days. The captain had left nothing but the small, one-story house by the sea, and thirty acres of worn-out land, sloping up from the shore, in the midst of which was "the ten-acre swamp lot," as it was called by the Covert people, though the boys always spoke of it as the "quaking bog."

The surface was composed of moss and matted grass which sank down in a very unpleasant manner when one stepped his weight on it. Sometimes a venturous boy worked his leg through this vegetable covering and went home with his trousers in a pretty state; for underneath was ooze and soft, black mud, which was popularly believed to extend clear down to the centre of the earth.

The swamp-lot was kept constantly water-soaked by the springs and small streams which floated into it from the ledgy hills above the house, and was regarded as absolutely worthless—rather an injury to the little farm than otherwise.

They kept a cow, a few sheep and some hens. Rob cultivated a small vegetable garden, and, when he was not at school, caught hake from his dory, within sight of the little white-washed house—this, of course, in the summer time, when the sea was tolerably smooth.

For the dried hake sounds brought a dollar a pound at the store, while the fish themselves, when properly cured, form, with salt mackerel, no small part of the winter's provisions.

The widow Barrett was a bright, cheery little woman, simply content with what God saw fit to make her lot. Her greatest anxiety was for Rob, that he should have a good education, for he was a most excellent scholar, considering his scanty advantages, and an omnivorous reader withal.

"Don't worry, little mother," Rob would say—"The way will be opened somehow;" for realizing, as he grew older, that he could probably never gratify his great longing for sea-life, he had made up his mind that, for his own mother's sake, he would give it up entirely and turn his attention to something else.

Rob was on his way to the Covert post-office, on a certain October morning, when he was overtaken by one Mr. Arad Potter, a shrewd and not overscrupulous speculator, who had made money in various ways ever since he began trading jack-knives in his extreme youth.

A very sharp man was Arad, not content, as his neighbors used to say, unless he had both ends and the middle of a bargain. He wore his hat very much on one side, sported a Black Hill diamond in a soiled shirt front, and was seldom or never seen without a cigar in his mouth.

Mr. Potter entered into familiar conversation with Rob—rather to that youth's surprise—spoke of the weather, the hard times, inquired with an air of interest, how the "widder" got along, casually alluded to the depreciation of real estate in the vicinity, and then, as though the idea had just occurred to him, remarked in a very indifferent sort:

"S'pose your ma would sell the 'ten-acre swamp-lot' at a pooty low figger, wouldn't she, Rob?"

"Why yes," said Rob, laughing. "I suppose mother would be glad to give it away, though I should advise her not to sell it just now."

For it flashed across his mind that Mr. Potter was, for some reason, anxious to buy the swamp-lot.

"Maybe he's discovered a gold mine there," he thought, with a half laugh.

"It ain't wuth—wa-al, it an't reely wuth a dollar an acre," remarked Mr. Potter, flipping the ashes from the end of his cigar; "but seein' it's your ma, I wouldn't mind given' her—wa-al, say twenty-five dollars for a clean title to jest the swamp-lot."

"No, I suppose you wouldn't," was Rob's placid answer; "but I guess we won't sell jest now, Mr. Potter," and Rob hurried off to do his errands, with his mind full of bewildered conjectures.

Twent-five dollars for "a quaking bog," where even alders wouldn't grow! What could it mean? for the quick witted boy saw that it meant something, of course.

"Think ye're sharp, don't ye?" muttered the discomfited Mr. Potter, angrily, as he looked after the departing boy. "Guess I'll see what the widder has to say about it," a lighting a fresh cigar, the speculator took his way in the opposite direction.

"Something's up, sure," thought Rob to himself, as he hurried home an hour or two later, "and I think when I tell mother of Potter's offer, I'll advise her to hold on to the swamp-lot awhile, till I can find out what has made such a sudden rise in this kind of real estate."

"What do you think, Bobbie dear?" was his mother's delighted exclamation, as he entered the old-fashioned kitchen, "I've sold the swamp-lot to Arad Potter for fifteen dollars. Was there ever such a piece of luck?"

I know boys—they call themselves young men—who would have stormed and scolded in a very unpleasant manner under similar circumstances, but I am glad to say that Rob Barrett respected himself and respected his mother too much to do such a thing. And knowing that she would feel badly if he told her what had passed between himself and Mr. Potter, and what his own ideas were about the matter, he said nothing, only that he was glad she had got the money—it would buy her a new winter shawl—and the subject was dropped.

About a fortnight before cold weather set in, Mr. Potter had a strong dam built across the outlet of the swamp, which itself lay in a sort of basin a few feet lower than the surrounding pasture land.

His evident purpose was to overflow it, but what this was done for, did not at first appear. But when the "boom" in ice began, and the papers were full of accounts of almost fabulous prices paid for "ice privileges," which lay convenient for shipping, whether they were mill-ponds or fresh-water marshes, the object of Mr. Potter's dam was obvious.

He purposed to overflow the swamp and make a ten-acre pond. From the pond thus formed to the warf below, it was, perhaps, two hundred yards, and a descending grade all the way—so that, by means of a cheap bridge or "shute," the ice could be sent sliding on its slippery way till it reached the very verge of the wharf, there to be taken on board vessels waiting to receive it.

A day or two after the dam was built, Rob, with bitterness of heart, started up to see what was going on there. Mr. Potter happened to be going the same way.

"You mus'n't mind my gettin' a leetle the best end of that 'air leetle trade, Rob," Mr. Potter smilingly remarked, slapping him familiarly on the shoulder. "A fellow don't have a chance to make a clean five thousan' dollars ev'ry day, an' a bargain's a bargain, which ever way it turns."

With a strong effort, Rob, held back the angry reply which rose to his lips, and walked along in silence, till they reached the swamp.

"Hello! How's this?" exclaimed Mr. Potter, turning very red in the face. "Why, what—"

For instead of the sheet of water which he had expected would meet his eye, lo, and behold! the swamp itself had gradually risen till it was nearly level with the land around it.

In vain Mr. Potter stormed, and I regret to add—swore. There was no lack of water, but unfortunately it was under the surface of the swamp, instead of overflowing it.

The roots of the mosses and grass could find no holding ground in the soft ooze beneath, so that the inflowing water finding itself deprived of its usual outlet by the dam, had raised the entire mass with it.

"I've be'n swindled," shouted Mr. Potter in a tremendous rage, when he saw that there seemed no possible remedy, except to cart away the entire ten acres.

And his anger was in no way appeased when Rob, shaking with suppressed laughter, remarked, pleasantly:

"A bargain's a bargan, which ever way it turns—eh, Mr. Potter?"

But now Rob set his wits to work.

"How much will you sell the swamp-lot back for—dam and all, Mr. Potter?" he asked, a few days afterward, when the swamp itself had frozen over, so that it would bear an ox-team.

"Sell!" growled Arad; "give me what I paid your ma, and what the dam cost me, an' it's your'n agin."

The upshot of the matter was, that after considerable haggling, Rob bought back the swamp, dam and all, for twenty dollars, to the extreme astonishment of Covert, who exclaimed loudly at his folly.

"But then the Barretts never had no forethought," as Aunt Polly Race kindly observed at the sewing society.

Now, Squire Pond—who had cleared up a very strong field adjoining the Barrett land—had an immense rock-heap as large as a small barn in one corner of his land.

"Let me have the use of your ox-team this winter, Squire Pond," said Rob, appearing before that gentleman, with a glowing face, on a sharp November morning, "and I'll haul your rock-heap away."

"Bless me, what is the boy up to now?" ejaculated the squire, looking at him curiously over his spectacles.

But Rob kept his own counsel.

"You'll see, sir, in due time," he said, and Squire Pond, with whom Rob was a great favorite, finally consented.

Rob worked like a trooper that winter. Early and late he hauled rock, and spread them in heaps over the ten-acre swamp-lot, and I should be afraid to tell you how many tons he deposited there before the end of the winter. And then having taken down a part of the dam, he waited.

Spring came, and summer, following on its heels, outstripped it; then it was autumn again, and now, with fear and trembling, Rob built up his dam in the latter part of October, and waited results.

Well, his experiment proved a complete success. The weight of the rocks distributed over the surface, kept the entire mass in its place—to Rob and his mother's joy, their neighbors' astonishment, and Mr. Potter's discomfiture.

In December it began to freeze—so through January—and then Rob had as nice a little pond of clear ice as there was in Maine.

He sold the privilege outright for that season, receiving the snug little sum of—well, I hardly dare tell you how much; but I know it was considerably more than three thousand dollars, and it is going to be a source of a greater or less income every year, as the demand for ice is continually increasing.

Mrs. Barret is prouder than ever of Rob, who has given up all idea of going to sea, and will enter the Mercantile College in Portland this winter.

"But then," as Aunt Polly Race remarked to Squire Pond, recently, "them Barretts, allus had plenty uv brains, an' was bound to git ahead in the world."

THE BANKER'S CLERK.

There is a very amusing story told of a bank president who used to have his clerks watched by a detective after office hours, so that he could keep himself properly posted as to any fact which might render any one of them liable to appropriate funds belonging to the bank. He had hauled up several of the clerks about their improper and extravagant expenditures, and was, as the story goes, sitting in his private office waiting the appearance of the new assistant receiving teller, Ferdinand Algernon Vere de Vere, who had been duly shadowed and reported on by Operative P. Q., of Judas & Gehazi's secret service. The clerk, having entered the president's office, was accosted with:

"Young man, what is your salary?"

"Nine hundred, sir, and I can't scarcely live on that."

"No. I should guess not. I suppose you know I am a cautious man, and now I will say that from inquiries made touching your habits, I have been led to form the opinion that you are spending money altogether too fast for the trusted employee of a wealthy bank. Now, do not defend yourself. Let me tell you where you went last evening. You left this office at four p. m., and with the messenger walked into the 'Pearl' and drank brandy smash. You played billiards from thirty-seven minutes past four to forty-two minutes past six p. m., and dined on Blue Points and prairie chickens and Imperial. You went to see Aimee in opera bouffe, went out several times between the acts, and before the piece was through you walked down and lost $5.25 at keno. You said keno was a foolish game, and you couldn't see any fun in it after which you drowned your sorrow in several julips, and took the thirty minutes past one owl car for your room on Fourth Eleventh street. Now, I want to know if you think that proper conduct for the servant of a bank like this?"

Now, the other clerks, on arriving at this point, had one and all admitted the truth of the operative's report, and, after begging forgiveness, had promised immediate and substantial reform. But this clerk was made of different stuff, and he said:

"I don't think anything at all about it. That report is a tissue of falsehoods from beginning to end, and as I happen to know, was made by Jim Muggins, an ex-convict and a son of a thief. If you ever want to know how I spend my evenings, I shall be pleased to inform you, sir, at any and all times, but now that this matter of fidelity to the corporation has bome up, let me read to you, sir, my special agent's report of how you spent yesterday afternoon. At two o'clock you met the notary of the bank and told him to send around the rebate on his commissions for the year, and he met you at the Jim Crow saloon a little later and gave you $366.16, for which you thanked him, and told him the directors would not change their notary for the present. Then on leaving the bank you met Bertram, the contractor for the stone and brick work of the new bank building, and he handed you a parcel and said 'here is your whack of the divvy,' at which you smiled and invited him in to drink. He declined. At seven p. m. you told your wife that there was a meeting of bank presidents at the Lindell that night, and you wouldn't be home till late. But instead of going to the hotel, you went to a house on Walnut street, near Twenty-second, where you passed the evening with the pretty widow you called 'Lena,' first giving her a watch and chain, with the observation that you had promised your wife a watch long ago and hadn't given it to her yet. You reached home about half-past twelve a. m., and had to ring the bell because you had dropped your latch key on Lena's carpet. You were surprised during the night by burgulars to whom Lena had given the key to your house, and while they took nothing of value, becaused your dog scared them off, you were so angry that you complained to the Chief of Police that the policeman on your beat was of no account, whereas you were yourself to blame. And then ——"

"That will do," said the President. "I see you are a smart young man. It is not necessary to discuss those trivial matters. By the way, what did you say your salary was?"

"Nine hundred sir."

"Well, it will be $1,500 after this, and I'll make you cashier as soon as old Kreiter goes on his next drunk."

"Thank your, sir."

"Oh, that,s nothing to be be thankful for. Just go along and attend to your work, and I'll take care of you. And by the by, you needn't say anything to the other clerks about my foolishness with that widow."

And the clerk sailed out.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

AS TO ADVERTISING.

If you have goods to sell, advertise the fact.

Hire a man with a lampblack kettle and a brush to paint your name and number on all the railroad fences. The cars go whizzing by so fast that no one can read them, to be sure, but perhaps the conductor will be obliging enough to stop the train for inquisitive passengers.

Remember the fences by the roadside as well. Nothing is so attractive to the passer by as a well painted sign: "Mullington's Medical Mixture for Mumps."

Have your cards on the hotel register by all means. Strangers stopping at the hotel for the night generally buy a segar before leaving town, and they need some inspiring literary food besides.

If an advertising agent wants to advertise your business in a fancy frame at the depot, pay him about two hundred per cent. more than it is worth and let him put it there. When a man has three-quarters of a second in which to catch a train he invariably stops to read depot advertisements, and your card might take his eye.

Of course the street thermometer dodge is excellent. When a man's fingers and ears are freezing, or he is puffing and "phewing" at the heat, is the time above all others when he reads a thermometer advertisement.

Print, in the blackest ink, a great sprawling card on all your wrapping paper. Ladies returning from a shopping tour like to be walking bulletins, and if the ink rubs off and spoils some of their finery, no matter.

Don't fail to advertise in every circus programme. It will help the circus to pay their bills, and visitors can relieve the tedium of the clown's jokes by looking over your interesting remarks about "ten per cent. below cost," etc.

A boy with a big placard on a pole is an interesting object on the street, and lends a dignified air to your establishment. Hire a couple.

Advertise in a calendar. People never look at a calendar to see what day of the month it is. They merely glance hurriedly at it so as to be sure your name is spelled with or without a p, that's all.

When the breezes blow, wafted by a paper fan in the hands of a lovely woman, it is well to have the air redolent with the perfume of the carmine ink in which your business address is printed. This will make the market for decent fans very brisk.

Patronizing every agent that shows you an advertising tablet, card, directory, dictionary, or even an advertising Bible, if one is offered at a reasonable price, shows that you know where to invest your money.

But don't think of advertising in a well established, legitimate newspaper. Not for a moment. Your advertisement would be nicely printed and find its way into all the thrifty households of the region, where the farmer, the mechanic, the tradesman, and others, live, and into the families of the wealthy and refined—all who have articles to buy and the money with which to buy them, and in the quiet of the evening, after the news of the day has been digested, it would be read and pondered, and the next day people would come down to your store and patronize you, and keep coming in increasing numbers, and you might have to hire an extra clerk or two, move into a larger block and more favorable location and do a bigger business; but, of course, it would be more expensive—and bring larger profits.—New Haven Register.

TRYING ON THE BONNET.

A New Haven gentleman, whose business keeps him up late at nights, was persuaded to do a millinery errand for his wife the other night, and as a result stumbled up the front stairs about two o'clock in the morning with a brand new bonnet held carefully under his arm in a tissue paper. As soon as he turned on the gas, his better half rubbed her eyes and drowsily inquired:

"You—forgot my—bonnet—didn't you, husband?"

"No I didn't. Here's the business."

"Oh, is it?" and the happy woman sprang up and ripped the wrappings off in a jiffy and, tossing her nightcap into a corner, adjusted the new purchase carefully on her head.

"How do you like it? It's becoming, isn't it?"

"Madame," replied her husband, with august deliberation, "the bonnet certainly is becoming, but somehow the rest of your costume don't jibe. Your dress, if I may so call it, has too much Hamburg edging and not enough overskirt. I think you need a little knife pleating and a couple of extra ruffles—"

"Oh, you mean—"

"And then, too, the bonnet has too much color for the rest of the tout ensemble, if I may borrow from the French."

"You hateful thing! I'll throw the whole concern out of the window if you don't tell me just how it looks."

"That's what I'm trying to do, my dear. The bonnet looks 'immense.' In your present costume you couldn't fail to make a hit on the street, and just as like as not land in the police station. I should think some milliner had hired the statue of Queen Zenobia for a dummy to show off her goods."

"Dummy, dummy, did you say? Oh, I'll let you know I'm no dummy." And she sat on the edge of the bed and lectured and lectured until the wretched man had been hummed to sleep by the monotony of her voice. But, however, she didn't take the bonnet off. She went and rigged herself up in the best duds she had, and when he awoke in the morning she was promenading about the room trying the affect of posing in attitudes before the mirror.

A nice looking old lady, with a snowy circle of lace about her head, sat in a Philadelphia street car the other day and drew up her skirts nervously, lest the current of tobacco juice that was pouring from the mouths of two loafers next to her should deluge them.

"Conductor," she asked, timidly, when he came in, "isn't it against the rules to spit on the floor of the car?"

"No, ma'am," replied the conductor, "spit wherever you like."

THIRD ASSEMBLY DISTRICT DEMOCRATIC CONVENTION.

The Democratic voters of the Third Assembly District, County of Union, are requested to meet in their respective Wards and Townships, for the purpose of appointing Delegates to attend a Convention at "Moffett's Hall," Westfield, on MONDAY, OCTOBER 31st, 1881, at 2 o'clock p. m., to nominate a Candidate for the House of Assembly. The basis of representation in said Convention will be one Delegate for every fifty Democratic votes, and one for every fraction over twenty-five, cast at the last Gubernatorial election, making the total number of Delegates thirty-four, and apportioned as follows:

Rahway,	1st Ward	3
"	2d "	3
"	3d "	5
"	4th "	3
Plainfield		12
Westfield		5
Fanwood		2
Clark		1

JOHN L. CROWELL,
Chairman of last Convention.

Somerset County Democratic Convention.

The Democratic voters of Somerset County will meet in County Convention at the Court House in Somerville, on Thursday, October 27th, 1881, at 10 o'clock A. M., for the purpose of nominating a candidate for State Senator, Member of Assembly and three Coroners.

Pursuant to the above call the Democratic voters will meet in the different townships of the County, on Saturday, October 22, 1881, at 2 o'clock P. M., at the following named places, for the appointment of the number of delegates set opposite each township:

Bridgewater, Somerset Hall, Somerville,	8
Bernards, Bernardsville Hotel,	5
Bedminster, Beavers' Hotel,	3
Branchburgh, North Branch Hotel,	2
Franklin,	5
Hillsborough, Neshanic,	6
North Plainfield, Dennler's Hotel,	5
Montgomery, Harlingen Hotel,	3
Warren, Mount Bethel Hotel,	3

By order Co's Ex. Com.

Democrats—Attention.

The Democracy of the City of Plainfield will meet at their headquarters, Berry's building, Front street, on Friday evening the 28th inst. at 8 o'clock, to elect twelve delegates to represent said City in the County Convention to be held at the City of Elizabeth on the 1st day of November next; also twelve delegates, to represent said City at the Assembly Convention to be held at Westfield on the 31st day of October instant.

JAMES E. MARTINE, Pres.
LOUIS F. WADSWORTH,
Secretary.

THE PRESIDENT OF THE SENATE.

The Democrats of the United States Senate vindicated the rights of their constituents and the majesty of the law by their action on Monday in electing Senator Bayard as president pro tem of that body. He is just the man to preside in an able, courteous and satisfactory manner over the Senate, but it must be recognized that Mr. Bayard holds his position by a very uncertain tenure. Since his election three Republican senators have been admitted, and if a resolution to declare Senator Anthony President pro tempore were before the Senate, and Mr. Davis should abstain from voting, Mr. Anthony would be elected. It is only necessary that Mr. Davis should remain silent on his perch on the fence, and the Republicans would have a majority of one. Then, again, if Mr. Davis were to be presented as the Republican candidate for presiding officer, and should vote for himself, or should even abstain from voting, he would be elected.

LATER.

Since the above was written and in type, the telegraph announces that at the opening of the Senate on Thursday morning, Senator Logan offered a resolution that David Davis, (Independent), of Illinois, be elected President pro tem. Senator Pendleton moved that the resolution lie over for one day, but withdrew the same at the opening of the Senate at 1 p. m. A vote was then taken on Mr. Logan's resolution, which resulted in the election of Mr. Davis as President pro tem, by a vote of 36 ayes to 34 nays, Messrs. Davis and Bayard not voting.

PARNELL ARRESTED.

Parnell, the great Irish agitator, was arrested yesterday (Thursday) at the King's Bridge Railway Station, Ireland, by order of the British Government. Parnell was on his way at the time to attend the County Kildare Convention, where he was advertised to address an assemblage of Land Leaguers. Great excitement existed over the arrest.

DEMOCRATIC.

The Massachusetts Democratic State Convention resolved as follows:

"That the civil service ought to be simplified and reduced from its present overgrown and corrupting proportions.

That appointments should be regulated by law, and removed as far as possible from personal favoritism and political patronage.

That all subordinate civil officers should know and feel that, during their prescribed term of service, they owe all to the country and nothing to party chiefs."

Thereby is soundness expressed. Such adopted action would work lasting National good in many ways.

It would put an end to the villainous breed of Guiteaus, add dignity to free government, and protect the pockets of the people.

REFORM is the thing needed.

The Republicans carried Iowa and Ohio on Tuesday last in the State elections, by reduced majorities.

THE COUNTY CONVENTION.

The Democratic County Executive Committee have appointed the 1st day of November for the time of holding a Convention to place in nomination candidates for Senator, Sheriff and Coroners. It is unnecessary for us to advise the Democracy what to do in the approaching Convention. It is only necessary to nominate good men for the positions named above, and they can be elected. Let harmony prevail at the primaries, and select capable persons to represent the Democracy in Convention. Every voter knows the importance of the approaching election. The County is Democratic if the right kind of men are selected for the honors to be bestowed.

STALWARTISM.

Speaking of the late Republican State Convention held in the City of New York, a well-known journalist says:

"Insincerity and duplicity mark the two sessions that were held.

Imagine Pulp-headed Miller as an advocate of any reform.

Hear them shout against machines and bossism and then lay a resolution on the table that aims at the destruction of one of the most odious machines that ever ran a party.

If this is the kind of "reform" we are to have, heaven help the party.

Fraud, deception, catch-penny appeals, promises that have no substance, make up the record of the day's work.

If they must lie and squirm and deceive at this stage of the game they must appreciate the weakness of their position, and that they will take the most desperate means to perpetuate their powers is not to be doubted.

Thus bad begins, but worse remains behind.

The outlook for the party is dark enough."

For the information of our Republican friends, and to exonerate ourselves from the charge of fierce partisanship, we would add, that the foregoing extracts were taken from the Commercial Advertiser, edited by Hugh Hastings, a Stalwart of the Stalwarts.

THE SAME AS EVER.

We sometimes hear political opponents attempting to draw a disparaging comparison between the Democratic party of to-day and that of former years.

The Democracy of Jefferson and Jackson, according to such wiseacres, was of purer character and nobler aim than that of Hancock and Bayard.

Indeed!

What excuses circumstances evolve? If Democracy in the earlier days of the Republic was such a worthy organization, why did it then receive the most unprincipled hostility that adverse partisanship could possibly invent? Why were Jefferson and Jackson, two of the best patriots that ever lived, made life-long targets for the poisoned arrows of detraction because of their unflinching allegiance to the Democratic party?

The comparison is absurd and reveals at a glance its intent.

The Democratic party in 1881 is precisely what it was in 1787.

Its principles are unchanged and changeless.

It is warred against now as it was then, but by foes wearing a different badge.

It rallies around the same standard and strives for the same object—the good of the people.

Men are mortal, principles are eternal. Democracy is the same as ever.

GUITEAU INDICTED.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 8.

The formal indictment against Chas. Guiteau for the murder of James A. Garfield was given to the Grand Jury this morning. It is a voluminous document, consisting of eleven counts. The first count recites the date and circumstances of the assault and death. The second alleges death from the effects of the shot. The third includes the place where the deceased languished and died; and the other counts form the legal presentment of the case to satisfy all the requirements in regard to the exact locality of the shooting and subsequent circumstances. The jury considered the matter until noon and returned a true bill. The prisoner will be arraigned next week.

Duty demands the smashing of all corrupt political machines, large or small. It is time for the people to exercise sovereignty and preserve, not only their individual rights and interests, but the character of representative institutions.

The "National Greenback, Labor, Reform Party" of Union County met at Elizabeth on Monday last and nominated candidates for Senator, Sheriff and Coroners. Our fellow townsman, F. M. Bacon was elected permanent President of the organization. It is not expected that the candidates nominated will be elected at the approaching election.

The Democratic candidate for State Treasurer in Pennsylvania is Orange Noble, of Erie. He is an upright and intelligent business man, clear of all rings and cliques, and the determined opponent of plundering monopolists of every name and grade. They will endeavor to defeat him and through the foulest of means, but we hope honesty will triumph in his election.

The ex-Confederate soldiers who held a reunion at Moberly, Mo., deny in their resolutions that any ex-Confederate soldier desires a pension from the Federal government or any State, and re-affirm their acceptance of the issues of the late war. They also passed a resolution of condolence and sympathy with the country at the death of President Garfield and call for justice against the assassin Guiteau.

Had Mr. Conkling for a moment thought that the Legislature of New York would have refused to re-elect him Senator, or that his particular friend and fellow partisan, Mr. Arthur, was destined soon to be President of the United States, instead of hastily throwing up his commission, the combined strength of forty horses could not have pulled him out of the Senate. Human life is replete with foolish actions and strange events. Even the assumed wisdom of a Senator may evaporate into folly.

Happily our country has been freed from the incubus of personal slavery. Human chattels are no longer merchantable. There is, however, another species of bondage, exacting and cruel, now artfully striving for mastery, and that is the mercenary power of associated money, or, in other words, heartless monopoly. It will, if it can, regardless of means, rule with iron hand, and unless the American people interpose sovereign might, rivet around their limbs stronger chains than ever encircled the toiling menials of the South.

ONE HUNDRED MILES AN HOUR.

The second locomotive of the Fontaine patent has just been turned out of the Grant Locomotive Works at Paterson, and is now being tested on the New York, Lake Erie and Western Railroad. The machinery of this engine is all above the boiler. A big pair of driving wheels rests on the smaller set below, moving them by friction, so that when the upper pair is going at the rate of 60 miles an hour the lower pair is carrying the locomotive at the rate of 90 miles. The first locomotive of the kind turned out, it is said, made 90 miles an hour with ease on a Canadian railroad. The inventor enthusiastically predicts that this one will be driven at the rate of 100 miles an hour.

FIGURING UP THE COST.

The Troy Times says: Secretary Brown, after figuring up for a moment, estimated that the cost of the President's illness would not be far short of $250,000. The doctors, he thought, with the exception of Barnes and Woodward, who as army surgeons are expected to attend the President as part of their duties, should receive about $200,000. Doctor Reyburn has been in attendance 68 days, which, at $100 a day would entitle him to $6,800. Dr. Bliss will probably receive $25,000, and Drs. Agnew and Hamilton's bill will not it is thought, be more than $15,000 apiece. "A singular thing," said Mr. Brown, "and one which indicates the feeling of people in the matter, is that we experience the greatest difficulty in getting bills from any one."

MRS. GARFIELD'S MOURNING.

Andrews' American Queen, a fashion authority, says the mourning dresses of Mrs. Garfield, Miss Mollie Garfield, Mrs. Rockwell and Miss Rockwell were ordered of a leading New York house at 2:30 p. m. and finished at 4:30 p. m. the same day, the eight garments with accessories being fitted and made in a little less than two hours' actual time.

The material of which they were made was Henrietta cloth, and the trimming is English crape. Mrs. Garfield's, of course, was made simply, a fold eighteen inches deep trimmed the underskirt, while the very plain overskirt was trimmed to match. The basque was trimmed with collar, cuffs, and deep reveres of crape. Her bonnet was a simple, small capote shape, trimmed with folds of crape, and the long, heavy, rich veil falling in folds over the face; a simple widow's border finished the inside.

For Miss Mollie Garfield, who is yet a young girl, a dress was prepared of Henrietta cloth, with a skirt tucked with five tucks heading a box plaiting three inches deep. In place of an overskirt a scarf drapery of crape was passed around the hips, terminating in a bow on the left side. The waist was shirred into a yoke, and the belt and bow to fasten it were of crape. Her hat was a wide brim, made of very rich mourning silk, trimmed with loops and bow of crape. Mrs. Rockwell's dress was of heavy serge trimmed plainly with folds of the same material, and with crape on the neck and sleeves. Her bonnet was of mourning silk with bows of crape.

Miss Rockwell's dress was of Henrietta cloth, trimmed with a deep kilting on the skirt, over which the apron over the skirt fell in soft folds. The trimming on the overskirt was a heavy mourning fringe. The waist was laid in box plaits with a rolling collar and deep cuffs of crape. Her hat was plain with crape bows and silk. All the outside wraps were of the same material as the dresses and made with great taste, but very simply.

Foxhall has won the Cesarewitch, and his plucky owner, Mr. James R. Keene, heartily deserves the congratulations of every true lover of "the sport of kings" on both sides of the Atlantic.

Governor Charles Foster is a very rich man, and there is a breathless interest in Ohio to learn how much he subscribed to the Garfield fund. Ditto Rutherford B. Hayes! Ditto John Sherman!!

The Republican State Convention met in New York on the 5th, and nominated Ira Davenport as Controller; J. W. Husted, State Treasurer; Silas Seymour, State Engineer; F. M. Finch, Judge of the Court of Appeals; J. B. Carr, Secretary of State, and Leslie W. Russell, Attorney General.

Germany has practically demonstrated that the unsightly telegraph pole is not an unpleasant necessity. Two hundred and twenty-one towns and cities have been connected telegraphically by a subterranean system, and the risk of accidents by wind, ice and conflagrations is thus reduced to a minimum, while architectural beauties escape the impairment which is so marked an evil in our cities. This country cannot afford to be behind the age in this or any other respect. The poles must go.

The Democrats of New York State on Wednesday last nominated State officers as follows: For Secretary of State—William Purcell, of Monroe. For Controller—George H. Layham, of Yates. For Attorney-General—Roswell A. Parmenter, of Rensselaer. For State Treasurer—Robert A. Maxwell, of Genesee. For State Engineer and Surveyor—Thomas Evershed, of Orleans. For Judge of Court of Appeals—Augustus Shoonmaker, Jr., of Ulster.

Marvin, the much-married rascal, whom Virginia justice tripped up after a long and successful career in his original and peculiar field of crime, was sentenced on Wednesday to ten years' imprisonment. Before receiving his sentence he roundly abused the witnesses, the court officers and the jury, which perhaps eased his mind but was not calculated to dispose any one to take a lenient view of his case. He evidently deserves all he will get in the way of punishment. It is to be hoped that the wide publicity given to Marvin's offences will have some effect in hindering young women from marrying plausible strangers on short acquaintance.

A mistaken idea prevails in reference to the circumstances of the widow of President Lincoln and the way she was treated by the Government, as represented in Congress, after Mr. Lincoln's death. She was not, as has been stated, treated shabbily, nor has she been living in poverty. Immediately after the assassination of Mr. Lincoln a law was passed giving her a year of her husband's salary, $25,000. Afterwards an act was passed permitting Mrs. Lincoln to have all letters sent to her free of postage, and her own correspondence was also franked. In 1870 a law was enacted giving the widow $3,000 a year during her life. Lincoln, though not wealthy, left considerable property at his death, enough to maintain his family in a modest manner of life.

New Hampshire is a State naturally grand. From her sturdy soil Mount Washington climbs skyward, and around its base school-houses dot the road-sides. New Hampshire raises the finest of pumpkins and the most wonderful of statesmen. One of them, when recently debating a bill before the House of Assembly, denounced it "as treacherous as was the stabbing of Cæsar by Judas." Being questioned as to the authenticity of that, he shook his shaggy locks, admitted the error, but declared that "Hannibal" was the Roman assassin, not Judas. That chap would no doubt willingly accept either a college professorship of history or a seat in the American Senate—at five thousand a year.

As if to pursue President Garfield with the scum and dirt of the last campaign even unto death, Guiteau's blow was such as to make the figures "329" prophetic. From the day of his election, Nov. 2, 1880, until the day of his burial, Sept. 26, 1881, including both dates, were exactly 329 days. This is not less singular than the number 42 of which the President was so afraid. President Hinsdale, his warmest personal friend, in the last Independent, tells of Garfield's superstitious regard for the number 42; but on what it was founded he does not state. An employee of the Paterson Press office notes that Garfield was:

Born, Nov.	19
Elected, Nov.	2
Shot, July.	2
Died, Sept.	19
Total	42

All these figures are coincidents no doubt, and yet singular.

The remains of President Garfield were transfered late Wednesday night of last week from the casket in which they came from Elberon, to an air-tight casket made of sheet bronze. Mayor Herrick received a letter dated September 28, stating that, on the representation of the Union League Club and prominent citizens of New York, that the body was not placed in a proper receptacle, the Metallic Burial Case Company of New York offered a casket which was made specially for the purpose. Mrs. Garfield and Dr. J. H. Robson were summoned by telegraph, and came to see the casket, which was sent on by a special car. Mrs. Garfield was much pleased with the gift, and in accordance with her wishes, the transfer of the body was made. The new casket is of sheet bronze, elaborately wrought, with gold trimmings and a solid gold plate, to be fixed on the top of the casket as Mrs. Garfield directs. The remains were in an unexpectedly good state of preservation; and now that a proper casket has been provided it is probable that the plans of the Monument Committee will be changed, and instead of the body being put in the ground, a crypt will be erected and the casket exposed to view.

SPORTSMEN'S CORNER.

The Carp fish put in the pond on the premises of Fish Warden Percy C. Ohl, near this city, last June, have thrived splendidly. When put in the water of this pond, they were about four inches in length. Specimens of this fish have recently been seen, which measure twenty inches in length.

The consignment of 50,000 California salmon eggs to the New Jersey Game & Fish Protective Society from Prof Baird of the U. S. Fish Commission, arrived in this city on Friday last and were immediately forwarded to the State Fishery Establishment at Bloomsbury, N. J., where they will be hatched out, and afterward distributed in proper streams throughout the State.

Resolutions of Respect.

At a special meeting of Warren Engine Co., No. 1, held Wednesday evening, the 12th inst., a special committee was appointed to draft proper resolutions in relation to the death of Mrs. Margaret Harding, the mother of the foreman of this company. Pursuant to appointment, the committee submitted the following preamble and resolutions which were unanimously adopted:

WHEREAS, William Harding, the foreman of this company, has, through the will of Divine Providence, met with a sudden and sad bereavement by the death of his mother, Mrs. Margaret Harding, we, the members of said company, sympathizing and condoling with our foreman in his affliction, do in testimony of the love and respect we bear him, adopt the following resolutions:

Resolved, That while submitting with resignation to the decree of our Heavenly Father, through which great sorrow has fallen upon our foreman, William Harding, we tender to him in his affliction our earnest and heartfelt sympathy in the loss he has sustained, and assure him of the constant and unswerving affection of us, his comrades.

Resolved, That the Secretary of this company be instructed to present a copy of this preamble and resolutions to our foreman; that the same be entered in full upon its minutes, and be published in THE CONSTITUTIONALIST of the city of Plainfield.
